ADMINISTRATION

DR. JIM SANDFORT

Walking in the front door of SM East, students are met with a smile and a cheerful greeting from Dr. Jim Sandfort, the principal. "He makes the atmosphere more informal because he knows almost everyone by name," explained junior Jennifer Strauss. If he could change one thing about East, Sandfort would like to have every student feel successful. He finds it disappointing when some people don't care enough about what they are doing and show a lack of concern towards others. He wants everyone to have the opportunity to develop to the best of his ability. Sandfort hopes someday to be the superintendent of a school district so that he can have a "greater impact on the direction of administration."

DR. JOHN BURKE

Dr. John Burke leads a busy life. When he is not acting as assistant principal here at SM East, he is occupied with a variety of pursuits. He participated in the Air Force Reserves, having spent seven years of active duty stationed in Topeka, Puerto Rico, and Vietnam. He also lifts weights and jogs. "It helps me unwind from the stress and pressures of my job," he explained. He collects World War II military patches and political campaign buttons dating back to the election of 1896. He also maintains a small professional picture framing business; he hopes to get enough framed eventually to fill his entire office wall.

DR. ART NEWCOMER

You've seen him at pep assemblies; you've heard his voice over the intercom — but do you really know Dr. Art Newcomer? Did you know, for instance, that this was his 24th year as a member of the SM East faculty? Three of those years were spent coaching basketball and football and teaching social science. For the last 21 years he has been associate principal and athletic director. "I feel that my greatest contribution to East has been the continual improvement of the school facilities," he said. The office renovation project is just one example of the many areas at East that Dr. Newcomer has helped to improve.

DR. SHEILA SIGMAN

She is responsible for more kids than the old woman that lived in the shoe. Dr. Sheila Sigman, assistant principal, is in charge of knowing the whereabouts of 1,460 students every day. Sigman, who graduated from the University of Kansas, chose school administration for her doctorate because at the time there were no women in the field. She thinks that it is important for students to have a female perspective in the administration. She enjoys her job at SM East because it involves a variety of people and activities. She is responsible for attendance, one-third of all discipline and all clubs.

FACULTY

MARVELENE BEATTY

In a "quiet little office," Marvelene Beatty worked at keeping SM East's books up-to-date. She has been the bookkeeper at East for four years and loves working with figures. Her duties include collecting fee payments and monitoring activity budgets. Beatty, who is a certified church business administrator, has also worked as an accountant in the advertising field. She has five children, one of whom is active in the Special Olympics. She also enjoys square dancing, live theater and "just going out." As an accountant, Beatty likes the "versatility of the job" and the "new challenges faced everyday."

JEAN ERICSON

Jean Ericson has been the principal's secretary at SM East for twelve years. In her spare time she writes letters and reads. She also enjoys traveling and spends some time during the summer visiting new places. She is interested in the metaphysical and is active in the Unity Church. She grew up in Chicago but chose to live in Kansas City because "the people are nice and friendly here." After retirement, Ericson hopes to work in an adult literacy training program. She hopes to continue to do some personal growing: "No one is too old to change." Her goal is to be "an interesting old lady."

TERI FLANAGAN

Teri Flanagan's time is never wasted. Amid the ringing of telephones, the shuffling of papers, and the questions and demands from the students and faculty, Flanagan works coolly and efficiently, filing and organizing the paper work of each day. For four years, Flanagan has been the secretary for the counselors at SM East. She also has two sons: Damon, 15, and Brian, 12, so she is able to relate well to the students. In Flanagan's spare time, she knits, sews, and runs her kids around. What keeps her going? "I really like to work with kids."

MARY KAY HAYS

Who is that mystery lady attempting to work her way out of a mound of paper work? Mary Kay Hays is in charge of the student records at SM East; officially she is known as the registrar. Hays, along with the rest of the office staff, works June and July in addition to the rest of the school year. Besides working, Hays belongs to a square dancing club, and she also spends time visiting her three children and five grandchildren. Having once worked in an elementary school, Hays commented, "It's always fun to watch the kids as they grow and change."

PATTY ISEMAN

"You have been assigned an in-school suspension" — dreaded words that fill every student with terror. But for Patty Iseman suspension is an everyday occurrence. (Iseman was in charge of students who had in-school suspensions; she also worked in the office.) Iseman has been a member of the staff at SM East for two years. During her spare time, she enjoys reading, knitting, and dining out. When asked her opinion of the kids who were assigned suspensions, she replied, "Oh, they're not really trouble-makers; eighty percent of them are in just for attendance problems."

JONI KIMSEY

Joni Kimsey flashed her ever-present smile and declared, "What can I tell you — I work for the best people, in the best school, in the best district." It's obvious that working for Dr. Newcomer has had its effects. Although Kimsey has not worked here long, she has been involved as a parent because her two sons graduated from SM East. Being a sports fan has made Kimsey's job more enjoyable since she is in charge of eligibility lists for athletics. In addition to this, she puts out the Lancer Newsletter. Dr. Burke declared, "Joni Kimsey is an irreplaceable part of our staff."

LINDA KREBS

To many at SM East she has become a second mom. Linda Krebs, receptionist, enjoys being able to spend time with students without having to be a disciplinarian. She takes the time to really get to know people and keeps in touch with many East graduates. Krebs, who has two grown children, also works for ERA Realty in the evenings. When she can find some spare time, she loves to dine at nice restaurants and read. But most of all this girl just wants to have fun. She loves life and people.

GLORIA MCGEE

Although Gloria McGee may not know whether you have been good or bad, she does know how to acquire your school records. By pressing a few keys, McGee can gain access to any student's current record at SM East. Besides keeping track of all student information, she schedules new students. Next year, McGee plans to enter about 500 new students as a result of the switch to a four-year high school. Maybe time consuming, but McGee enjoys working with the staff, counselors, and students. When McGee is not filling students in their respective places, she is at home, curled up on the couch with her dog watching a good t.v. program.

OFFICE STAFF

TERI BOYD

Each morning before school, students could often see Teri Boyd, attendance center, behind 20 or 30 frantic students lined up outside the attendance center. After school, they might have seen her keeping in shape, walking the park course behind Shawnee Mission Medical Center. During the summer, Boyd strictly takes it easy in the sun by the pool, but she also likes to travel. She has gone to the Bahamas and recently returned from a trip to Arizona, where she hopes to live eventually. "Where else can you find snow only twenty minutes away in the mountains and also swim in your backyard?"

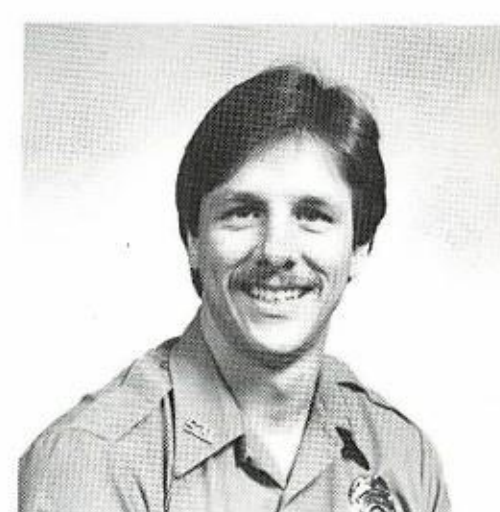

BARBARA HILL

After working for four years in the attendance center, Barbara Hill finds her job very rewarding. She said she was never bored because there was always something new happening either with the school or the students. She likes to bowl, read, and has recently taken up knitting. Hill has been involved in a learning program called "Reach Out," which consists of taking a group of people to the Jackson County jail for a tour to listen to the inmates speak about why they are there. "It's something everyone should do because it makes you think twice before doing something wrong."

MARY DORN

"The bubbly personality of Mrs. Dorn, shines through as she bustles in and out of her office," described junior Julia Langworthy. What made Mary Dorn decide to become a school nurse? "One day I was driving by the school and I wondered if they needed a nurse. I went in to see and was hired the same day," she explained. That was 20 years ago. She says she stuck with the job because she loves teenagers. In her spare time, Dorn collects medieval coins. After retirement, she hopes to pursue her interest in quilting, and she hopes to travel. Ellie Crow, junior, said, "When you need her, she is always there willing to help."

RAY HINTON

Officer Ray Hinton is in his fourth year as SM East's security agent. He said that he enjoys working with East's staff and seeing a large number of people every day, but he dislikes the routine he must face. The job gives him the authority to make arrests when necessary, but mostly, said Hinton, his job consists of parking control. With more students driving to school this year, Hinton had more problems with illegal parking. Still, he said, only a small percent of students hassled him and showed him disrespect. "I'd say around ninety percent are good kids. We get along great." It is likely, Hinton added, that this job will lead to another job in the law enforcement field.

RUDY LOUNDS

Rudy Lounds has always loved children, so it was only natural for her to want to become a teacher. However, she first had to overcome a stuttering problem. Once that was behind her, she obtained her bachelor's in elementary education. Later she was encouraged to pursue special education. She enjoys working with the deaf students at SM East as well as being the Student Council advisor. Although the Student Council requires extra work, Lounds enjoys working with the students and watching them develop as leaders. She also enjoys sewing, wood refinishing, and calligraphy.

MARY PENNE

Mary Penne, commonly seen at assemblies or in many classrooms, had the vital job of interpreting for the hearing impaired students at SM East. Penne enjoys her job, especially her relationships with the students and faculty, and she also enjoys the opportunity to learn while interpreting. Penne divides her time between East and SM West; she spends four hours at East and three hours after school at West interpreting for a vocational class. During her few spare minutes, Penne likes to read, lift weights, refinish furniture, and play with her two cats.

ELAINE SAFFELS

Which SM East faculty member has collected over 100 cookbooks? This person also is the chairperson for the Lutheran Church Caring Ministry for the state of Kansas and sits on the Kansas Insurance Foundation Board. It is Elaine Saffels, a paraprofessional for the hearing impaired, who was the assistant to Trudy Lounds, the teacher for the hearing impaired. Saffels' duties included typing, grading, and working with the hearing impaired under Lounds' supervision. Saffels took classes this year, including a sign class to help her become more proficient with the children. In her spare time, Saffels cooks and "grandparents."

DEAN WILHITE

"Of course I want it today. If I wanted it tomorrow, I would have brought it tomorrow," reads the sign posted above the Xerox machine. Buried under reams of paper, Dean Wilhite was the friendly new face in the audio-visual room this year. He was the new person in charge of the copy machines and audio-visual equipment. Before coming to East, he was manager of an electronic parts warehouse in Lenexa. "I applied at East as a lark. It sounded more exciting than what I was doing," he said. His new job certainly provided excitement. Just take a look in the A-V room seventh hour. To say it was hectic is an understatement. "I try to leave the problems behind when I lock the doors after school. It is the only way to keep my sanity." He relaxes on the weekend by riding his motorcycle and working with electronic equipment.

DEBBIE ATKINSON

Debbie Atkinson juggled her time this year among the SM East population, her husband, and her three young kids. However, despite the demands of her schedule, Atkinson found the time to "hang out with friends and catch concerts," including Huey Lewis last fall. Atkinson's outgoing personality has won her many friendships, including one which has endured since the second grade. On top of her activities as mother, counselor, and SHARE sponsor, Atkinson has plans to author a children's book. As sophomore Emily Carbaugh expressed, "Mrs. Atkinson always has time for others."

HAROLD GERSH

Harold Gersh became a counselor because he cares about people and thinks that communication is important. He enjoys traveling and does so at every available opportunity. He has visited almost every country outside of the Iron Curtain — from India to Tahiti. He has also written about his voyages for the Kansas City Star. He has yet to visit Egypt, and someday he would like to return to New Zealand because of its natural beauty and the friendliness of its people. Comparing students now to when he was a teen, Gersh observed, "Students now are more serious about getting a quality education."

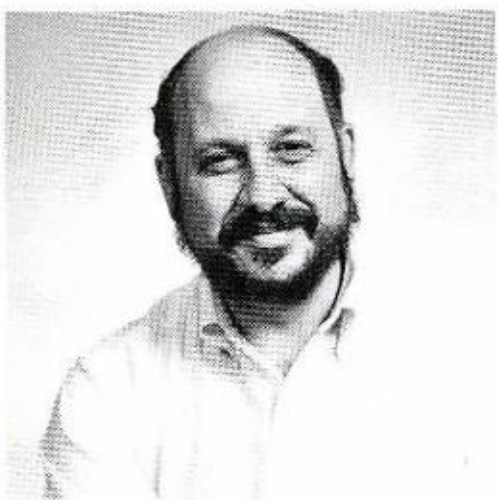

BETTY ANN KELLY

She ballroom dances, gives dinner parties, travels, gardens and takes pictures. Her original photos of the Golden Gate Bridge and a Polynesian ceremonial boat ride hang in her office. One-fifth of the school should recognize this woman, counselor Betty Ann Kelly. Kelly taught for 14 years before becoming a counselor at SM East in 1971. Kelly said, "I feel like I help people in general . . . No day is really the same." She added that while her job is fun and exciting, it can be distressing at times. She emphasized, "I really love the contact with the kids."

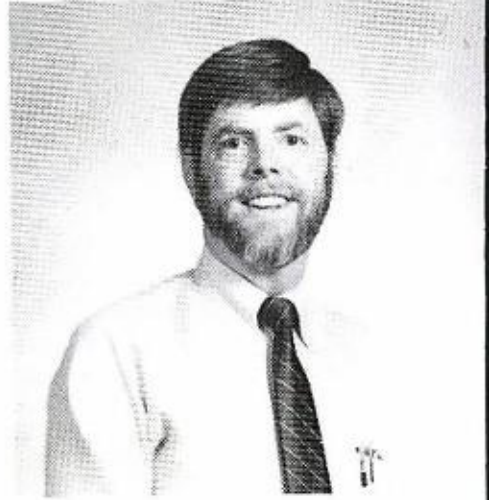

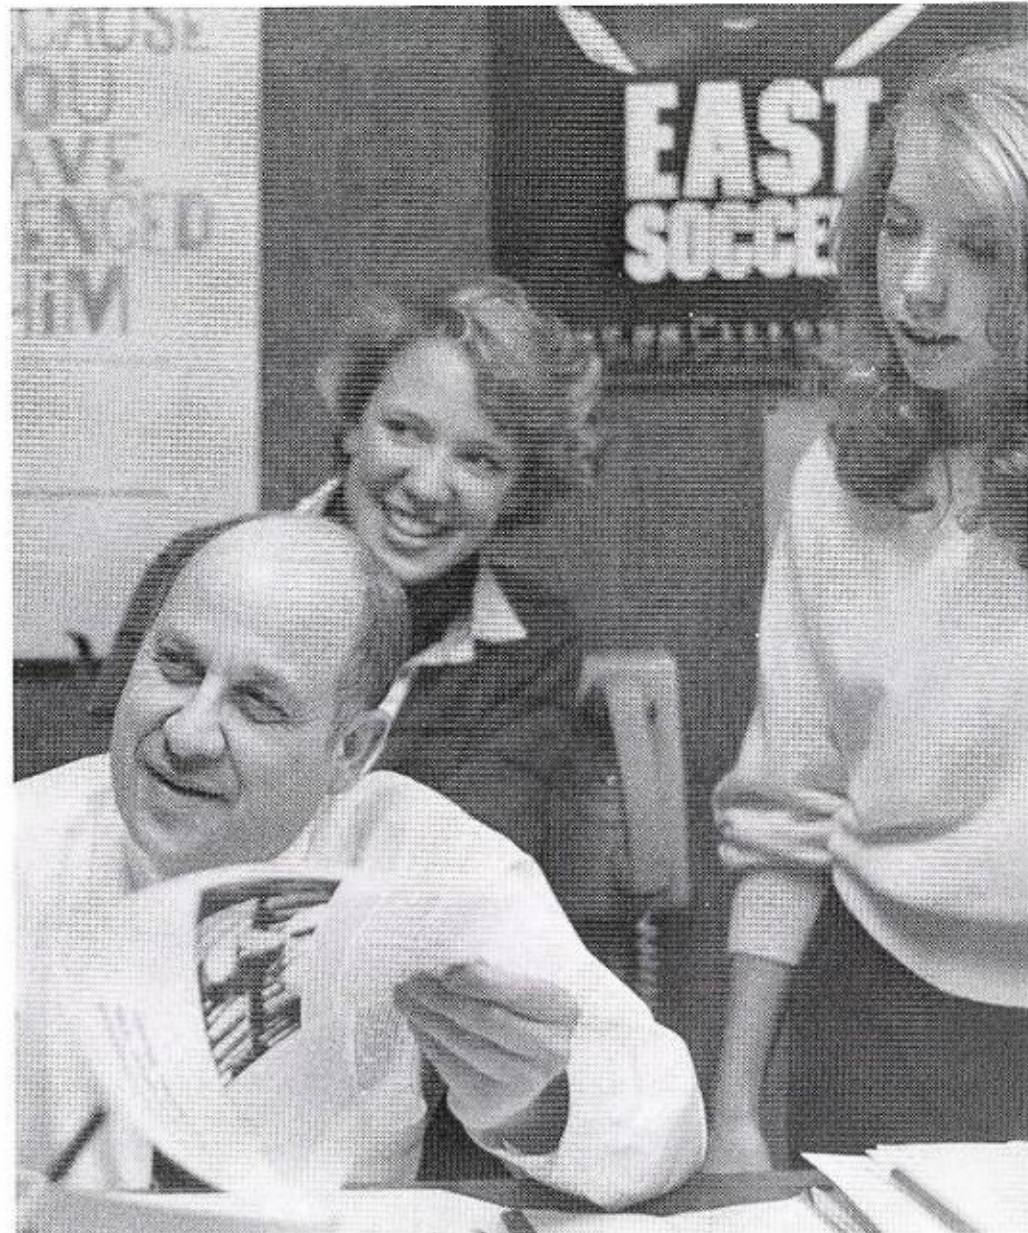

DR. ED KING

Although the sign on his door specifies "T-Z," Dr. Ed King extends himself to a students in need of help. King's twenty years as a counselor, three of which have been at SM East, have taught him what he enjoys best about this job: the students. The transition to a four-year high school interests him: "So many new faces." Besides being a counselor, King performed many other administrative duties, including those of the counselor coordinator and the chairman of the student services division. But it is not all business; even with his hectic schedule, King relaxes by teeing off on the golf course.

DAVID WOLFF

David Wolff not only sponsored Pep Club, Yell Leaders, Trumpeteers, Mascots, and Heralders, but he also still found time to carry out his duties as a counselor as well. Outside the school, Wolff enjoys bicycling, tennis, photography, traveling, and reading mysteries. His favorite television shows include classic mystery thrillers by Alfred Hitchcock and The Twilight Zone. Wolff wanted to relay the following message: "Shawnee Mission East students, you are the best and the brightest, but remember that you need to work hard to retain that reality."

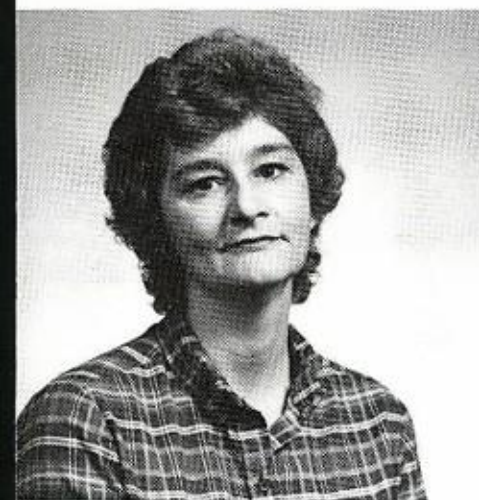

DR. PHIL CHILDRESS

Dr. Phil Childress said admiration for one of his junior high school teachers convinced him that he wanted to become a teacher. This year represented somewhat of a change for Childress. Unlike past years, he taught only one chemistry-related class, and he devoted five hours of his day to the SEEK program. SEEK, Shawnee Mission's "gifted" program, stands for Students Examining and Experiencing Knowledge. Childress claimed that SEEK has given him his greatest reward. He explained, "I like to link talented kids with people on the outside who share their talent."

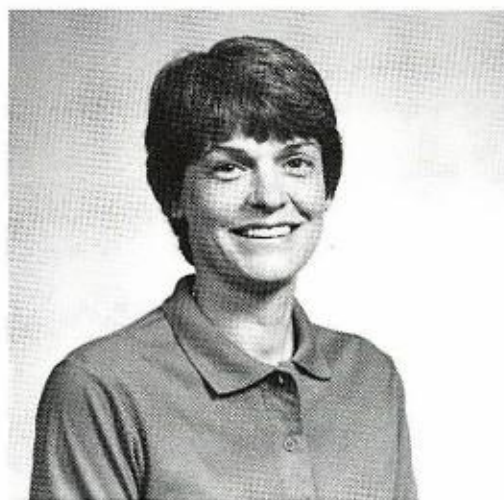

COUNSELORS

BRENDA STRICKLAND

With a daughter at SM West, there's no way I can put an East or West bumper sticker on my car," joked Brenda Strickland, paraprofessional in the achievement center. With her spare time, she loves to read "anything and everything" and emphasized, "Nothing interferes with Hill Street Blues!" Strickland is originally from Savannah, Georgia, where she was a realtor for ten years. She said, "I get tired of people teasing me about my accent." About fellow statesman Jimmy Carter becoming President, Strickland claimed, "It was the biggest shock that anyone from Georgia could be President." However, she also made her political opinion clear: "Reagan is my man!"

LOIS TORMOHLEN

Lois Tormohlen, who grew up in St. Louis, Missouri, was active in school and enjoyed learning. After high school, she attended college and business school and worked as a secretary for three years. She then took time off to have two children. Later, she resumed her education; after attending many colleges, she graduated from the University of Nebraska. Tormohlen has worked in the achievement center at SM East for four years. In her spare time, she likes to refinish furniture, hang wallpaper, sew, and work on her house. She also loves to read; John Updike is her favorite author.

MARGARET HODGES

As the time for choosing a college and a career draws closer, many students flock to the career center for help. Margaret Hodges is the secretary in the center, and she is always on hand to help aid students in finding information. Hodges enjoys working with the kids on this informal basis; as she points out, "I feel a sense of accomplishment when they find the right school." Senior Matt Sheffield summed up many of the students' feelings when he said, "She is really cool, and she always knows what's going on and how things are going. I just like to go to talk with her."

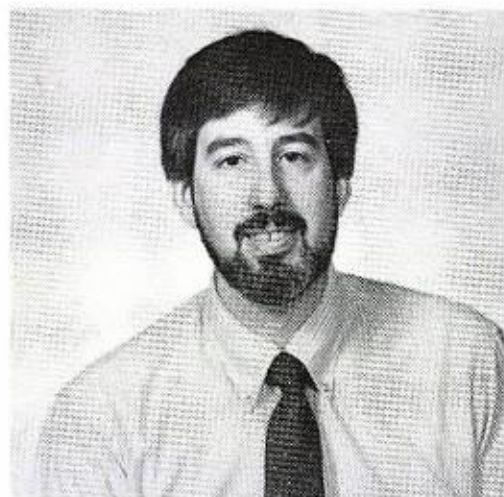

ANN SCHENEWERK

If a question arises on colleges, careers, or jobs, Ann Schenewerk is the counselor to see. Schenewerk has been a career counselor for nine years. She was a regular counselor until she decided that she wanted to get to know all the students rather than just those in her segment of the alphabet. Schenewerk enjoys helping students find the colleges and majors which "suit them as people and their future careers." She believes that "there is some place right for everybody. A choice should fit that person instead of the other way around." Schenewerk has four children and four grandchildren; she insists that she could never work alone without people and questions.

ETHEL McDOWELL

"An abundance of patience and understanding is very important," said Ethel McDowell from the learning center. For many years she was a consultant for the physically handicapped, and this year she assisted East's facilities for the disabled and impaired by teaching study habits. At the time, she taught required classes, including English, for Vietnamese refugees. She watched kids "whose country made them natural enemies become the best of friends." She has shared her home with many and even adopted a boy from Thailand who is now working on his master's at Kansas University.

CLEM ROGERS

It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood, Mr. Roger's neighborhood that is. Clem Rogers, who graduated from the University of Kansas with a master's in education, taught special education classes in the Learning Center. He chose teaching as a profession because he wanted to help other people. However, he thinks the lack of appreciation teachers receive is unfortunate. He believes that more support from parents and community members is necessary to strengthen the educational system. He thinks one of the most enjoyable aspects of teaching is working with students who have enthusiasm and a willingness to learn.

BARBARA WHITE

As jack-of-all-trades in the Learning Center, Barbara White worked with students, graded papers, did most of the typing and all of the remaining paper work. She began her career as an aide eight years ago while her children were still in school. Because she could be home on holidays and during the summer, this seemed like the ideal job. She enjoys traveling and hand work such as embroidery. She has seen much of the United States, and Hawaii is her favorite because it is "peaceful and pretty." As well as traveling, White also enjoys working in the yard and improving her home.

JANET WHITEHEAD

Who has almost every passage of the driver's ed handbook memorized? It is Janet Whitehead, Learning Center teacher. Whitehead explained that her classes are basically study skills classes: "I teach small classes to give individual help to students who have trouble succeeding in regular classes." She taught students English and math while also helping them with work from other classes. Whitehead, who received her master's from Kansas University, has not always been a teacher; she was a psychology technician for the Air Force and worked in the psychiatric unit at Menorah Medical Center. At SM East, she was the assistant sponsor for the forensics and debate teams. Her hobbies include sports, reading, and art.

FACULTY

ANDY ANDERSON

Look for Andy Anderson out on the courts when he is not teaching physics or electronics. During the summer, Anderson coaches tennis at Leawood City Courts and in Colorado. Besides playing tennis, Anderson is interested in almost any outdoor activity: canoeing, camping, skiing, and fishing. Anderson has been a teacher at SM East for 18 years; he claimed, "In teaching, something different happens every day." His wife teaches too, and Anderson appreciates having the same vacations as his family.

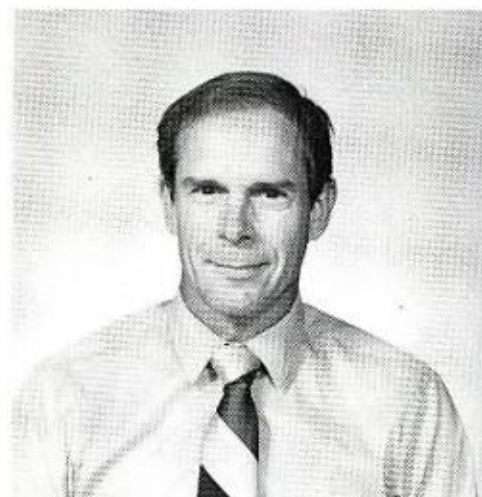

SUZANNE CROFT

Suzanne Croft, chemistry teacher, graduated from Kansas State University with a bachelor's in life science. At K-State, she was vice president of her sorority and took part in many campus activities such as arranging for guest speakers. When she is not hard at work trying to discover the chemical equation for lead nitrate, she enjoys tennis, reading, and quilting. Croft feels that patience and enthusiasm are two of the most important aspects of teaching. She tries to maintain a positive atmosphere in the classroom in order to develop a student's self-concept.

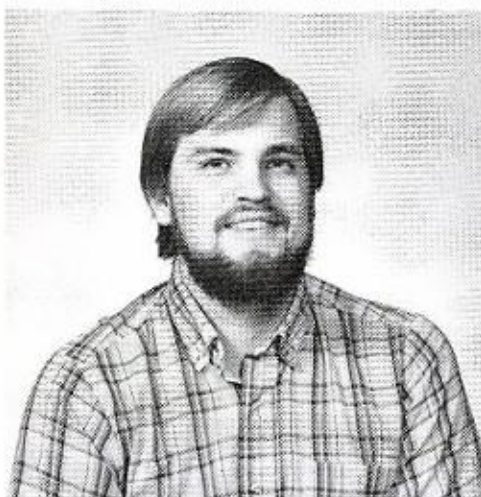

RICK GOULD

Rick Gould has watched the graduation of 17 classes from SM East, including his own. He is one of three teachers here who graduated from East. As a student, he played football under Coach Englund and took Biology I in the same room where he now teaches Biology I and II. He has seen many changes occur at East, such as the installation of the pool and the introduction of girls' sports. He also remembers when enrollment was over 2,200 and there were five lunch periods. Gould enjoys teaching; his third career choice next to secret agent and astronaut.

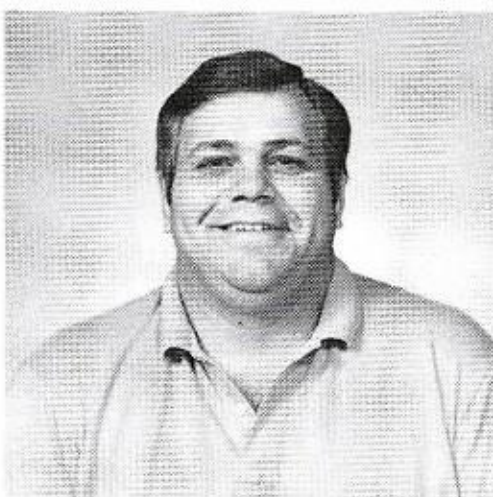

JOHN HARAUGHTY

"He gave me the incentive for achievement. He didn't talk a lot. He just stood there and smiled at us," reflected Diane Bliss in speaking of John Haraughty. Haraughty loves coaching girls' cross country and track because "it is rewarding to see kids build confidence in themselves." He also added that he enjoys getting to know the kids that he coaches and teaches. This year Haraughty taught Biology I and student naturalists. Outside of school, his interests include camping, reading, and running. Haraughty obtained his bachelor's from Oklahoma State University and his master's from Emporia State.

THOMAS HEINTZ

Along with the rest of the biology department, Thomas Heintz is "into" having fun. When he is not teaching biology, Heintz enjoys watching as people stop in front of the mirror-like biology office window to examine their hair, make-up, and acne. During his free time Heintz likes to fish and hunt, and often "Big Chuck," his springer spaniel, goes along. Heintz really enjoys teaching and getting to talk about what he is interested in. As Heintz spoke more about teaching, his feelings for kids came out: "Kids are more interesting than people my age; they're more spontaneous."

ROBERT JAMES

Which faculty member might be found wearing a loin cloth and fending for himself in the middle of the woods? It is Bob James: primitive camper, biology teacher, and track coach. James loves fishing and canoeing, but teaching is just as much an adventure to him as the outdoors. Smiling, he stated, "I'm still young at heart. I wish I were still in high school ... but I suppose I am, in a way." He added that the rewards in teaching are many: "There is a satisfaction in kids returning and telling me that I really helped." James went to Ottawa University and then to Emporia State where he received his master's degree.

STAN MOORE

Kyle Latinis, senior, described him as "the master of grooviness." Lisa Kessler claimed, "He's energetic, fun, and easy to understand." Stan Moore taught chemistry and biology this year, his enthusiasm stemming from his fascination with science. He also sponsored the bike club. During his spare time, Moore likes to play his guitar and draw. As a child, Moore spoke Spanish before learning English, and he claimed that he just pretended to understand English throughout grade school. When questioned about this, Moore jokingly replied, "Oh, I still pretend to understand English now!"

TREVOR THORLEY

SM East welcomed a new personality to its teaching staff. An English accent and strong resemblance to Sting characterized Trevor Thorley, the exchange teacher from Bristol, England. Thorley, who received his degree in chemistry, began his career by selling chemicals to different companies in Manchester, England. Although he was well paid, he hated the job. Because he liked people, he decided to try teaching. In his spare time, Thorley enjoys playing soccer, swimming, and socializing. He is also East's assistant soccer coach. As junior Brenden Beattie said, "He's pretty cool." Greek beaches are Thorley's favorite vacation spots. "I like sun, water, and beer," he explained.

SCIENCE

A Jolly Good Bloke

by Laura Breneman

"Americans are so loud!" exclaimed Trevor Thorley. "In England, we would never yell from one end of the hall to the other." This is only one of the many differences he noticed upon arrival in America.

From Bristol, England, Thorley came to SM East as a participant in the Fulbright Exchange Program. He has replaced John Burkholder, Chemistry 1 teacher, who is now teaching Thorley's classes in Bristol.

Teaching in an American school was a big change for Thorley. The English school system, unlike our own, is not based on grades. Rather, students work at their own levels to prepare for an exam which tests more than two years' worth of knowledge. "Sometimes, in the same class, we'll have students who can barely add with ones doing advanced calculus." However, only 5-10% pass this exam and continue their education at a university.

Which school system is better? According to Thorley, they both have their pros and cons. "The atmosphere is more pleasant here, and I think Americans are easier to teach." However, "in Britain, schools are more advanced, and I get more feedback from my better students. The grading system, I think, hinders some students' desire to learn, but for others, it's necessary as an incentive."

Thorley found America much more pleasant and laid back than England. However, the size and the wealth amazed him. He found it hard to believe that so many students had their own cars. "I guess you'd need one, though, because everything is so far away from everything else."

Remembering his first impression of Kansas City, Thorley laughed and looked a bit sheepish as he explained, "I'd been in town for about three days, and I had to go to the bank or something. So Mr. Rees took me downtown, and I thought to myself, 'Oh, crikey! Where have I come to?'" However, after seeing more of Kansas City, his views changed for the better. "I discovered the Plaza and Westport. That's how I thought downtown KC would be. It's a bit like Bristol."

Instead of returning to England to teach, Thorley would like to go abroad once again. "I don't like going back. I need someplace new to inspire me. Maybe Hong Kong next!"

FACULTY

LARRY DEARING

While in the Navy, Larry Dearing was stationed in Cuba, where he was introduced to Spanish, and Haiti, where he first heard French. This year he introduced students at SM East to the two languages. Besides his travel experiences with the Navy, he has been to Canada, Mexico, and Costa Rica. He plans to go to England this summer and hopes to visit France next year. Given the opportunity to do anything, Dearing expressed a desire to go to Rio de Janeiro for the carnival. When he is not teaching or traveling, he likes to get together with friends.

HARRIET DUNN

Walking past room 214, one can hear the sounds of students reciting their French lessons. Harriet Dunn, who originally took Spanish in high school, found it easy as well as interesting and was inspired to pursue a career in foreign languages. She has taught both languages, but for the past seven years she has concentrated mostly on French. Dunn, who enjoys traveling and has been to France four times, believes traveling is a good experience for everyone. She said, "Most teachers want to join the administration someday; I don't. I like teaching and hope to continue here at East."

JOYCE FINLAY

"When she gets mad, she still smiles," stated Sherry Thomas, senior. She is talking about Joyce Finlay, Spanish I and French I teacher. Agreeing with the majority of the students, she thought that five minutes between classes is not sufficient: "It's a challenge getting from 218 to study hall in time because of traffic jams in the halls." Finlay said that she likes teaching the older students, (sorry sophs). Finlay went to the University of Tulsa for her bachelor's and to Purdue for her master's. She also studied French for a semester at the Sorbonne in Paris. For entertainment, she plays the piano and the organ, jogs, and boats with her husband.

JOEL NAGEL

Joel Nagel is one of 25 teachers in the United States who went to Germany last year as part of the Fulbright Teacher Exchange. He became interested in Germany during high school and studied for two years in Europe at the Universities of Bonn and Zurich. Last year he taught at "gymnasium," no relation to athletics where the top 25% of the "elite" students can attend. A major contrast he saw in Germany was the different intensity in education; this became apparent when students were excited about a "B" on his first test. While overseas, he rode a bicycle everywhere and did not use a car once.

MARALIN NOBLE

Maralin Noble departed from her town of Corn, Oklahoma (population 400), following her twelve-student high school graduation. She came from a wheat farm to the wheat state, fearing that she was destined to be a Spanish teacher for the "Indians" at SM East. Now married, the Nobles reside "just across the creek" from her grandson, Ryan. Their many-acre lot, complete with horses, allows Noble the space for her passion of landscaping. A post-retirement goal for the Nobles is to establish a country inn.

NORA PINKSTON

Nora Pinkston said that teaching Spanish in the United States was the farthest thing from her mind when she was growing up in Peru. But that is exactly what Pinkston has been doing for the last 18 years. "I've had so many memorable experiences," said Pinkston. For example, a few years ago she took a group of students to Mexico. "They got so involved interacting with a group of Mexicans at a dance that they didn't want to leave." This emphasizes a point that she tries to convey to her students: "People might speak differently or look different, but inside we're all the same."

CHRISTINA RZEPczyk

Escaping the contrasting memories of comfortable European childhood and the of a war-torn Europe, Chris Rzepczyk encountered the United States with her parents. In the parochial school she attended, Rzepczyk experienced the melting pot phenomenon since the majority of her classmates were also foreign born. SM East's French teacher sharpened her linguistic background by tutoring immigrants and by studying in France and Mexico. Senior Kristin Stonekin said, "Madame Rzepczyk is a colorful example of diverse cultures."

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

"Guten Tag"

by Judy Skaptason

1984. Orwell's year. The year most feared as the time of oppression and suspicion. Yet at SM East, the year was hailed as a time to exchange cultural differences between two foreign countries: Germany and the United States.

Through the Fulbright Exchange program, 25 teachers, including German teacher Joel Nagel, were chosen to teach in the German school system. Each American teacher had a German "counterpart" who in turn taught in the United States. Gerhard Schwabe taught German at East and learned about America; Nagel replaced Schwabe in Hamburg.

While in Germany, Nagel learned that only the top 25% of the fourth grade class is allowed to proceed to the "gymnasium," (the fifth to thirteenth grades for "academic preparation") where courses similar to college preparatory classes are taught. The other students go on to learn a particular trade in a trade school. At the end of the thirteenth grade, the students take an examination called the "das Abitur" in order to graduate to college.

Although the classes are only for 23 hours a week, German students are prepared to make each day successful. Nagel explained, "German students are used to getting oral grades which are one-half of the total grade; therefore, the students must participate." Furthermore, unlike American schools, where the teachers mainly lecture, in Germany more interaction occurs between the students. German teachers merely "direct the students' discussions."

Because the teachers move between classes, Nagel said that teachers are treated more as "guests." Generally he found that German teachers grade more severely and rather arbitrarily because they are less obligated to provide a full explanation for the grades given. As a result, students are more challenging because they are "not necessarily as ready to accept the teacher as a friend."

All in all, in response to whether or not he enjoyed Germany, Nagel grinned and replied, "It was the best year of my life!"

JUDY BARNES

Judy Barnes is a person who has always known what she wanted to do with her life. She has always wanted to teach, and she has never regretted her decision. Barnes hopes she can help each student master the English language and prepare himself for college. In her spare time, Barnes enjoys traveling around the country (she has seen all fifty states), and she is currently writing a novel. When asked about her job, Barnes replied, "Watching students learn and getting the chance to help them write is the best part. I love the kids; you can never get old in school."

BILL BOLEY

Who keeps his three dogs in line by threatening to read them T.S. Eliot's poem Cats? Who else but Bill Boley, junior honors English teacher. Boley, who has been teaching for 13 years, graduated from Pittsburg State with a master's in English. In college he enjoyed running and playing baseball; after college he spent several years in the U.S. Army and achieved the rank of First Lieutenant. Today he enjoys coaching East's girls' track team and playing softball. Boley, who enjoys teaching literature, explained, "I like Thomas Hardy because I like his style and agree with his pessimism."

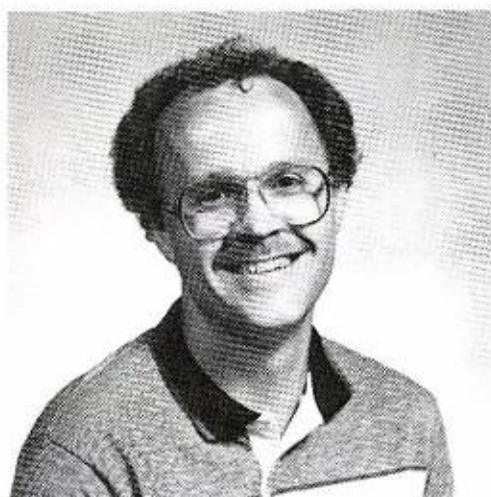

FAYDELLE COLLINS

Oklahoma born and bred, Faydelle Collins retains memories of an almost-forgotten rural upbringing. Her father taught in a one-room school house "with a big potbellied stove in the corner." Other remnants of her youth include the first airplane she ever saw, one with cloth wings; and box-suppers, a fund-raising tradition of auctioning off a girl's best home-baked goodies to her beau and then sharing the meal with him. It is from these small town beginnings that Collins would venture to Shanghai, China, where she was an English teacher at a local university. An avid traveler, Collins plans to retire to Italy, where she has traveled extensively.

SANDY CORMACK

"Those who dare to teach never cease to learn," professed English teacher Sandy Cormack. Cormack is not the only teacher in the family, however; her spouse has also taught within the district for several years. A voracious reader, Cormack revealed that her personal literary favorites were Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina and Herman Wouk's The Winds of War. She also admitted to being a fan of Sydney Sheldon. At home, her two-year-old daughter, Kayte, and her "schnoodle" Jan, command most of her attention.

RUSS KOKORUDA

To Russ Kokoruda, sophomore English teacher, boys' basketball coach, and assistant football coach, teaching has been just what he expected it to be. That is not to say that he doesn't enjoy it — he says he does. He said that he likes teaching high school students because of the variety of opinions, attitudes, and desires which are characteristic of that age. He described himself as "intellectually stimulating, caring, open." His students seem to agree. Said Hampton Stevens, senior, "He teaches you more than just English." Kokoruda transferred to East from SM North four years ago and said that East students differ from North's in that they are more concerned about grades.

EVERETT REES

Does "mendicant" ('men-di-kənt adj.) sound familiar? By the end of a school year with Everett Rees, a student will think "mendicant" is as common as the word "cat." Rees has taught English for 23 years and senior advanced placement English for the last four years. Besides teaching, Rees sponsored Categories, coached the soccer team, and sponsored the senior class. During summer vacation Rees reads, enjoys music, and plays bridge, in addition to traveling around the world. He particularly enjoys visiting relatives in Wales.

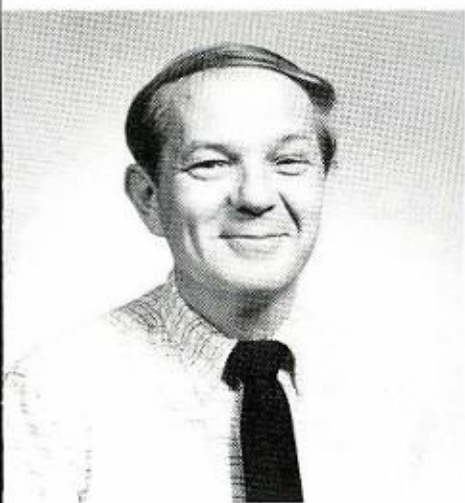

DONNA SKATES

A dog named Macduff and a cat named T.S. Eliot — who else could have chosen such literary names for pets other than Donna Skates, sometimes known as "Skatespeare." She has taught English for four years and has just finished her master's in English literature. Although this was Skates' first year at SM East, she taught junior English and also tackled the job of yearbook sponsor. Skates enjoyed working with the students and learning all the ins-and-outs of the Hauberk. In addition to teaching and sponsoring the yearbook, Skates gardens and goes to the Lake of the Ozarks. With her green thumb stuck in Hamlet and page lay-outs, Skates claimed with a grin, "Shakespeare drove me to it!"

SUE STONEFIELD

Although she has taught at all levels from elementary to college, Sue Stonefield "always thought East was best." She added that she enjoys teaching in high school because there "the kids really want to read." During her first year at SM East, Stonefield taught English 11, reading, and a writer's workshop while also sponsoring the PRE program. Even though Stonefield reads a variety of books, she claims that her favorite author is still Hemingway. In her spare time, Stonefield swims, goes to movies, needlepoints, and of course reads.

ROBERT DILLON

How does Dillon handle the pressure of a newspaper? He chuckled, "Well, you lose little hair." Dillon taught Journalism I, II, and III as well as English 10 honors this year. He also sponsored the Harbinger Quill and Scroll literary honor society. He enjoys swimming, traveling, and reading. An incurable romantic, he named Lost Horizons as his favorite book. Dillon's favorite line, known by all Journalism students, is: "Talk is Cheap!" He emphasized, "I want to see action not promises."

LOIS DUNN

Who would have thought that fashion promotion copywriting would lead to a career teaching sophomore English? It happened to Lois Dunn, who has been at SM East for 20 years. She enjoys reading, sewing, and gardening and is the proud owner of a new car and home. Dunn enjoys traveling; on one of her trips, she went to Scandinavia with her sister to trace their ancestry. She has had many family ties at East and has watched nieces and nephews graduate from here. She taught one semester next door to her sister-in-law and this year had a grandnephew to "keep an eye on."

CAROLYN DUNSETH

Yes, it's true. Carolyn Dunseth does have a picture of Tom Selleck in a bathing suit on the door of her closet. The poster has an interesting story behind it. A student in one of her junior English classes gave it to her because he thought that she seemed depressed. This may seem strange because, as she said, "Most people describe me as an enthusiast. I love meeting free spirits and trying new things." For instance, this summer she went scuba diving in the Grand Caymen Islands, and because of this, she is now chairman of the committee to have an aquarium built in the Kansas City area.

SKIP GRAHAM

Richard "Skip" Graham not only taught junior English at SM East this year but also taught classes two nights a week at Longview College. In his teaching he strives to make his students "learn to question everything." Senior Chris Carney remarked, "Grambo always keeps a cool head." In addition to his master's in English, Graham has 15 hours of seminary and hopes to continue his study in the future. When asked about his goals, Graham said he would love to travel to England and Scotland, but he basically considers himself "a real homebody" and loves family time.

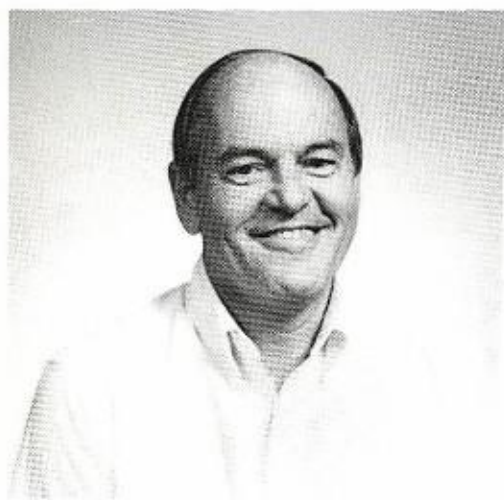

LINDA THOMSON

Linda Thomson, sophomore honors English teacher, believes that being active in school activities is an important part of teaching. During her 16 years at SM East, Thomson has sponsored the senior class, yearbook, and cheerleading. In her spare time she enjoys reading and cooking. She can often be seen driving in her Mustang convertible named Ruby. However, Thomson, who dislikes wind, refuses to leave the top down. She likes teaching American literature because she thinks it helps us to understand our country better.

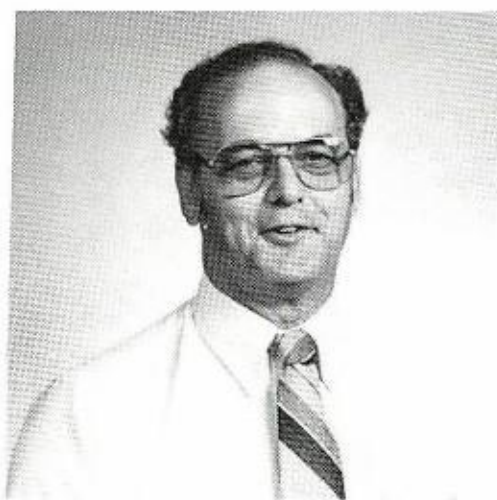

FACULTY

PHIL BERG

Phil Berg, head of the math department taught trigonometry, geometry, and algebra this year. Outside the classroom, Berg enjoys playing tennis and buying and selling sports memorabilia. Berg teaches tennis during the summer at Round Hill. He received his master's in math from Pittsburgh and did graduate work at Yale and Kansas University. Berg stated, "Students should put their money where their values are." Berg has also entered into the mail order business with his baseball cards and enjoys going to sport collectors' conventions. Berg has always wanted to become king of the world.

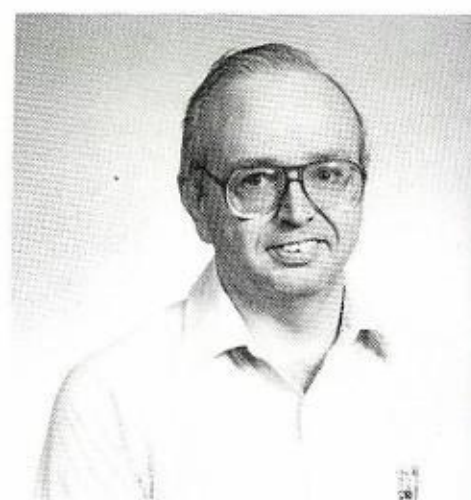

GEORGE BLOMSTER

Describing himself as "shy and bashful," George Blomster quietly revealed his personality. This was his ninth year at SM East teaching math and computer science and coaching football. Blomster grew up in Kansas City and attended Rockhurst College. When he is not teaching or coaching, he enjoys sailing and playing poker. Someday he would like to sail around the world, or at least to the Bahamas. He likes animals "if someone else owns them." Comparing students now to when he was in school, Blomster said, "They're not as hard working as we used to be, but then there are more distractions."

DERALD BOLINE

Having graduated from a high school with a senior class consisting of nine students, Boline had to adjust to the larger number of students at SM East. This year Boline taught three computer classes: Basic I, Pascal, and advanced computer science. However, he did not limit himself entirely to the computer craze; he also taught trigonometry and Algebra 2. He enjoys teaching computer classes because students are usually in the class by choice. When Boline looked back over his 20 years at SM East, he decided the biggest change was students' more obvious use of "slang" in the halls.

BERNIE FORD

"It's not so much the grade they get," stated Bernie Ford, "But the effort they put into it." His philosophy is that a student who gives 100 percent and gets a C has accomplished as much as the person who gets an A. This is the main reason Ford became a teacher after graduating from Central Missouri State and he continued teaching for 21 years. This year he taught trigonometry, geometry, and practical geometry. When he is not teaching or involved with school, he keeps busy with church activities and with his family. He also enjoys sports and is an avid fan of the Kansas City Chiefs.

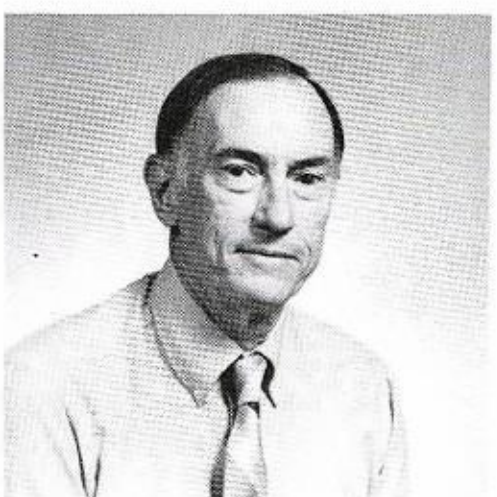

CAROLYN SEELEY

Considering her math students her top priority, Carolyn Seeley devotes after class hours to bewildered geometry scholars. This former school newspaper editor from Columbus Junction, Iowa, was inspired to teach because she "so much enjoyed high school teachers." At home Seeley's time is shared with her sons, Jim and Mike, who excel in all sports from baseball to soccer. She added, "However, my family would not be complete without Ruffles and Fritos, our dog and cat." A future goal of Seeley's is to get her master's degree in education.

CAROLINE STAUFFER

A marriage made at SM East. Yes, Caroline Stauffer, Algebra II teacher, is married to driver's education teacher and golf coach Norris Stauffer. Both of the Stauffers attended Friends University in Wichita where Mrs. Stauffer taught before her son's birth. She returned to teaching six years ago. Mrs. Stauffer doesn't often run into her husband at school because of their different schedules; in fact, they never ride to school together except in winter. In her spare time, Mrs. Stauffer frequents her lake home. Every now and then she even plays a game of golf.

ED STONNER

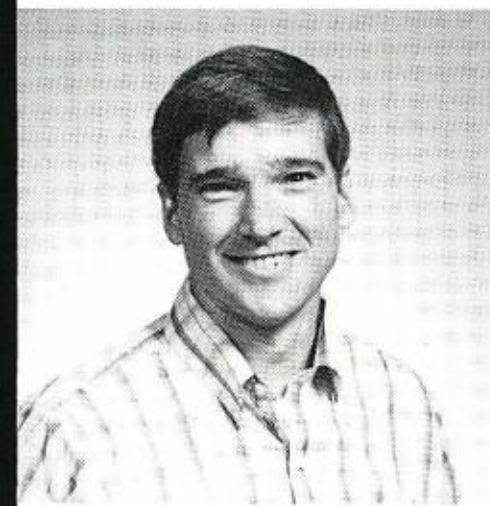

One of the first teachers at SM East the year it opened, Ed Stonner returned to teaching two years ago after a 23-year break. He taught geometry and algebra this year and coached girls' junior varsity basketball and varsity volleyball. He has coached and played volleyball in the past, but this was his first all girl team. Stonner has traveled to Mexico and the Bahamas, and next year he is planning to spend three weeks in Europe with his wife and son. During the summer, Stonner is working on achieving his second master's degree.

BRYCE YORK

A native of Abilene, Kansas, Bryce York has been involved at SM East in many ways for 17 years. He taught algebra, geometry, and applied math this year and in the past has also taught all the speech and drama classes except for debate. He is on the East Area Advisory Board, and since he is a teacher and directly involved in school activities, he believes he aids communication by seeing "the inside story." He enjoys boating, water skiing, playing bridge, and antiquing cars. During his summers, York may be found operating a back hoe for Custom Wheat Harvesting, selling real estate, or managing the Prairie Village tennis courts.

MATHEMATICS

RICK ROYER

You have seen him around, either yelling from the sidelines of a basketball court or scribbling furiously on his chalkboard. This year Rick Royer taught Algebra 2 honors. His continuous smile during lectures tended to make students wonder what he was up to. Royer loves teaching and coaching kids, but he does not let it overwhelm his life. He spends his spare time participating in triathalons and passing out on the bunny slopes of Keystone. Although Royer has had a few embarrassing moments. Brenden Beattie, junior, stated, "He is my vision of a great teacher — intelligent and precise."

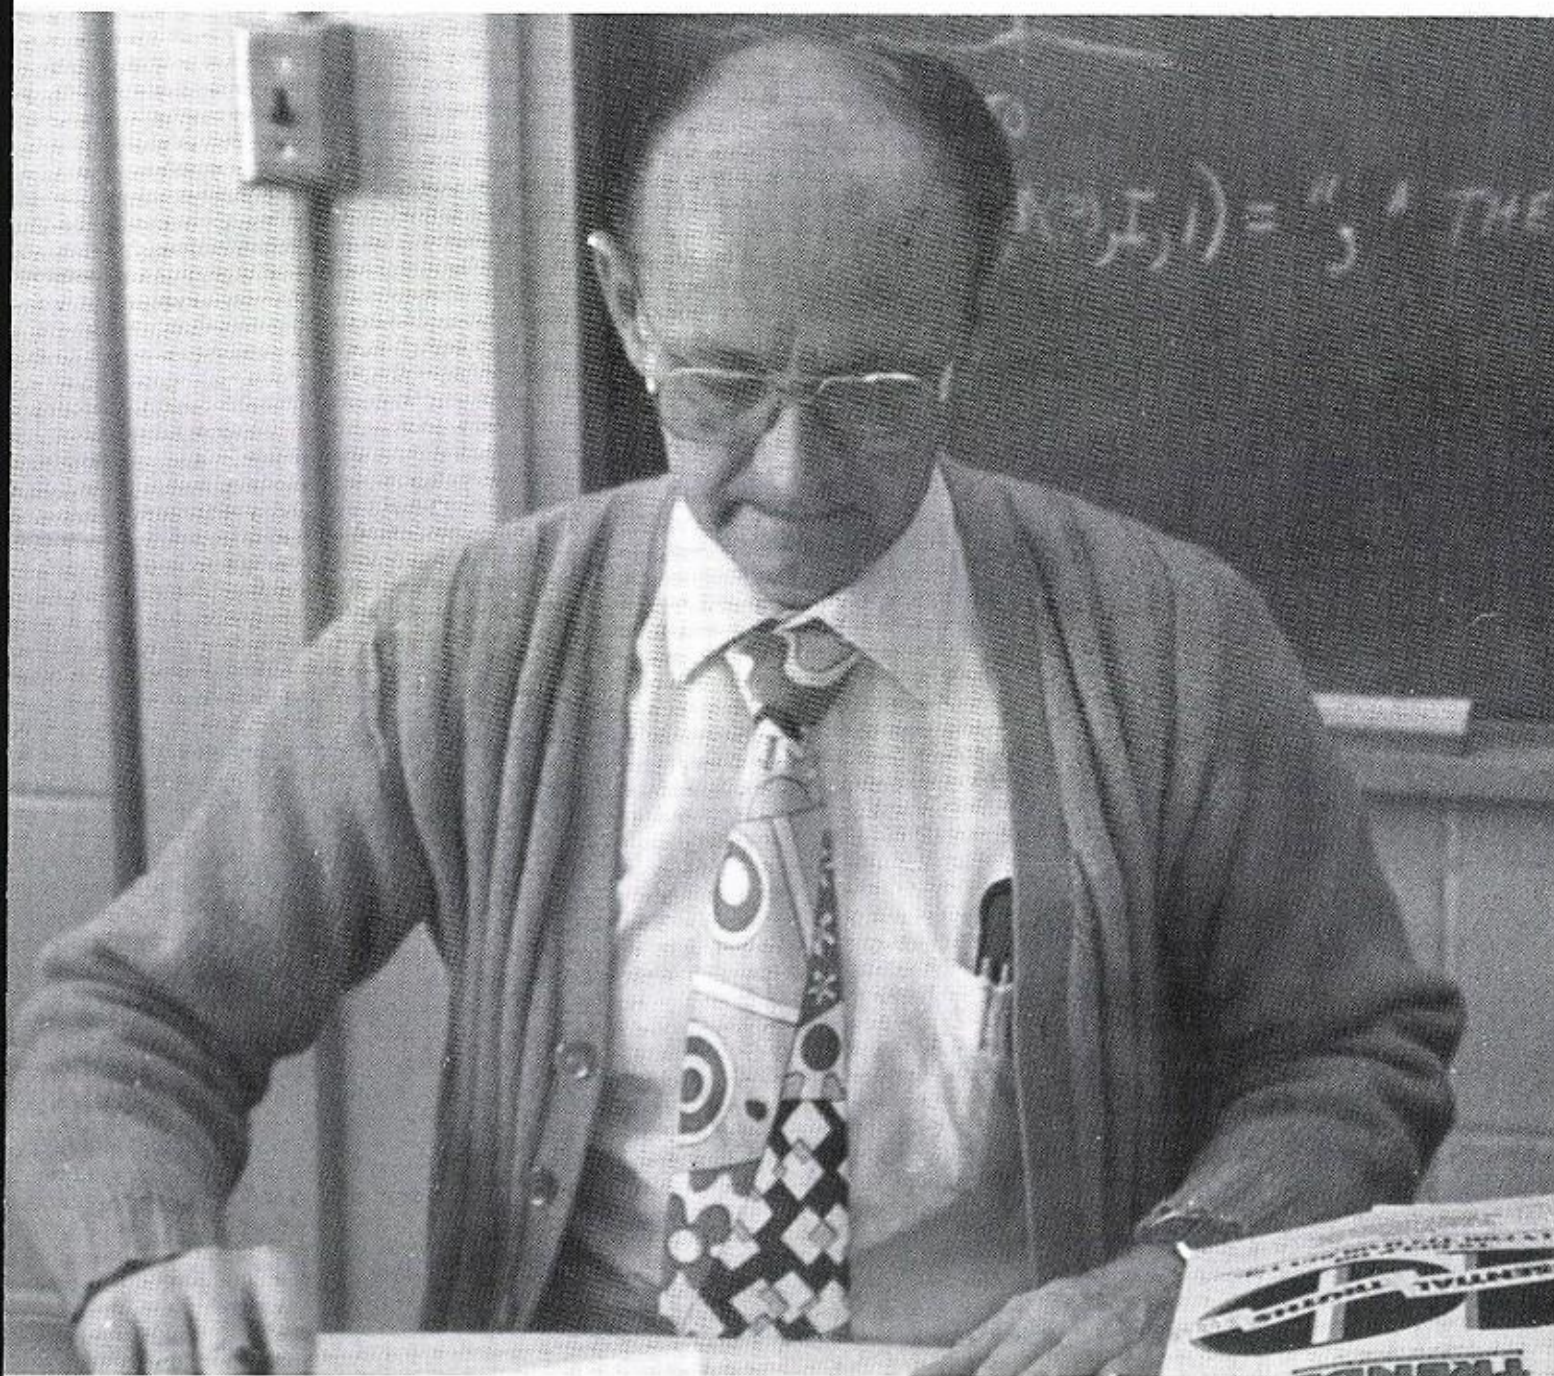

RAY RUNYAN

Just how many ties does Ray Runyan own? Not even he knows the answer to this often-pondered question. Runyan finds the uniqueness of his ties often provides a common ground between his students and himself. This helps him to obtain a good rapport with his students, something that he thinks is important for learning. Runyan, who teaches calculus, Algebra II, and Computer Science Basic I, graduated from Harvard. He enjoys teaching math because it is neat and ordered. He believes math is a subject that can be mastered if a student is willing to learn.

PAUL RUTHERFORD

Who would have thought a degree in mechanical engineering and ten years of Naval experience would have led someone to teach geometry and algebra? Paul Rutherford, joining the SM East faculty this year, enjoys piano, chess, long-distance running and cycling. While stationed in San Francisco as a Navy maintenance officer, he had the chance to visit many places, including Japan, Korea, Southeast Asia, Red China, and the Indian Ocean. These voyages were usually for six months at a time, but he emphasized that each provided "a better knowledge about the world around me."

SUSAN BRANTMAN

Preparing each student to become a potential Picasso, Susan Brantman teaches Art I, oil and acrylic painting, water color, and design. Brantman, who was new to SM East, was previously an elementary art school teacher. "She really know what she is doing ... She's got her head screwed on straight," claimed Jennifer White. Brantman, who studied to be an artist in college, had not always planned to be a teacher. Besides painting and ceramics her interests include gardening and gourmet cooking.

CHUCK CRAWFORD

Chuck Crawford teaches jewelry, ceramics, drawing, art seminar, commercial art, and sculpture. One could picture him teaching a non-art class about as easily as one could picture the Chipmunks having a number one record; he is not interested in teaching anything else. Crawford said it is the "one on one" aspect of teaching art that he enjoys. He said that students have changed much in his seventeen years of teaching. Students of the '80's, Crawford said, are more concerned about having a date Saturday night and not getting gum in their hair than were students of the 70's.

GARY HINES

Gary Hines, native of Emporia, Kansas has always been preoccupied with his hands. SM East's photography teacher has risen from modeling clay and plane kits to collecting cameras and antique cars. Explaining his new-found interests Hines laughed, "My toys have just gotten more expensive." Presently, most of Hines' photography focuses on his wife, son Adam, and fourteen-year-old dachshund, Felix. While vacationing this summer with his family, Hines' photographic eye was delighted with The Black Cauldron at Radio City Music Hall.

CAROLYN HOWARD

"She is dedicated, caring, and I'll never forget her," commented senior Laura Cohen, varsity cheerleader and tennis letterman. She is talking about Carolyn Howard, girls' physical education teacher, girls' tennis coach, and cheerleading sponsor. In her 28 years at SM East, Howard has done everything from being prom sponsor to coaching girls' basketball and various other sports. According to her, "My greatest contribution to East has been improving the school spirit and helping students get involved."

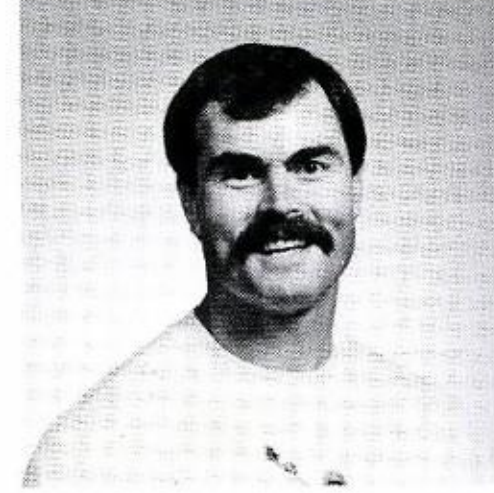

RUSTY NEWMAN

Would you believe that an SM East teacher once led the American Baseball League in strike-outs, wins, and lowest earned run average? Well, maybe not, but Rusty Newman came close. He was drafted by the Boston Red Sox organization after graduating from Central Missouri State University. However, he decided instead to go into the Army. Mr. Newman has a bachelor's and master's degree in physical education, and he became a teacher because he "likes" to see and be a part of the development in students that occurs in high school. This year he taught boys' physical education and coached boys' baseball.

DEBBIE OGDEN

Debbie Ogden, SM East's girls' physical education teacher and sponsor of the Lancerettes Flag Team and Synchronettes Drill Team, is on the go — in school and out. As one may expect, she has an interest in dance and tries to incorporate it into classes as much as possible. In her free time, she dances recreationally, plays softball and racquetball, and bowls. One might find her at Tippen's or Joe's Barn, two of her favorite restaurants. What's the appeal in teaching? The kids. She likes kids and wants to help whenever she can. She plans to continue at East, saying, "I would miss it if I wasn't here."

JOHN REED

Most fifteen-year-old students have little idea about what career they want to pursue. John Reed, however, knew at fifteen that he wanted to be a physical education teacher. In the ninth grade he researched what was necessary to be a gym teacher, how much education he would need, how much it would cost, and what the advantages of the job would be. It is not surprising then that Reed described his classes as "highly structured and disciplined." Although he claimed that in his spare time he enjoys lifting weights, senior Jeff D'Amico claimed, "There is more to this man than just an iron-pumping gym coach. Underneath his tough exterior lies his soft side."

New Faces From Different Places

by Diane Roberts

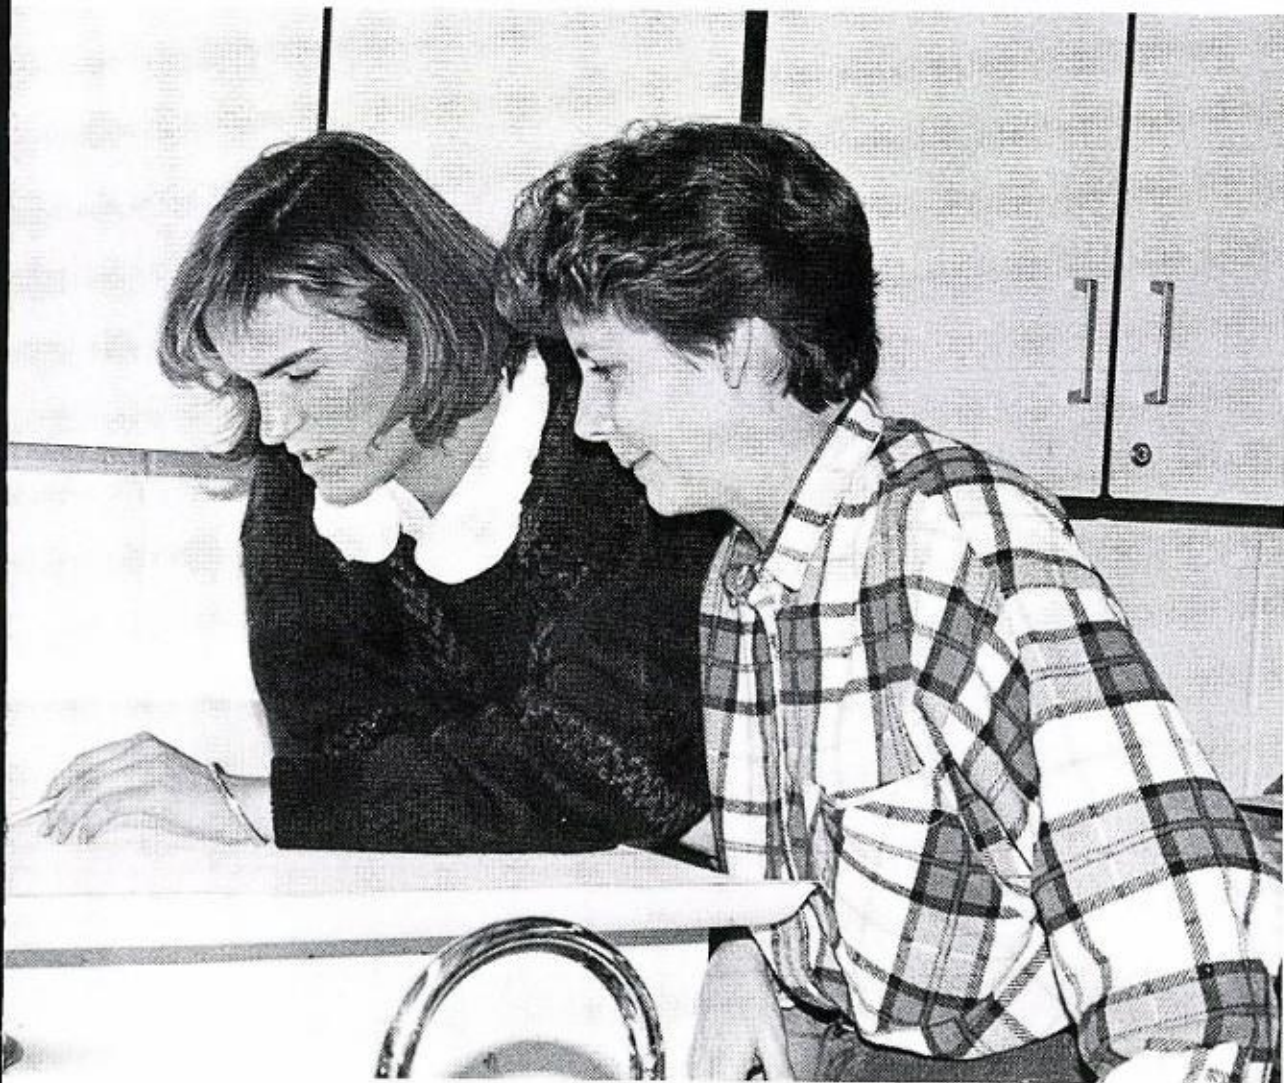

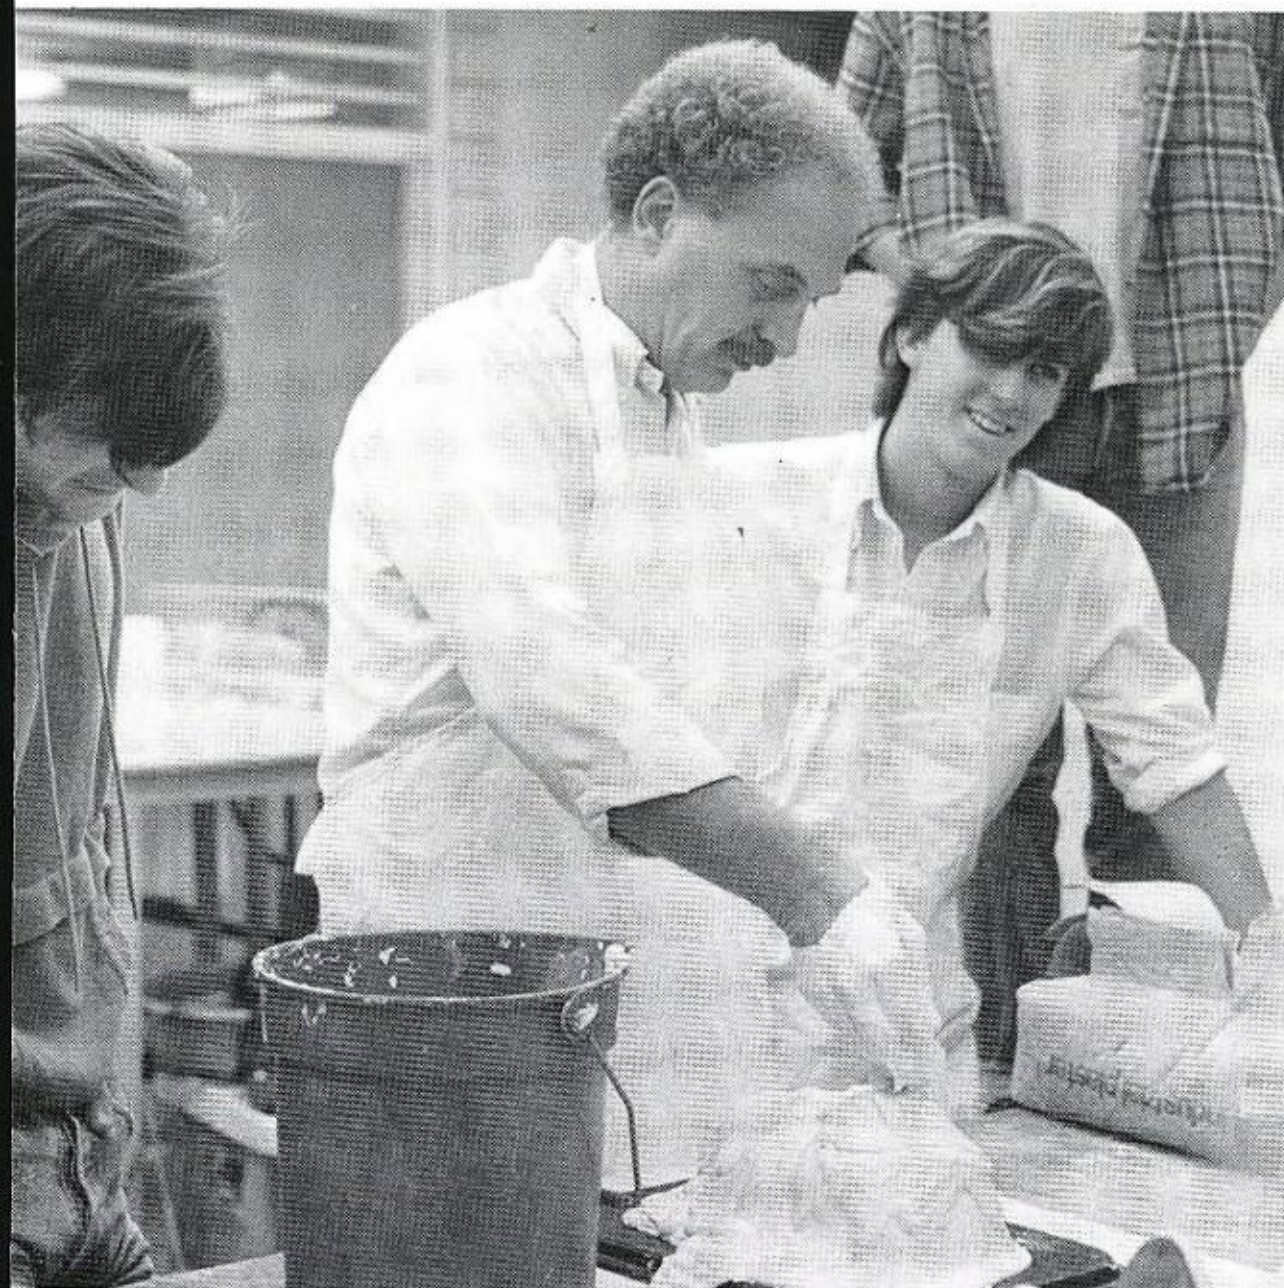

For some it was easy, but for others it was a hard adjustment. Some had never taught before; others were old pros with more than ten years of experience behind them. Some journeyed only a few miles to their new jobs while others came from overseas. This diverse group made up a band of people never seen at SM East before — the new teachers.

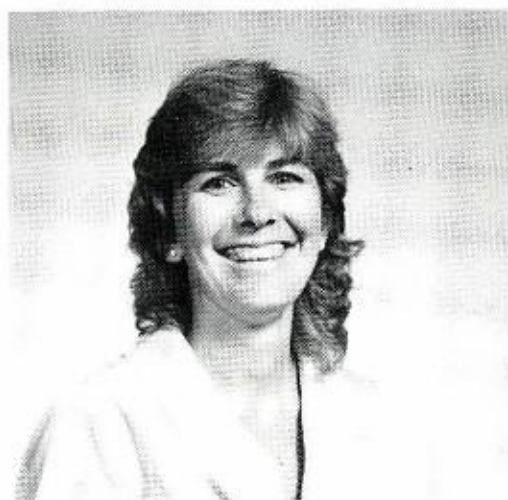

This year a total of ten new faces made their debut: Susan Brantman (Art I, design, oil/acrylics), Sandy Cormack (English), Suzanne Croft (chemistry), Joyce Finlay (Spanish I, French I), Jonathan Lane (orchestra), Paul Rutherford (geometry, Algebra I), Donna Skates (English), Bill Stiegemeier (Psychology I), Sue Stonefield (English), and Trevor Thorley (chemistry).

Many of the new teachers immediately leaped into their jobs and took on other responsibilities. Croft worked with the National Honor Society, Stonefield headed the Pre reading program, and Skates sponsored the yearbook. Two became coaches: Stiegemeier as head football coach, and Thorley as the assistant soccer coach.

The teachers all held slightly different views about what it was like being new. "It's what I expected since I student taught here last year," stated Croft, first year teacher. Stiegemeier felt the change from SM South to East was an easy one, "It was no problem There's really not much difference between the students. The only hard part was getting used to the new policies."

But for others the change involved making some big adjustments. Thorley, who came to the United States from England on the teacher exchange program, remarked, "It was hard. I had to get used to the customs — clothes and all. Students don't pay as much attention either. But the people are friendly."

JULIE BARKLAGE

Julie Barklage, marketing teacher and Distributive Education Clubs of America sponsor, once worked for the same company which publishes the Hauberk. This St. Charles, Missouri, native thought herself an average kid, despite various unusual interests: playing the string dulcimer and frogging — a rather gruesome procedure of catching and filleting frogs. Barklage has tentative plans for a career in accounting and a possible move to St. Louis. Reflecting on herself, Barklage said, "I don't have favorites: I appreciate everything."

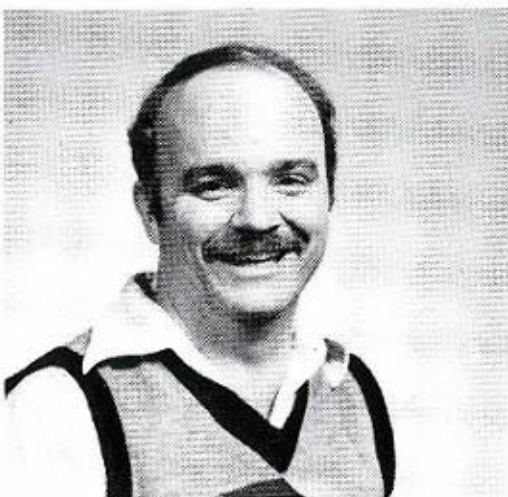

ROLAND GRIFFIN

Griffin thinks that today's students are more knowledgeable than the students of several years ago. He enjoys teaching business courses because he can help students acquire practical skills. Griffin taught typing, business law, and personal finance. His hobbies include gardening (his favorite flower is the rose) and photography, which he has loved since high school. Senior Jimmy Taylor commented, "He's a jack of all trades."

DARLENE JONES

Darlene Jones, who taught Office Education I and II and Typing I and II, enjoys teaching the business skills because they are important in today's offices. Jones, a graduate of Southeastern Missouri State and Central Missouri State, stated, "I know that these skills are something useful for the students to leave high school with." Besides teaching her classes, Jones sponsored the Office Education Club and was the division coordinator for the practical arts department. She stated, "That's why I'm so busy today... meeting my deadlines." When Jones has time, she likes to sew, play a game of tennis, or slug it out in a softball game.

ROD CARR

Looking for Rod Carr? Good luck. Carr, SM East's language and performing arts instructor, is a busy man. He divides his time among several activities. As radio and t.v. teacher, he is involved with the school radio station, and he is also involved with the Thespians. Add to all of this sponsoring the Junior-Senior Prom, and one can imagine the truth in the description of a man who is always on the go. Junior Karen Cook commented, "He gives 100 percent to his students all the time."

JONATHAN LANE

"I wanted to spread the good word about music," explained orchestra teacher Jonathan Lane, a newcomer this year to SM East. He is not only spreading the good word here at East but at Meadowbrook and Indian Hills as well. In his free time, he plays basketball and tennis, or he plays his instrument the string bass. He also enjoys listening to music; his favorites include Isaac Pearlman and Sarah Vaughn. He also conducts music seminars at local colleges from time to time. What do students have to say about him? One student commented, "I really admire him as a teacher and a musician."

WILLIAM LEAFBLAD

William Leafblad juggles a multitude of responsibilities and activities. Besides his position as a band instructor at SM East, which includes concert band, marching band, pep band, and jazz band, he taught at the elementary level in four area schools and assisted at Indian Hills at Meadowbrook. For fun, he plays trumpet and the guitar. He also likes to run and play basketball and volleyball. Last summer he traveled in Europe and especially enjoyed Vienna because he had gone to school there. This was his first trip back. Between work, travel, and leisure, "I relax whenever I can," he admitted.

SHIRLEY RENDEK

Shirley Rendek graduated from the University of Tulsa with a master's in business education. She enjoys teaching accounting because she thinks it is something the students can really apply to their lives. She chose teaching as a profession because she enjoys working with young people. Rendek finds that one of the most rewarding aspects of teaching occurs when the lightbulb goes on in a student's mind and he becomes excited about what he has learned. When she is not working, she enjoys boating, reading, and cross stitching.

KAY SHEPHERD

"I've always wanted to see the world," revealed Kay Shepherd. SM East business teacher. Shepherd worked with students in computers, data processing, and typing. She values her family and said that she chose the teaching profession, in part, because it would be compatible with her home life. In her free time she enjoys socializing, lying in a hammock with a good book, skiing, and playing cards on the dock at the lake. Still aspiring to see the world, she wants to learn to fly and to travel worldwide.

LARRY TICE

SYNTAX ERROR ... GOSUB ... REM STATEMENTS These are some of the messages students might see when glancing at the computers in Larry Tice's room. Tice, computer teacher and boys' tennis coach, described himself as "shy, introspective, and interested in others." Both of his parents were in the education field, and he likes kids and enjoys working with them. In his spare time, when he is not playing tennis, Tice likes to watch sports, especially the Olympics. This is his twenty-first year as a teacher at SM East. In addition to computer science, he also taught college note-taking and introduction to business.

MISSY TAYLOR

Missy Taylor described herself as enthusiastic and determined. This was her seventh year at SM East, and until two years ago, she taught forensics and senior English. For the last two years, she has taught foundations of composition and drama and has directed the fall and spring plays. She strives to make it "as important to be in the arts as it is to be in athletics." In her spare time, Taylor is involved in showing her basset hounds. She has nine dogs, and many of them have won first prizes. Taylor said, "East is excellent academically, and the staff is dedicated and professional." However, she would like to increase the size of the drama department and reach out to the students who are not involved in the arts.

DAN ZOLLARS

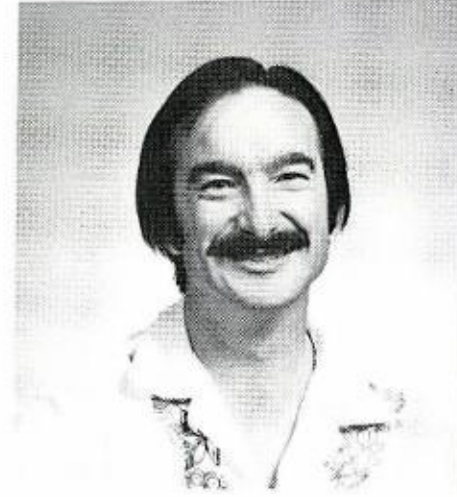

Singing and football hardly seem compatible, yet for Dan Zollars they are a natural, enjoyable combination. Zollars has taught choral music, which consists of choralliers, chamber singers, concert choir, and girls' choir, for seventeen years. He was also the assistant varsity football coach this year. Zollars explained that "football put me through school." He graduated from Wichita State with an NCAA Scholarship. Zollars' other activities include being the division co-ordinator for the fine arts and the musical director for the school theater.

SAM BREWSTER

If Sam Brewster acts rather fatherly this year, it may be due to the arrival of his first child, Daniel, who was born in July. Still, the American government teacher of seven years expects a little more than gaga and goo-goo from his classes. Brewster gains satisfaction from teaching students about their government and country. After being an international businessman for 15 years, Brewster decided to teach because he enjoys working with people and ideas. He concluded, "I do regret the change."

LARRY BROWN

Born in jail (his home) because his dad was a sheriff, Larry Brown recalled, "I used to tease inmates by standing outside the cell and rattling the keys." Brown taught economics, debate, and American government. In the summer he is supervisor for the Public Works Department. He also works part-time in the automotive department at Sears. His activities include playing bridge on Wednesdays and Royals' games on Sundays. Sponsoring debate and the International Club keeps him busy, but he does find time to get away to AK-SAR-BEN Racetrack.

PAUL DeBARTHE

Paul DeBarthe is a man who believes myths are true. Consequently, many myths exist about DeBarthe himself. One myth, which DeBarthe claims is true, is that he collected the lint from his belt for a year to see what he could learn. This year DeBarthe sponsored a new organization at SM East, the Young Liberal Club. DeBarthe said his reasons for sponsoring the club were to "keep the forum open and to increase the movement toward 'synergy,'" the highest mode of thinking. In addition, DeBarthe taught a variety of subjects: world history, anthropology, archaeology, sociology, and international relations. He also sponsored Chess Club and Youth in Government.

DAVE REHFELD

Dave Rehfeld grew up in California and still loves to surf when he takes his family there each summer. His wife and two daughters graduated from SM East, and his son was a junior at East this year. Rehfeld taught American history, but originally received his master's degree in physical education. He is the head coach of the girls' basketball team. Senior Nancy Toalson said, "Coach Rehfeld is the most dedicated coach I've ever had. I only wish more people had the chance to see him in action." Rehfeld is a Sylvester Stallone fan and is looking forward to First Blood Part III.

JOHN SAPPENFIELD

John Sappenfield started teaching in a one-room school house with no teaching certificate in 1946. Returning to the classroom after 12 years as audio-visual coordinator, he taught American history and government. Sappenfield explained that it is his enthusiasm for both the subject and his students that has kept him going. Before entering the battlefield of teaching, he was in the real battlefield. He was almost killed in a convoy attack by German torpedo planes in the Mediterranean Sea during World War II as an Army radio operator. When he is at home, Sappenfield enjoys watching his favorite television show, Family Feud.

BILL STIEGEMEIER

An SM North graduate, Bill Stiegemeier has taught in the district for ten years; this was his first at SM East. This year he taught psychology and physical education and was the head varsity football coach. He has been involved in athletics in the past, coaching baseball and football at SM South and playing professional baseball for four years with the Minnesota Twins after college. When he is not teaching, he spends most of his time either coaching or being with his family. He looked forward to coaching a varsity team for a long time and calls this "the satisfaction of a long-term goal."

KARL ENGLUND

How does one describe Karl Englund? "He's an energetic teacher and coach with a style all his own," explained senior Leigh Borden. "Everyone should get to know him. He is so interesting." He has done it all. He has worked in a sweatshop as a teenager, been the Big Seven indoor pole vault champion, and taught driver's education. "I became a teacher because I wanted to coach," he said, "and then I realized that I loved doing both. They have so much in common." This year, Englund taught American history and geography, and coached cross-country and track.

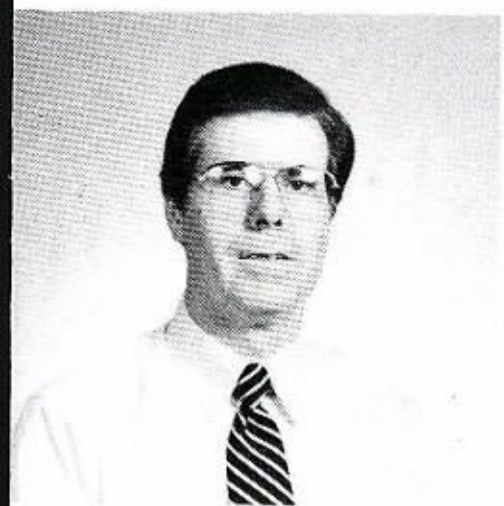

ELDON EVANS

When he is not in the classroom, Eldon Evans can be found at his farm in Miami County. He and his wife are building a log cabin on the land that has been in his family over 100 years. "These are my roots," he explained. This summer he took college courses on dealing with life skills in the classroom. To his students he tries to convey the idea that the world can only be a better place if each individual wants to make it better. According to Andy Easton, a former student, Evans is making the world a better place. "He is the best teacher that I ever had."

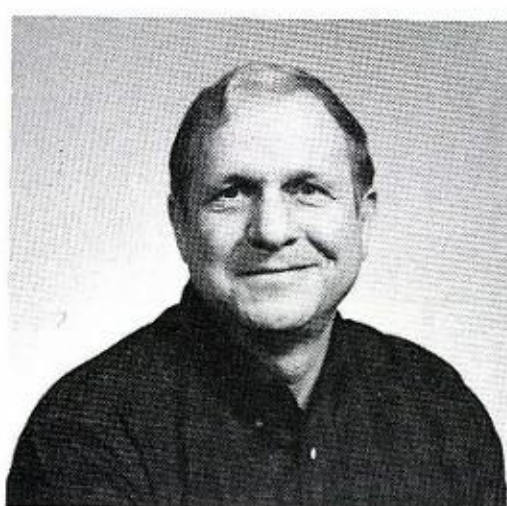

JANE McCUE

Dedicated to teaching and her family, Jane McCue accredited her career to her history teacher, Barbara Rundell. As a student at SM East, McCue participated in drill team, Spanish Club, Student Council, the Future Teachers' Club, and theater. While determining whether to pursue medicine or education at Kansas University, Jane met her future husband, a law student. Fortunately, her son Ryan also loves science and will often sit down to watch Lifeline with Mom. McCue has a zealous interest in forensic pathology, "especially its role in solving historical crime."

KENNETH SWEARINGEN

Kenneth Swearingen, instructor, offered this warning to prospective students: "Those seeking psychological help should not enroll." True, he does teach psychology, but it is intended to be merely informative and is not a self-help class. Swearingen has taught at SM East for 16 years and said the most baffling aspect had been the dramatic shift in the student body, from liberal to conservative. Swearingen claimed to be interested in everything, from collecting guns to collecting marbles. He described himself as "student-oriented" and invited students to take his class. He stated, "They will be expected to work hard, but they will receive mutual respect."

EMERSON WILSON

Emerson Wilson, American history teacher, joked that at a very young age "a voice from the sky" told him to become a teacher. Actually, he came from a business-oriented family, and Wilson said his parents discouraged him from becoming a teacher; it was only his enthusiasm for students and his love of teaching which finally won out. He described himself as a "stickler," but said that hard work in his class will finally pay off. This year, he plans to be the first sponsor of the Young Conservatives Club, but he maintained that this does not reflect his own political views.

GRETCHEN BRANDT

"A child's life is like a piece of paper on which every passerby leaves a mark," reads an ancient Chinese proverb in Gretchen Brandt's classroom. Children have always fascinated Brandt. Brandt taught exploring childhood, child development, and sponsored the Lancer Letter Girls this year. She loves gourmet cooking, French cuisine being among her favorites. Brandt also loves Colorado and "watching learning take place." On her plans for the future, Brandt exclaimed, "I'm definitely not running for President in 1988."

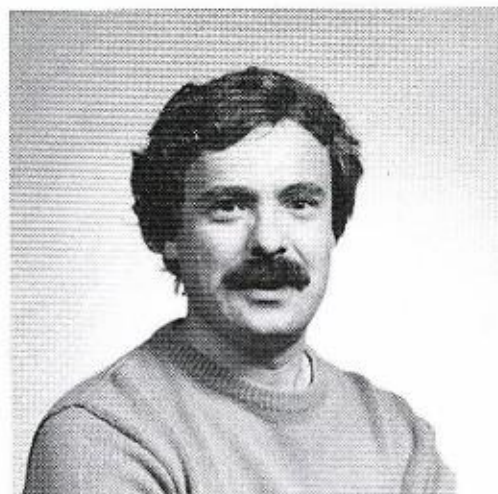

ROSEMARY GASPER

Having taught at SM East for the past twenty years, Rosemary Gasper has seen many fads and fashions come and go. Gasper's interest carries over into her work since she taught Fashion 1, Clothing 1, advanced clothing, housing and interior designs, and personal family relations. Gasper claimed, "I like teaching the teenagers, and I think my classes have practical uses for everyday life." Gasper spends her spare time traveling in Europe with her husband. She has been to many countries, including Switzerland, Italy, France, and England.

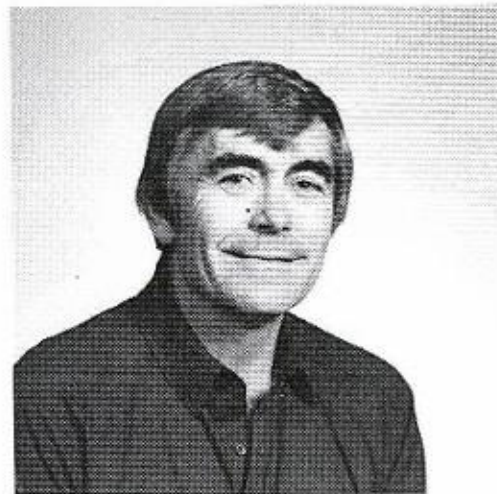

CONNIE LUTZ

Also known as the Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow, Connie Lutz taught foods, child development, and survival skills this year. An East graduate of 1959, this was her first year of teaching. In high school, she was on the yearbook staff and editor of the newspaper. She said she was surprised at how little East had changed over the years. She recalled that "the first pep assembly this year was tough. The cheerleaders performed the same cheers, and Dr. Newcomer still sat up in the bleachers shaking his finger. For a moment, I was 16 again." When she is not monitoring cookie dough, Lutz enjoys needlework and quilting. She has assisted in sophomore girls' basketball and was a sponsor of the Social Service Club.

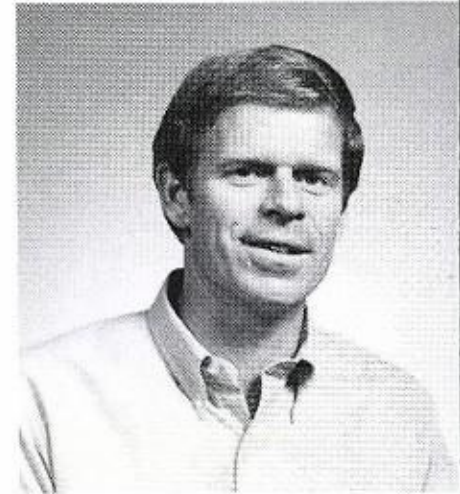

JIM DINESEN

Like most teachers, auto-tech teacher Jim Dinesen claims his reason for teaching is how much he enjoys students. "It's certainly not the money." Still, after fifteen years of teaching, he says it keeps him young. What he does not enjoy is being a hall monitor, demanding "Where's your pass?" To prospective students he says, "Expect work and expect fun." Have students changed since he's been teaching? "Hair styles- yes, students-no."

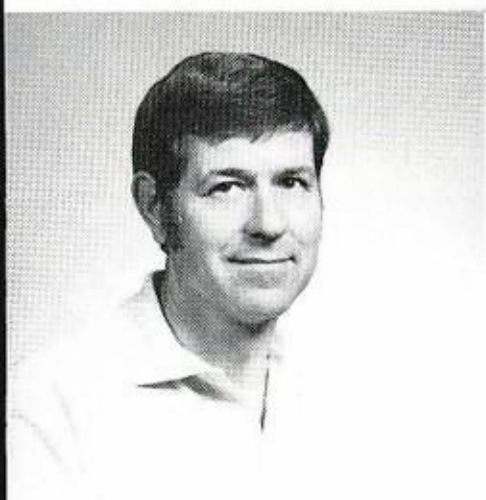

TOM LeBAR

Describing himself, Tom Lebar, auto-tech teacher, said, "I'm a helluva guy." This comes from a man who, when asked how long he has been teaching, replied, "Too long." He said his favorite thing about school is summer, and he claimed, in his spare time, to teach ballroom dancing. In a more serious vein, Lebar described himself as a "disciplinarian, but a fair one." To prospective students he said that his Auto-Tech I class is a general information course, but in Auto-Tech II students are given hands-on training, allowing them to change their lemons into hot rods.

CHUCK SULZEN

Many students forget that drafting is an industrial arts teacher. Chuck Sulzen is a teacher at all because of his involvement as SM East's soccer coach and track coach. Needless to say, Sulzen has always been very active, saying of his Joseph High School days, "I participated in every sport they had." Now as the father of two active sons, Sulzen has managed his seven-year-old's little league team and a local swim team. In addition to sports, the Sulzen family enjoys the outdoors. Consequently, they spent the last summer amid the foliage of several California national parks and traveled ten to their own place in the Ozarks.

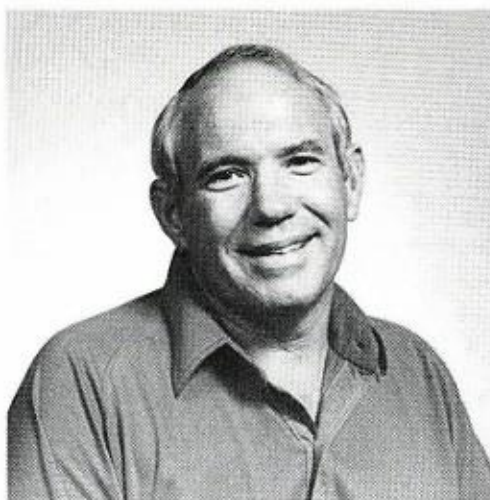

JOE JACOBS

Look left, look right, and check your blind spot." Joe Jacobs has repeated this statement in driver's education for the last 15 years. "During this time, I've seen a lot of unskilled kids become very good drivers." Jacobs enjoys teaching and has even coached football and basketball. In his leisure time, he and his bird dog hunt quail, duck, and pheasant. Besides hunting, Jacobs added that he fishes, waterskis, and does "anything pertaining to water." In the future, Jacobs may turn to some other job because he believes that teachers can "experience burnout." Meanwhile Jacobs will continue teaching each student based on the following view: "Would I want that individual on the road?"

JOHN OMAN

Although John Oman has been teaching driver's education at SM East for over 20 years, he has never been involved in a serious accident. That is not to say he has not left his mark. Apparently a student mistakingly thought the car was in reverse when actually it was in drive. A dent still remains in the support beam by the auto-tech room. Even though teaching does have its share of mishaps, Oman enjoys driving with his students. Besides cruising the streets, Oman also takes time to coach sophomore boys' basketball, and he likes to go skiing in Colorado.

NORRIS STAUFFER

From on the road to on the green, Norris Stauffer has been involved in many activities at SM East for 21 years. This year he taught driver's education, and in the past he has taught physical education and coached swimming. He now coaches the golf teams at East and has been doing so for 16 years. He has been named the Kansas Coach of the Year three times, twice for golf and once for swimming. He has also been named Regional Coach of the Year twice. Stauffer enjoys spending time fishing in Alaska and on Beaver Lake, Arkansas, where he owns a house.

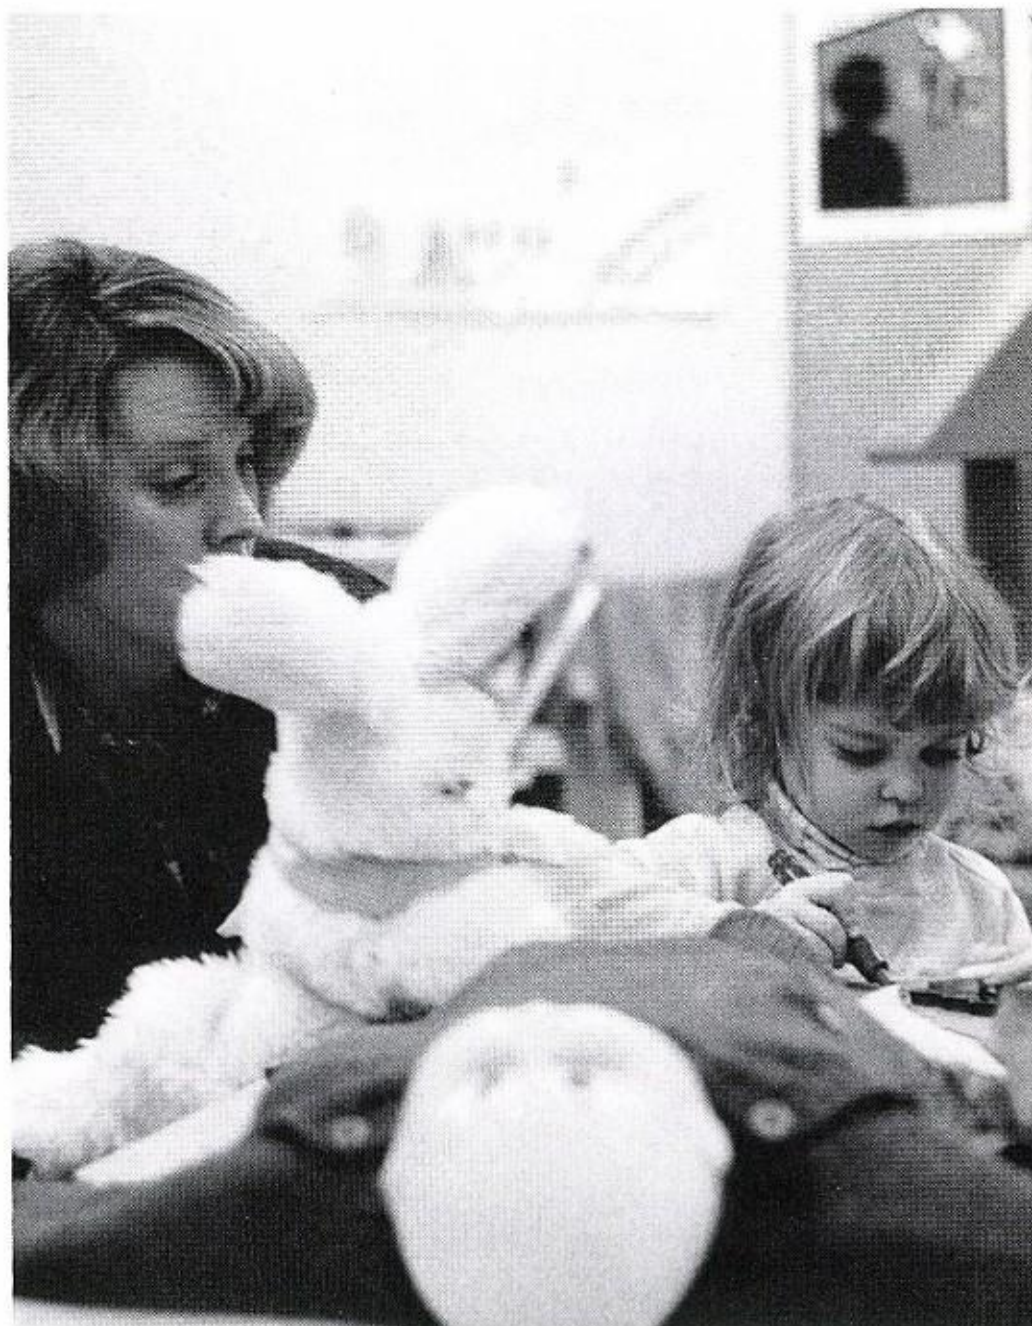

POLLY REICHARDT

I would love to be able to live in Colorado in the summertime and southern California during the winter," revealed Polly Reichardt, assistant librarian. Reichardt has spent the last 19 winters in the library at SM East but has made it to Colorado during her summers between a part-time job, her family, and hobbies. She enjoys knitting, needlepoint, and, of course, reading. She loves to read mysteries, "just for fun," but was hard pressed to name a favorite. Work and leisure both have their place in Reichardt's life, but she said, "One of my major goals is to get my kids through college."

JAN WOOD

Glancing around the library, she just could not choose a favorite book. "I love to read and be around books; it's just natural," said Jan Wood, librarian and sixteen-year veteran of SM East. Her pursuits extend beyond the library, however. Having built a dulcimer last summer, she is now taking classes to learn to play her new instrument. She is also a movie buff as well as a music lover, especially rock. Although she claims to be a homebody, if given the chance, Wood would like to travel to England to trace the roots of English literature and the Beatles — she is an avid fan.

Teacher, Teacher, Can You Teach?

by Judy Skaptason

Although contract negotiations generally begin in January and end in May, heated dispute between the Shawnee Mission teachers and the school board lengthened the process; it finally concluded Nov. 18-23.

According to Eldon Evans, a member of the executive committee of the National Education Association of Shawnee Mission (NEA-SM), the issue involved four main sources of conflict.

The school board proposed to raise the salaries for newer teachers rather than the older teachers to increase hiring competition. In addition, they were in favor of a set fee for coaches, including those whose seasons extend beyond the school year.

The teachers proposed binding arbitration for when a teacher is fired. They also wanted early retirement to be included in their contracts.

None of the issues could be resolved, and on June 1, 1985, an impasse occurred where both sides were unable to agree, and negotiations were halted.

In order to resolve the problem, a fact-finder was used to weigh the testimony of both sides and produce a non-binding proposal.

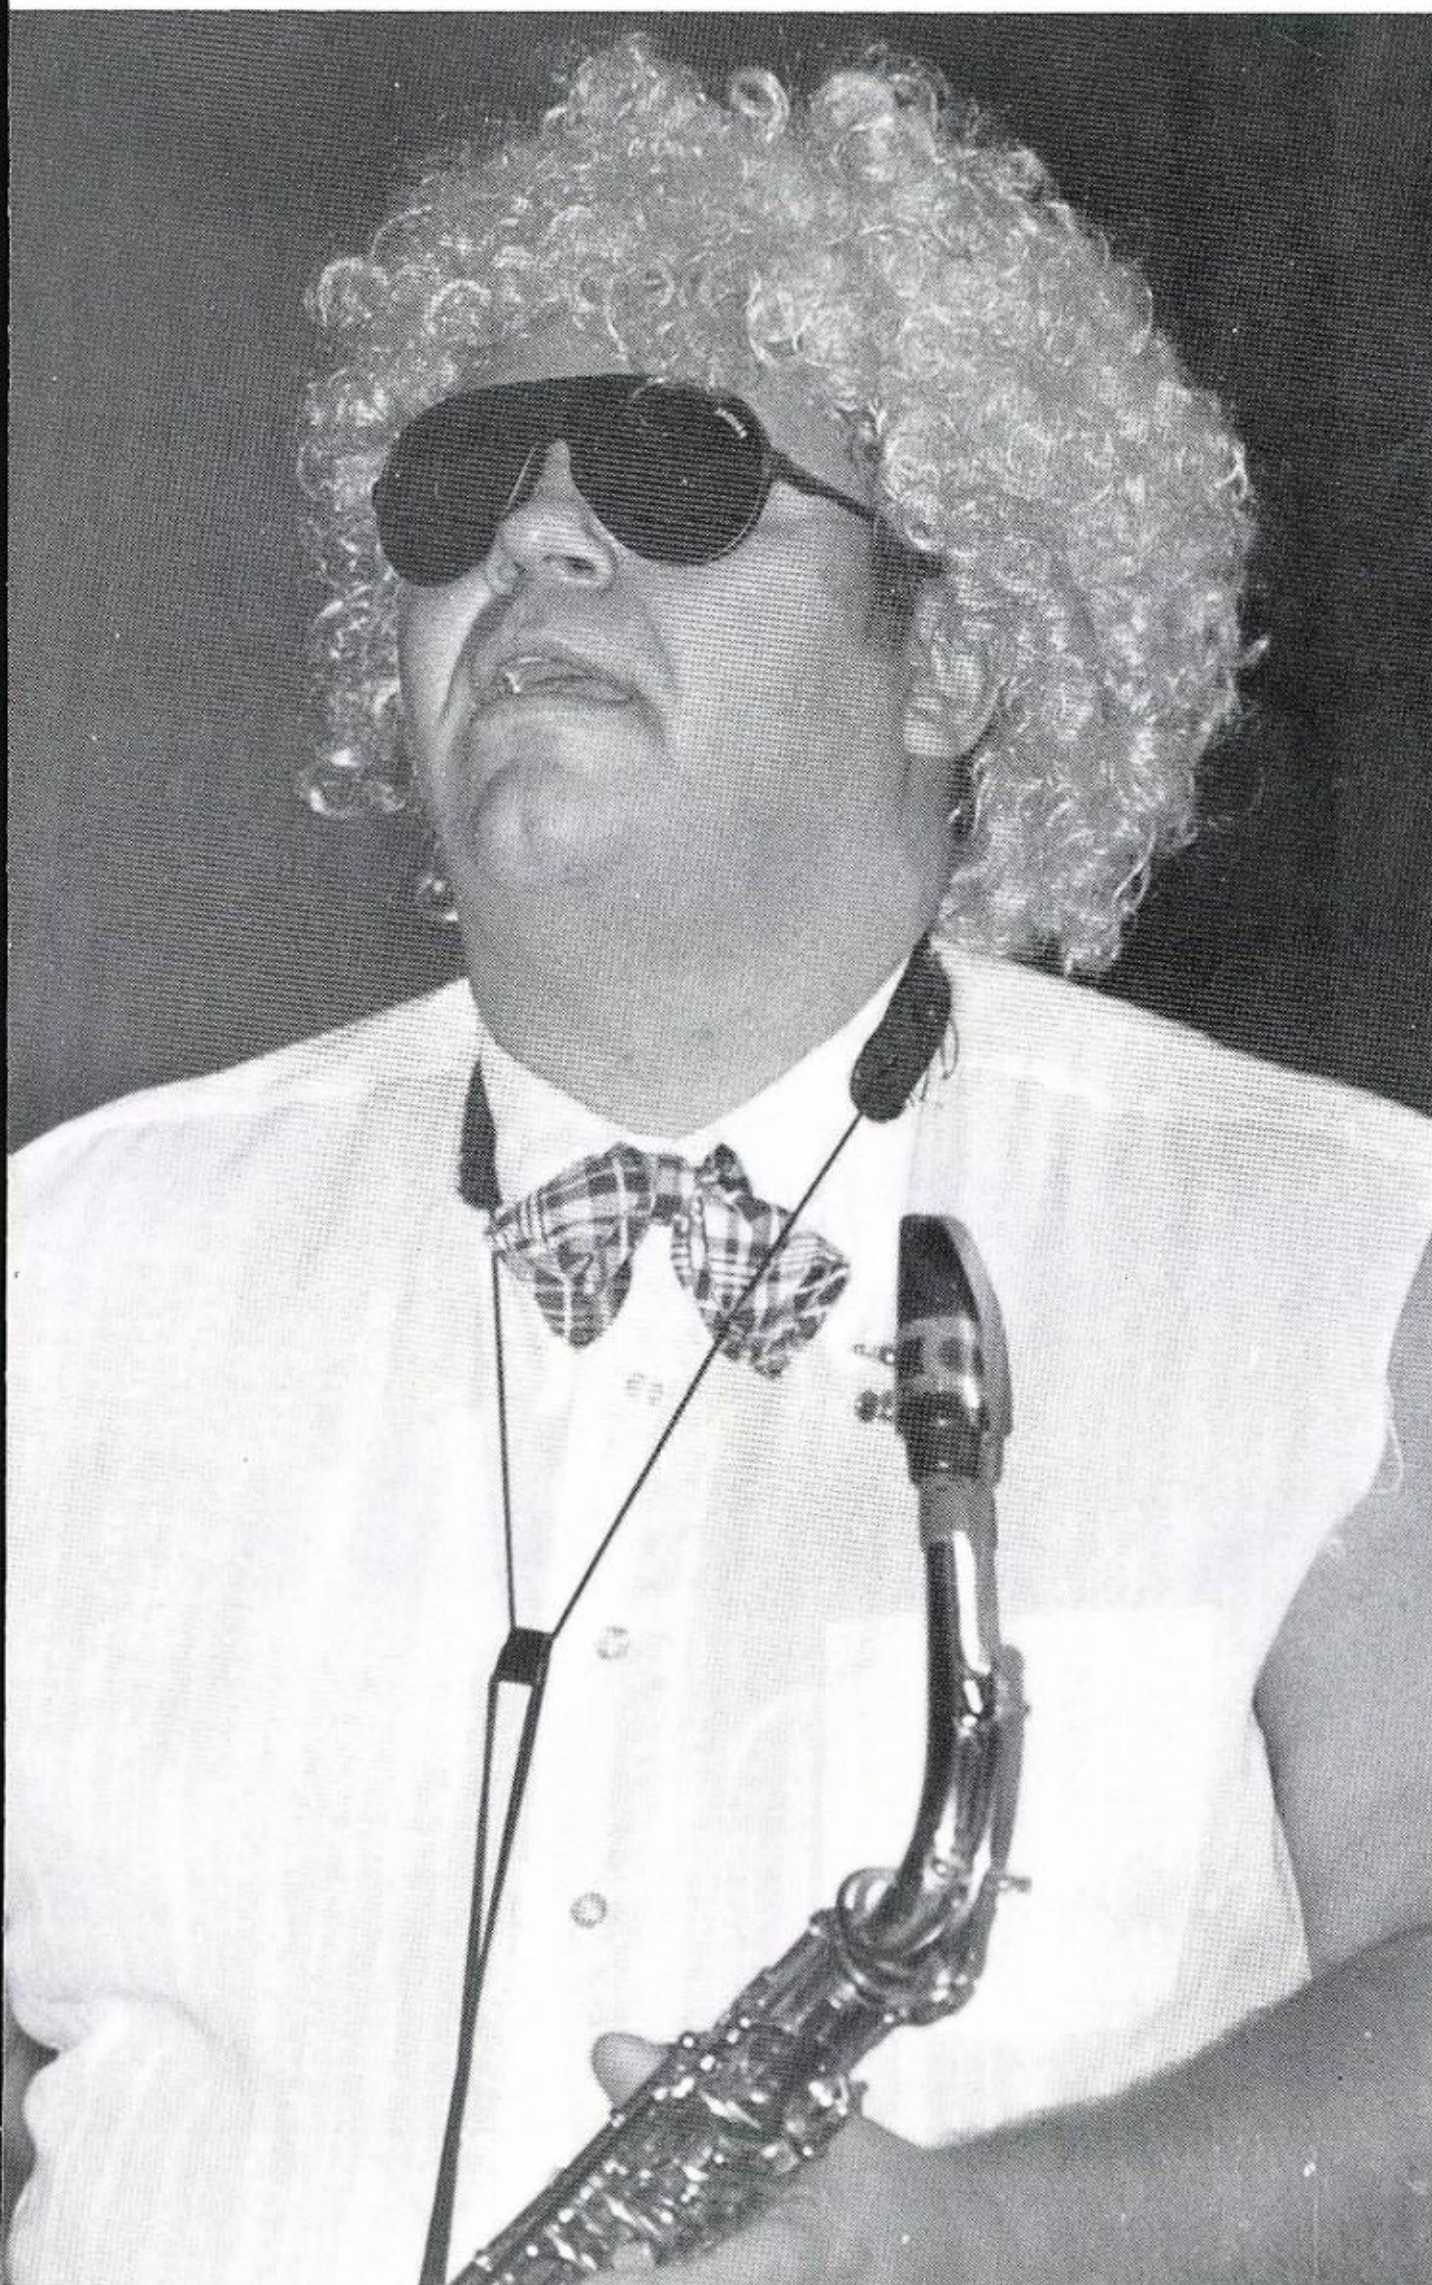

The fact-finder ruled in favor of binding arbitration and for the increase of both new and old teachers' salaries but recommended against early retirement and increasing coaches' fees.

Both the school board and the teachers essentially agreed with the fact-finder, and a new contract was approved which included binding arbitration and an average increase in teachers' salaries of 7.76 percent.

Rick Gould, biology teachers, said, "The teachers had the power — they just didn't use it."

Even though the 1985-86 contract dispute ended, Evans predicted that "the issue will come up again" for the 1986-87 contract. He added, "The feelings of the teachers were as strong as I've ever seen them."

Positive Times Ahead

by Jessie Ullmann

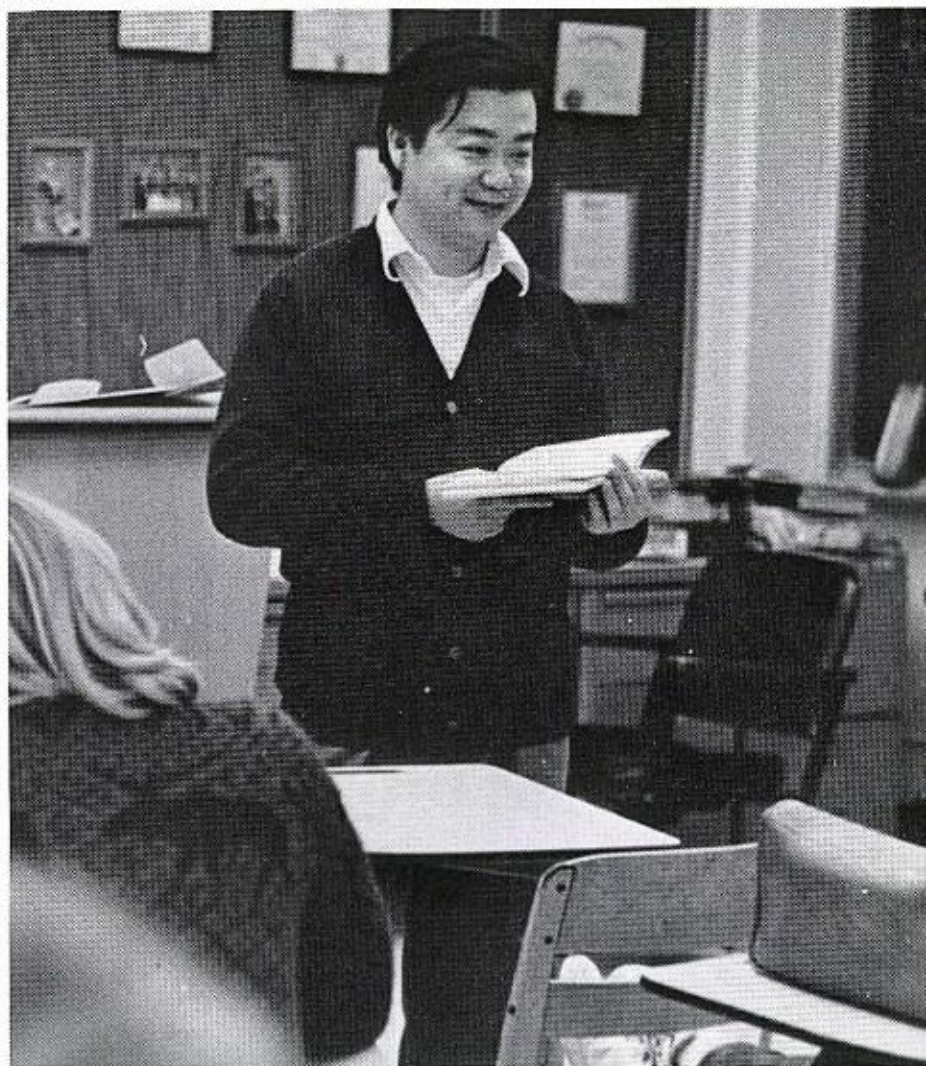

Have you ever wondered who all those women are sitting in East's front hall stuffing envelopes? There is only one answer — yes, it is the East P.T.A. The P.T.A. is a parent/teacher organization whose main purpose is to help make East the best possible school. With over 30 committees and 100 board members, they arrange and support many school functions, such as college night, Lancer Launch, back-to-school night, and teacher hospitality get-togethers.

However, P.T.A. involvement in the school runs much deeper. Donna Bysfield, this year's P.T.A. president, said the group also tries to educate parents by addressing the issues which will affect East, such as new Kansas legislation on drinking and driving. This year they were also trying to inform parents about next year's district reorganization so that they could take interest and help make the transition easier for the students.

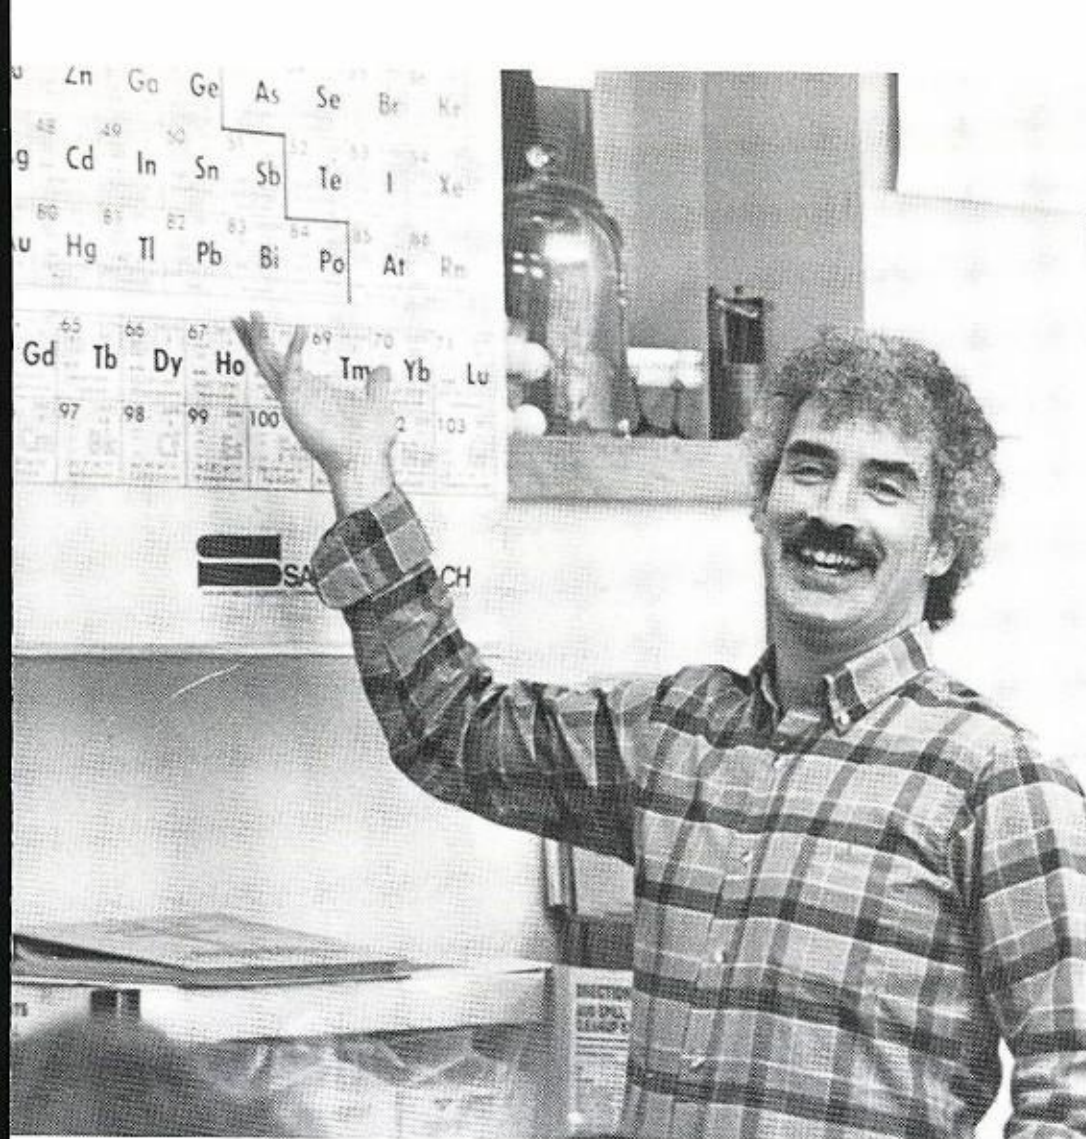

As a national organization, the N.P.T.A. is often called upon to address senate committees on school and student issues. According to Bysfield, East's P.T.A. is so successful because of "lots of parents who care enough to get involved."

Stars in Stripes

by Jessie Ullmann

Who were those wild stripe-shirted girls who added life to pep assemblies and games? Who plastered the hall walls and lockers with colorful posters promoting school activities? It is no mystery — they were the one and only Girls' Pep Club.

Not only were these 16 pep execs in charge of arousing Lancer enthusiasm for upcoming sports events, but they also organized Homecoming, Sweetheart, Hall Competition, and the ever-famous Lancer Day. This year, they did not let the rain spoil the Lancer Day tradition as it did last year. They successfully decorated "Lancer Village" with a myriad of supportive posters.

In charge of the group this year was president Mary Stechschulte, senior. "The main purpose this year was not only to attend the different games and meets but also to get more non-pep execs and various groups involved in assemblies and school activities," said Stechschulte. This included getting classmates involved in those crazy skits or simply helping out with Pep Club projects, such as decorating the Village for Lancer Day. This year, they introduced all the seasonal teams and planned demonstrations at the assemblies of those sports which students may not see too often, such as volleyball and gymnastics.

But it was not all fun and games. "It takes a lot of responsibility from the executives to run such a high budget program and be successful," said David Wolff, Boys' and Girls' Pep Club advisor. However, if it weren't for all their wild and exciting ideas, what would happen to the overwhelming and inspiring Lancer enthusiasm?

Bad To The Bone

by Matt Sheffield

From tailgate parties to huge signs hanging from the roof in front of SM East, the 1985-86 Boys' Pep Club was behind all the Lancer sports.

With Chris Carney as president; Ron Baker, vice president; Greg St. Denis, secretary; and Jimmy Taylor, treasurer; there were many unique ideas, coupled with planning and hard work. Besides the tailgate parties, the first ever Boys' Pep Club Advisory Board was initiated by Carney, and East had volleyball games between the girls' varsity volleyball team and the football players as well as a basketball game between the boys' and girls' varsity basketball teams at the assemblies.

St. Denis commented, "We've really worked hard this year to bring the kind of enthusiasm and entertainment to the East students who deserve it." Baker stated that Carney and the success of athletics at East was the strength of Boys' Pep Club. "We had good leadership which I think was lacking in previous years," added Baker. "I don't think the administration should've shut them (assemblies) down completely because it (the yelling out) was done by a minute group of senior guys." St. Denis also disagreed with the administrative decision to cancel an assembly. Carney concluded, "A little suspension never hurt anybody."

Other notable events this year included the formation of a Pep Club Bowling League, the brainchild of Advisory Board member Darrell Coleman, and the Boys' Pep Club squad car, the Satellite, leading the caravan to the football games. "The Satellite was the axis of the club," informed Taylor. "If the Satellite wasn't there, it didn't happen." St. Denis stated, "We've tried to enforce the fact that obscenities, innuendoes, and putdowns are not a part of the agenda of a successful pep assembly." Summing up a busy year of athletic support, St. Denis recalled, "I've had my picture taken 600 times!"

Pep Gets A Bad Rep

by Jared A. Goldstein

This year's pep assemblies underwent some changes. In the words of Dr. Sandfort, the first pep assembly was undermined by a "small group of students who were uninterested in working with or responding to the planned program and showed inappropriate behavior by yelling obscenities." Chris Carney, Pep Club president, disagreed, saying, "A group of senior guys were just having good American fun."

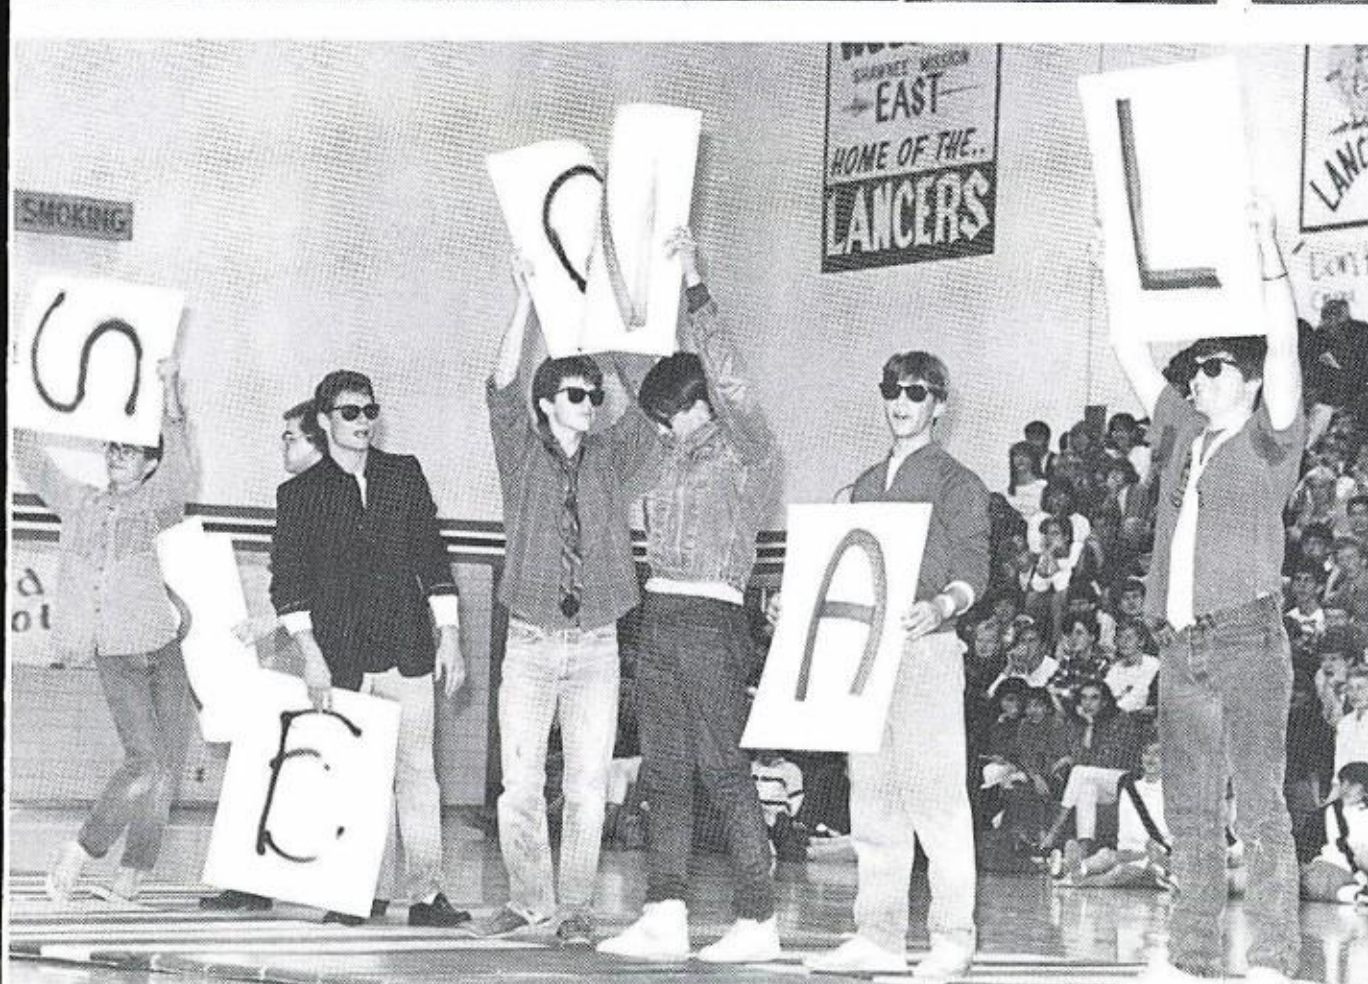

The problem, according to Gretchen Brandt, Letter Girls sponsor, has existed for years because no one knows what the pep assemblies are really for. The problem came to a head last year when a group of junior boys derogatorily chanted "Letter Girls, Letter Girls." This greatly upset the Letter Girls, who have not performed at a pep assembly this year, as well as the administration which wondered why school time should be given to a club activity to which its member were opposed. Carney, self-described as one of the "rebel leaders," thought he had a solution and asked Dr. Newcomer. "Why not let us run them (the pep assemblies) and see what we could do?" As this year's Boys' Pep Club president, Carney felt he would be able to make the assemblies more interesting and fun for all. However, he said the administration was "too narrow to let us change the pep assemblies the way we wanted."

This year started off badly for the pep assemblies. During the first assembly, a group of senior boys started an obscene chant. Based on this incident, Dr. Sandfort decided to cancel pep assemblies until a solution could be found. The assemblies were reinstated after Carney came up with the idea of the Pep Club president's Advisory Board. Asked how to join this elite organization, Carney responded that one must "stand up at an assembly and yell (obscenity)." The seven senior boys who made up the Advisory Board were the "ring leaders" of the "inappropriate behavior" bunch. Removing them from the bleachers, Carney gave them the job of crowd control. In effect, the philosophy was that if you can't beat 'em, make them join you.

Dr. Sandfort was pleased with the results. The first assembly after the Advisory Board was created was, according to Sandfort, "one of the best assemblies East has ever put on." Carney, however, was not completely satisfied, and promised, "It was just the beginning of the new wild untamed humor still to come. Still, the problems are being worked out through cooperation between students and the administration."

A Tradition of Excellence

by Diane Roberts

Mr. Sneakerburn ... Julia Huxtable's dilemma after the final competition at camp ... TP-ing the varsity football teams houses: all memories the varsity cheerleading team will cherish.

Sponsor Carolyn Howard stated, "Every squad is unique. I can't really compare them." This year's varsity team has proven itself to be one of the best in the area. When the varsity squad went to NCA camp at Kansas University this summer, they came home with the most prestigious honor: The Award of Excellence, an award given to only one squad out of the 450 that were there. "The camp helped to pull the team together and prepare them for the upcoming year," added Howard. "Camp is a lot tougher than anyone thinks; it really gave us an opportunity to grow close," explained senior Stephanie Smith, head cheerleader.

Even though the junior varsity and sophomore cheerleaders did not go to camp, they still had to work hard. While most students were still sleeping, the cheerleaders dragged themselves from bed to go to practice. The sophomore squad was expected to attend all home games for all sports, and the junior varsity and varsity teams went to both home and away games. This usually amounted to two to four nights of cheering a week.

Being a cheerleader at East involves responsibility. The cheerleaders are usually in the foreground, and they are constantly asked to represent our school. The East squads are expected to present a good image, and they have always tried very hard to do so.

The cheerleaders were chosen by their performance during a tryout held either in the spring or the fall depending on grade level. The judges consisted of teachers and former varsity cheerleaders, who based their final decisions on the coordination, appearance, and general enthusiasm of the individual. Overall, the cheerleaders played a major role in promoting school spirit.

They've Got to Have Something to Sit On

by Heather Terril

"Sure we're useless," joked senior yell leader Mark Morash, "but you don't expect the cheerleaders to stand up the whole time. They've got to have something to sit on." Ask any varsity cheerleader, however, and they would say, very seriously, that the yell leaders were anything but useless. "They were bases for our pyramids, yelled with us, and were fun to have around," said Stephanie Smith, senior varsity cheerleading captain. This year's yell leaders were Tom Cartmell, Chris Harper, Max Harvey, Kevin Ireland, Jon Laverentz, Larry Long, Mark Morash, and Stu Sanks. They were chosen last spring at tryouts and practiced in the summer with the cheerleaders to prepare for fall activities: football and other varsity sports. Although there were only eight yell leaders, as opposed to twelve in past years, Carolyn Howard, cheerleading sponsor said, "They did the best that I've seen yell leaders do in a long time."

Timing Is Everything

by Ruthie Harrison

As twenty-three girls anxiously marched onto a muddy field at half-time, a dozen thoughts raced through their minds. Finally, after hours of hard work and early morning practices, the girls were ready to "show their stuff." Each one knew she must perform her part accurately for the routine to be successful.

As senior Joni Siuda, social chairperson, explained, "We spend so much of our time together that we become like a family. If one of us fails, we all fail." It is this attitude that made the SM East drill team so unique. Senior Jen Eldred, co-captain, stated, "We perform well because we love working together."

"The drill team practices long hours, but they don't always get the recognition they deserve," commented senior Kathy Grether. The girls perform at half-time during the football and basketball games, and this year the team also had the opportunity to perform at a soccer game.

Their performance included dance routines and marching with the band. All of the members enjoyed dancing and working together. Choreographing their own routines served to further enhance the team's esprit de corps. Senior Dawn Aronoff believed that their "closeness and compatability helped the drill team to perform with accuracy and unity."

Never Flagging Behind

by Kathy Morris

Imagine. Mass confusion — 19 girls performing routines with the drill team and band praying desperately that the girls' flags do not knock anyone unconscious. To ensure that this never happened, the Lancerettes arose early every day to put in a hard morning's practice at 7 a.m. Lisa Frashier, senior captain, emphasized that besides the early morning practices, the flag team worked well together because they were "closely knit, like a family." She added, "We never got sick of each other."

Teresa McEntire, senior co-captain, stressed, "Flag team is different. It takes more than just dancing, skill, and coordination to get 19 flags together. It takes the effort of the entire group."

The Lancerettes' hard work paid off. They won three trophies at summer camp and excelled in several other competitions. With brand new flags, the team also performed at every home football game and at a few of the home basketball games. Sponsor Debbie Ogden stated, "The flag team contained skilled and sharp performers and had great leadership." This year's officers were Frashier and junior Kerry Robertson, captains; McEntire and junior Carrie Richert, co-captains; and juniors Amy Fithian, Kelly Fickle, Julie Hefling, and senior Judy Skaptason, social committee chairmen.

Heralders Help Blow Away the Competition

by Heather Terril

Walking in synchronization, they emerge from the four corners of the gymnasium, stride confidently to the center, and one after another raise their horns to the blasts of trumpets from the band. Almost everyone has seen the ceremonies conducted by the Heralders. "They evoke a sense of solemnity. It's a feeling of tradition," remarked senior Margaret Keough. The Heralders have been a vital part of opening ceremonies for many years. This year's Heralders were seniors Kathy Harnett, Kristen Pierson, and Angie Watkins, and juniors Stephanie Kieltyka, Heather Kolb, and Tara Lewis. They performed at pep assemblies and at home basketball games. The Heralders were chosen in the fall from a group of over fifty girls that tried out. "It was an honor to be chosen and I had a blast," stated senior Kristen Pierson.

Trumpeteers Toot Their Horns

by Jared Goldstein

The idea of the Trumpeteers resulted from a conversation between David Wolff, Pep Club sponsor, and Dr. Jim Sandfort. Dr. Sandfort mentioned that he had seen Stu Sanks at a soccer game having fun with a plastic trumpet. Why not, asked Wolff, organize a group of students who would have such trumpets at outdoor athletic events? Thus, the Trumpeteers were born.

The Trumpeteers were designed to increase crowd involvement. Mignon Disney, senior, who was appointed by Wolff to be in charge, tried at first to keep a list of members, but this quickly became impossible due to the huge response. Despite the fact that all two hundred of the blue plastic trumpets were sold, Wolff said, "I can't say we have two hundred Shawnee Mission East Trumpeteers." The trumpets were sold at the first football game to anyone who would buy them, including parents and elementary students.

Wolff was pleased with the success of the Trumpeteers. He claimed that the Trumpeteers were never intended to be a real club at East. He explained, "We knew we weren't going to have officers, meetings, practices, or any of the normal club activities. It was just a fun thing at a few football games, that's all."

Letter Girls Establish Traditions

Letter Girls gives seven sophomore girls the opportunity to participate in a school activity by promoting spirit at athletic events. "They are a visible way of announcing a Lancer activity," said Gretchen Brandt, sponsor. "We try to emulate the image of school spirit."

"The Letter Girls are a resounding success," declared senior Chris Carney. As senior Kristin Stoneking put it, "They are perceived by the student body as vital participants in school spirit. I admire their enthusiasm and appreciate all they are doing."

The girls met once a week to practice for performances at pep assemblies, football games, and other activities. This year, for the first time, they performed at the Lancer Day Parade.

Letter Girl Evin Burdette said, "This is the most fun I've ever had. I feel like I'm accomplishing something important — school spirit."

Brandt said, "The Letter Girls are only in their fourth year — we are just beginning to establish traditions."

Who Was That Masked Man?

by Kathy Morris

Exactly who or what jumped around at the games and pep assemblies, helped out the cheerleaders, and excited the crowd? The Lancer, SM East's mascot, of course. Promoting school spirit, the mascot represented East at the varsity football and basketball games this year.

Mascots must be gutsy enough to perform crazy stunts in front of the entire school. Motivating the crowd is difficult; the mascot needs to be school-spirited and have a vivacious personality which can shine through through the mask.

This year's mascots, whose identities were supposedly unknown, revealed themselves to be seniors Kristen Stryker, Lisa Fay, and Nancy Sloan, and junior Camille Anderson. Their sponsor was David Wolff, counselor.

Stryker enthusiastically stated, "I'm a really hyper and psyched-up person. Some people think I'm strange when I spaz out, but at least I'm hidden behind a mask." Pensively, she added, "I could be as crazy as I wanted, and the administration would see it as helping the school instead of disrupting it."

Looking at the advantages of being a mascot, Anderson commented, "I was able to be down on the field with all the football players."

Controversy: The Spice of Journalism

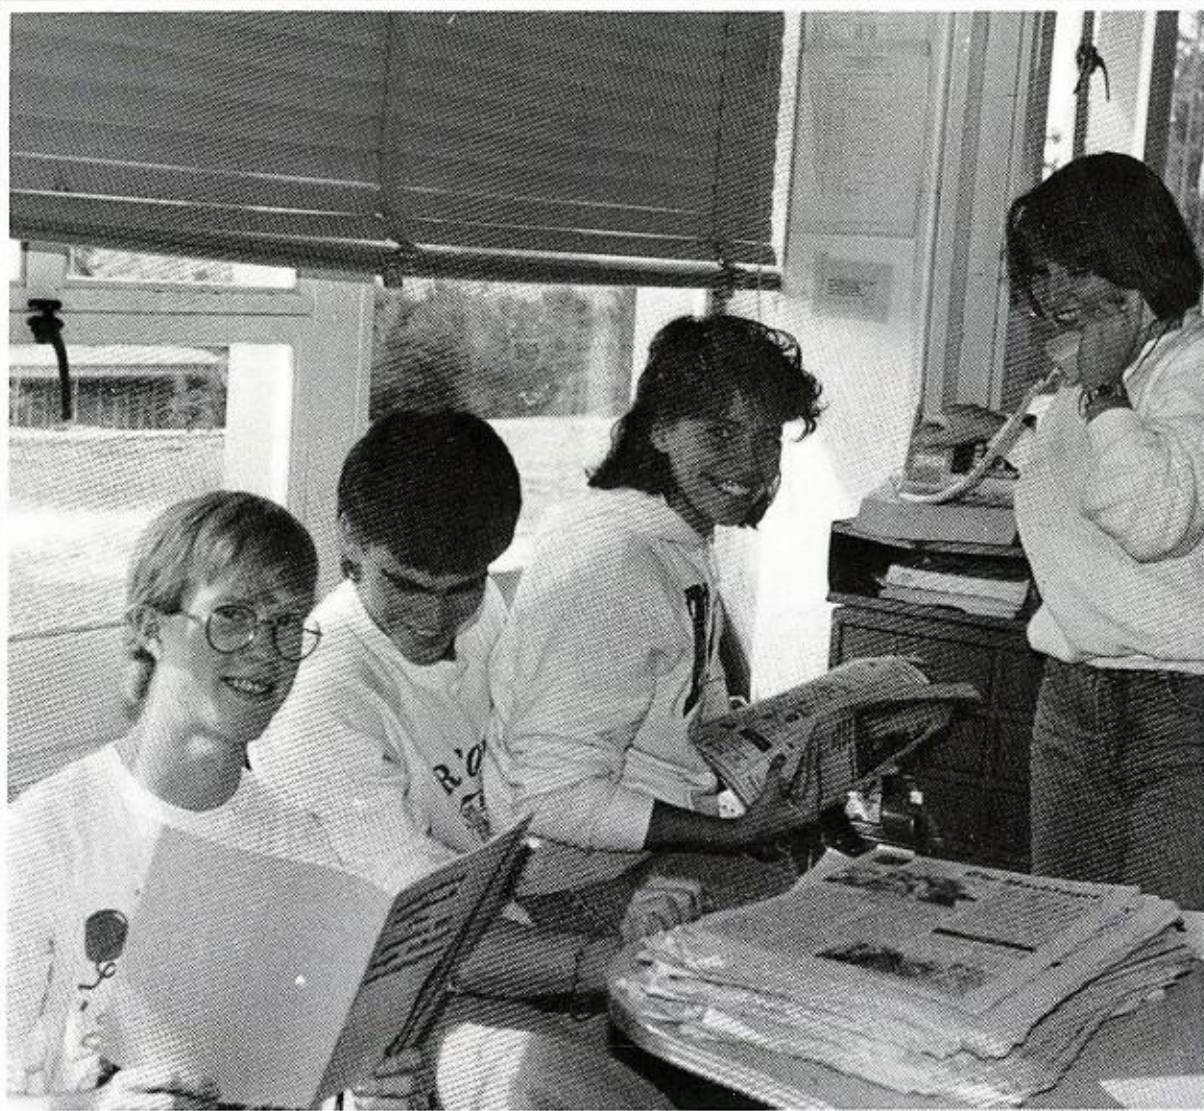

by Laura Rozen

"Oh, no . . ." groaned senior Nancy Staab, editor of the fall Harbinger, upon receiving criticism on her first editorial, "What Ever Happened to Class?" The article, which pointed directly toward the field of entertainment, snubbed the likes of John McEnroe, Jane Fonda, Barbara Walters, Madonna, and Boy George, expressing an overall contempt for these products of our culture. However, after reflecting on the situation, Staab and assistant editor-in-chief, senior Sarah Fremmerman, agreed that controversy is the spice of an editorial position.

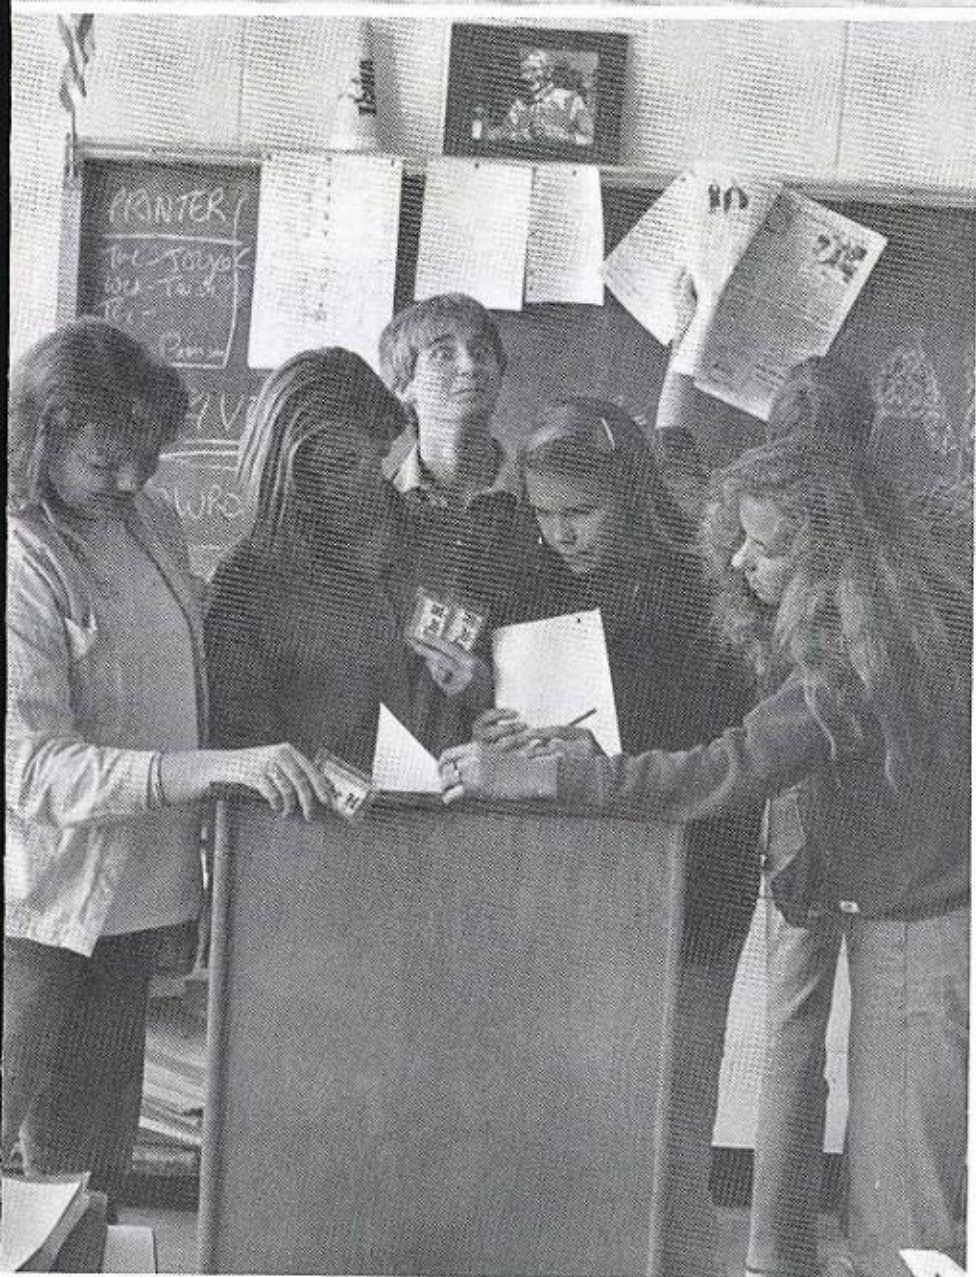

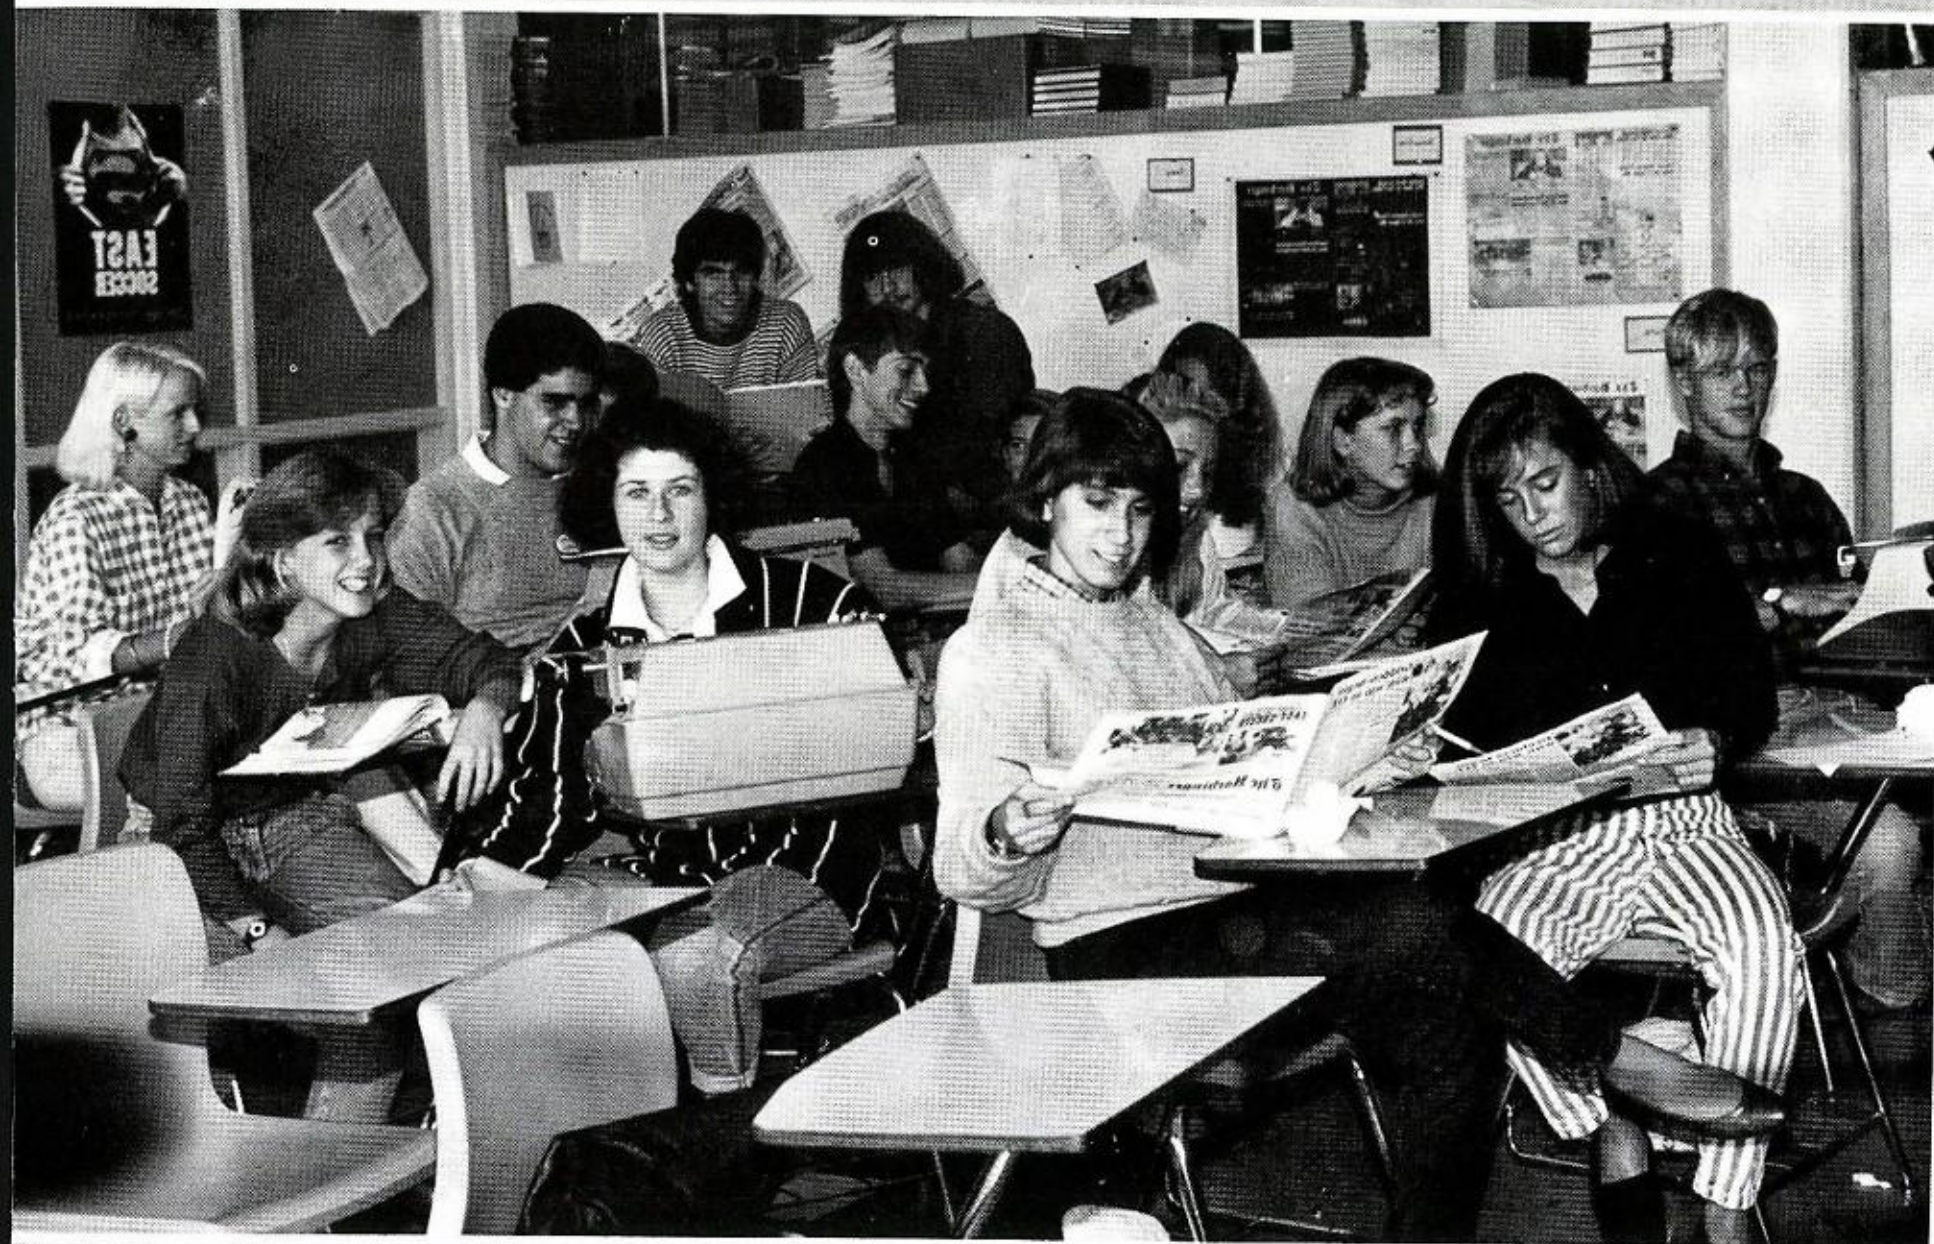

As editor, Staab placed an emphasis on subject research, hoping to attain more overall depth in material. As for potential topics, Staab explained, "Our main priority is to report on subjects that affect East students; however, we realize that boundaries extend beyond the school."

The Harbinger underwent several changes this fall. As a result of the huge number of students enrolled in journalism classes, Harbinger advisor, Robert Dillon, adopted a new policy which eliminated Journalism III. Consequently, no person is able to work on the paper more than once. Though the editors felt the lack of experience was a cause of mild confusion, the new plan provided for a greater variety of literary styles.

Fremmerman reflected, "I was hoping we would be able to do something really off-the-wall, but a school paper requires more organization than nonconformity would allow." Nevertheless, in spite of its traditional format, the Harbinger bounded into this year with a handful of colorful and informative new columns, including a series on the various aspects of college.

Newspapers Change, but Goals Stay The Same

by Kathy Morris

"Whate'er men do, or say, or think, or dream,

Our motley paper seizes for its theme."

Pope's motto from The Tatler (an 18th century paper) still adequately describes the work of The Harbinger journalists who daily recorded the events as they happened. What the students did about the new seat belt law, said about the four year high school, or thought about the proposed Indian Hills closing, The Harbin- ger seized for its theme.

Besides reporting the news, the staff tackled several other tasks during the spring semester. Jeff Bechthold, Alex Henson, Beth Jennings, and Nancy Staab won awards in the regional journalism competition held at the University of Kansas in February. However, the staff's main responsibility was getting The Harbinger out each week. Henson, editor-in-chief, reflected, "Every week I had to do ten different things at the same time." Adding to the confusion was the number of six page papers this semester. After the first three issues, Carolyn West, news editor, stated, "The ad staff is great. So far, they've sold so many ads that the paper had to be six pages instead of the usual four. This has kept everyone really busy."

Despite the chaos of weekly publication, Margaret Keough, photography editor, believed, "The semester went pretty smoothly." She added, "The paper looked better than it ever had before." The most noticeable change in The Harbinger this spring was the new headline type. Sarah Fremerman, feature editor and three-semester staffer, said, "Each semester is basically the same, except now we have new headlines."

Organized Chaos

by Matt Sheffield

"Whoops! I just cut Ron Baker's head off!" ... "That's nothing — I just spilled Coke on my final copy!" ... "I know I had that page of negatives in my back-pack this morning!"

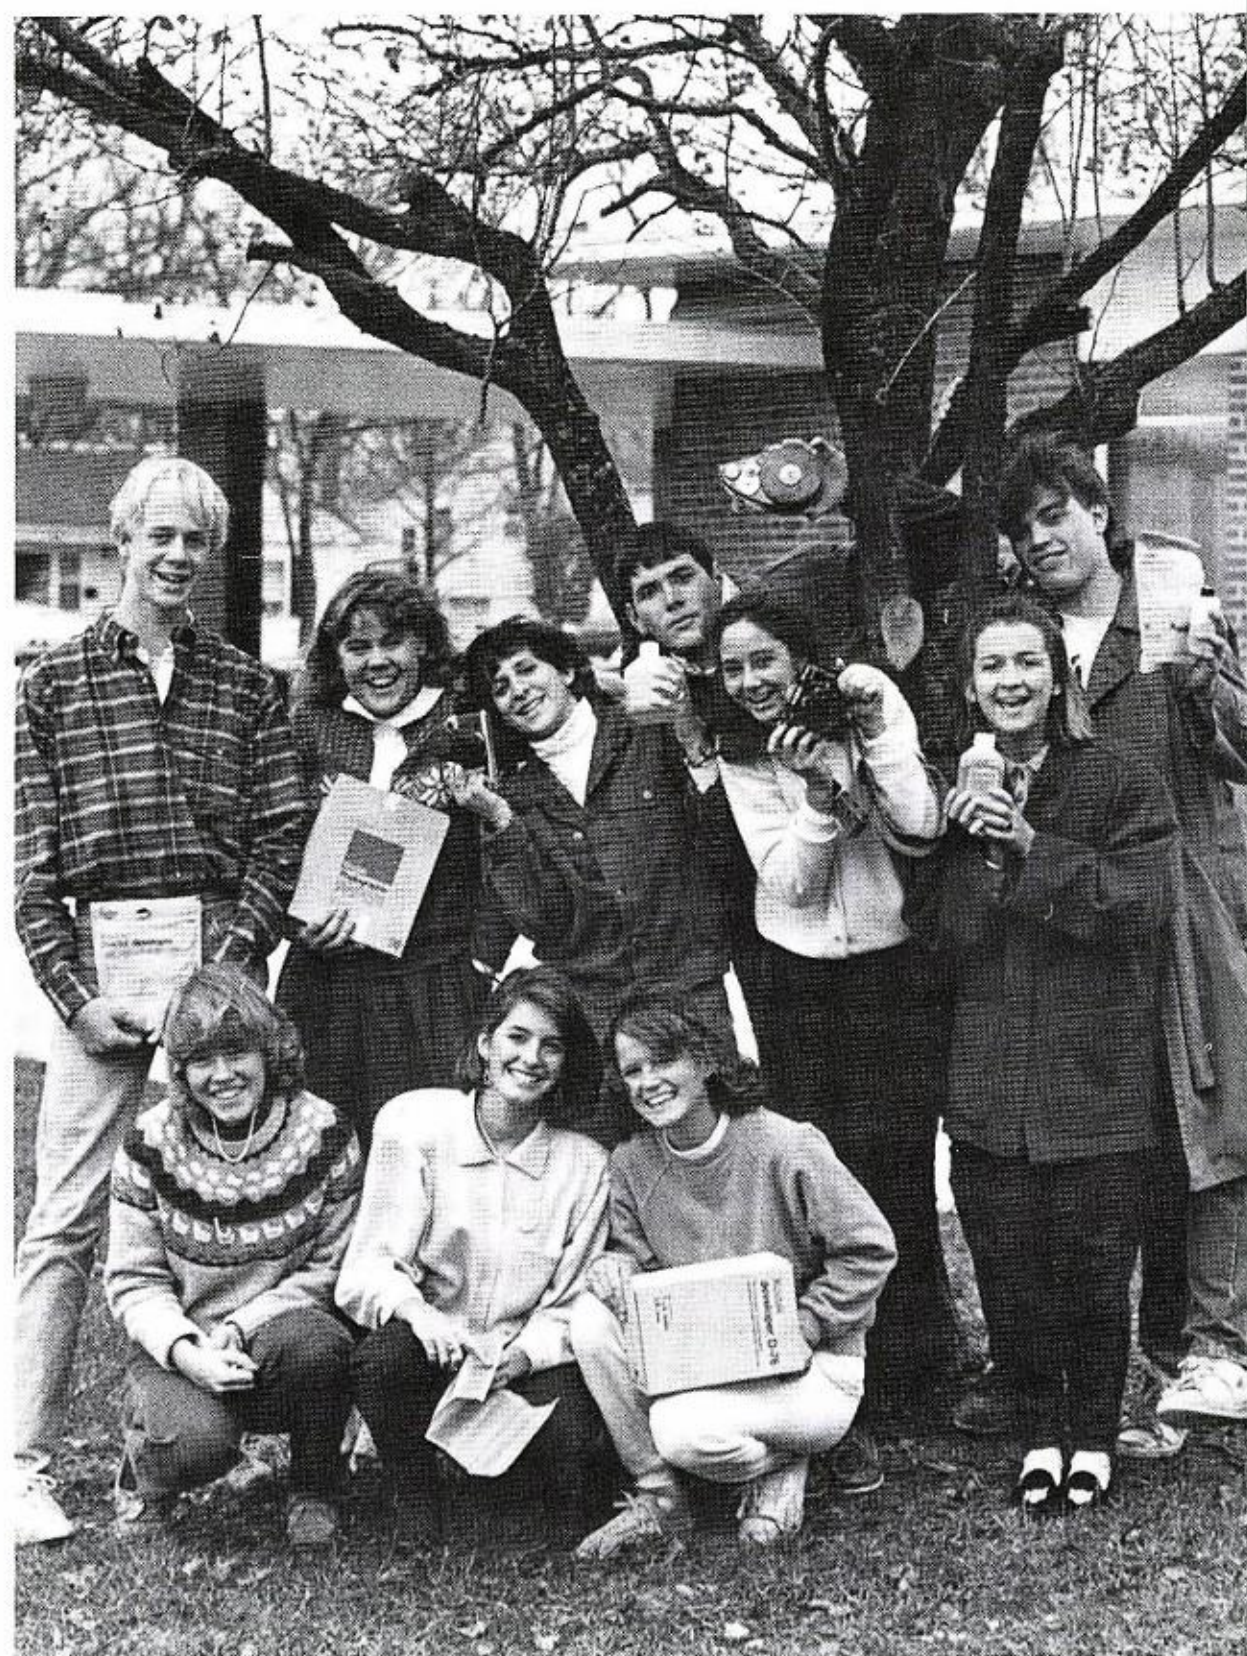

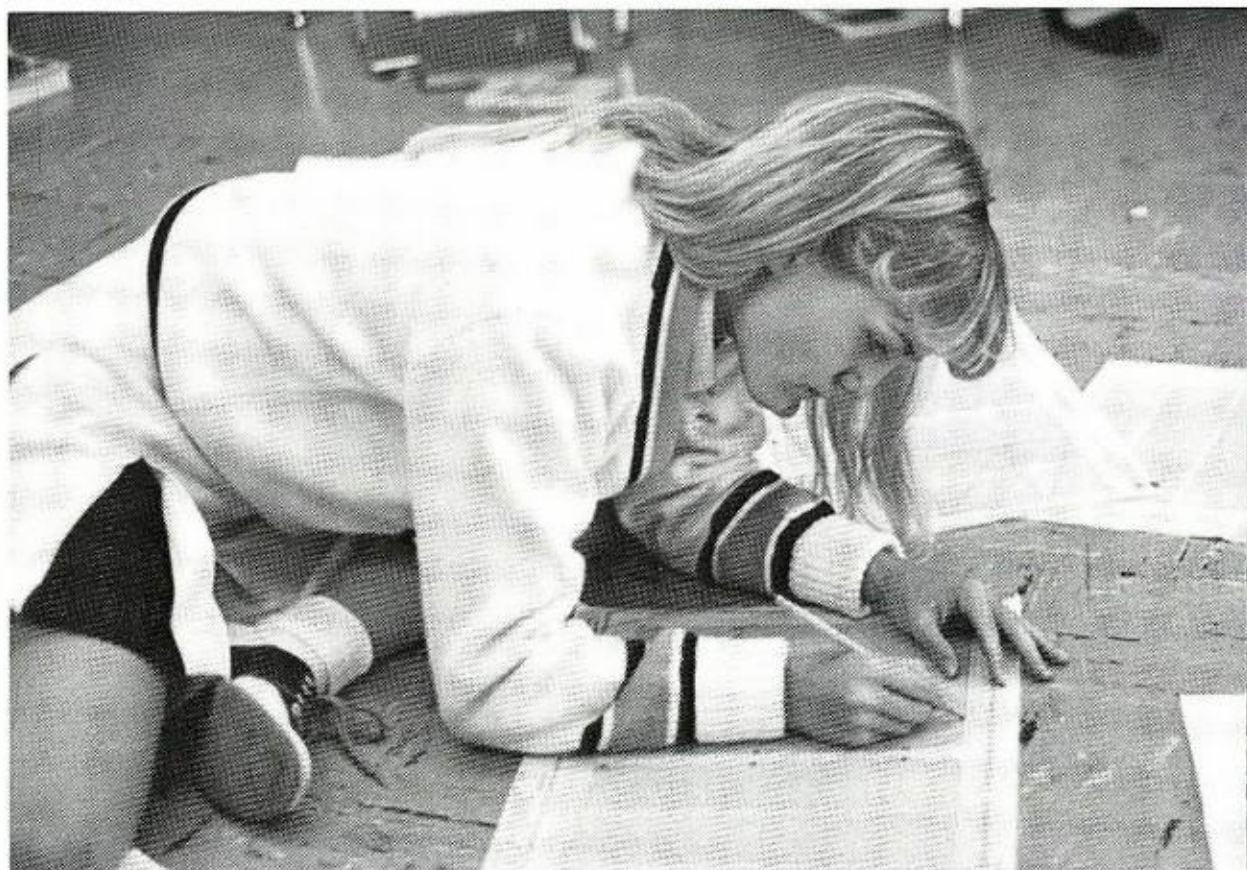

These are just a few famous quotes from the 1985-86 Hauberk staff. Yes, it sounds somewhat chaotic, but assuredly everything was under control.

"I vomited the first three weeks from anxiety," joked this year's new sponsor, Donna Skates, "but now I look forward to seventh hour every day. The kids are not only responsible, but also entertaining; they have been fun to get to know."

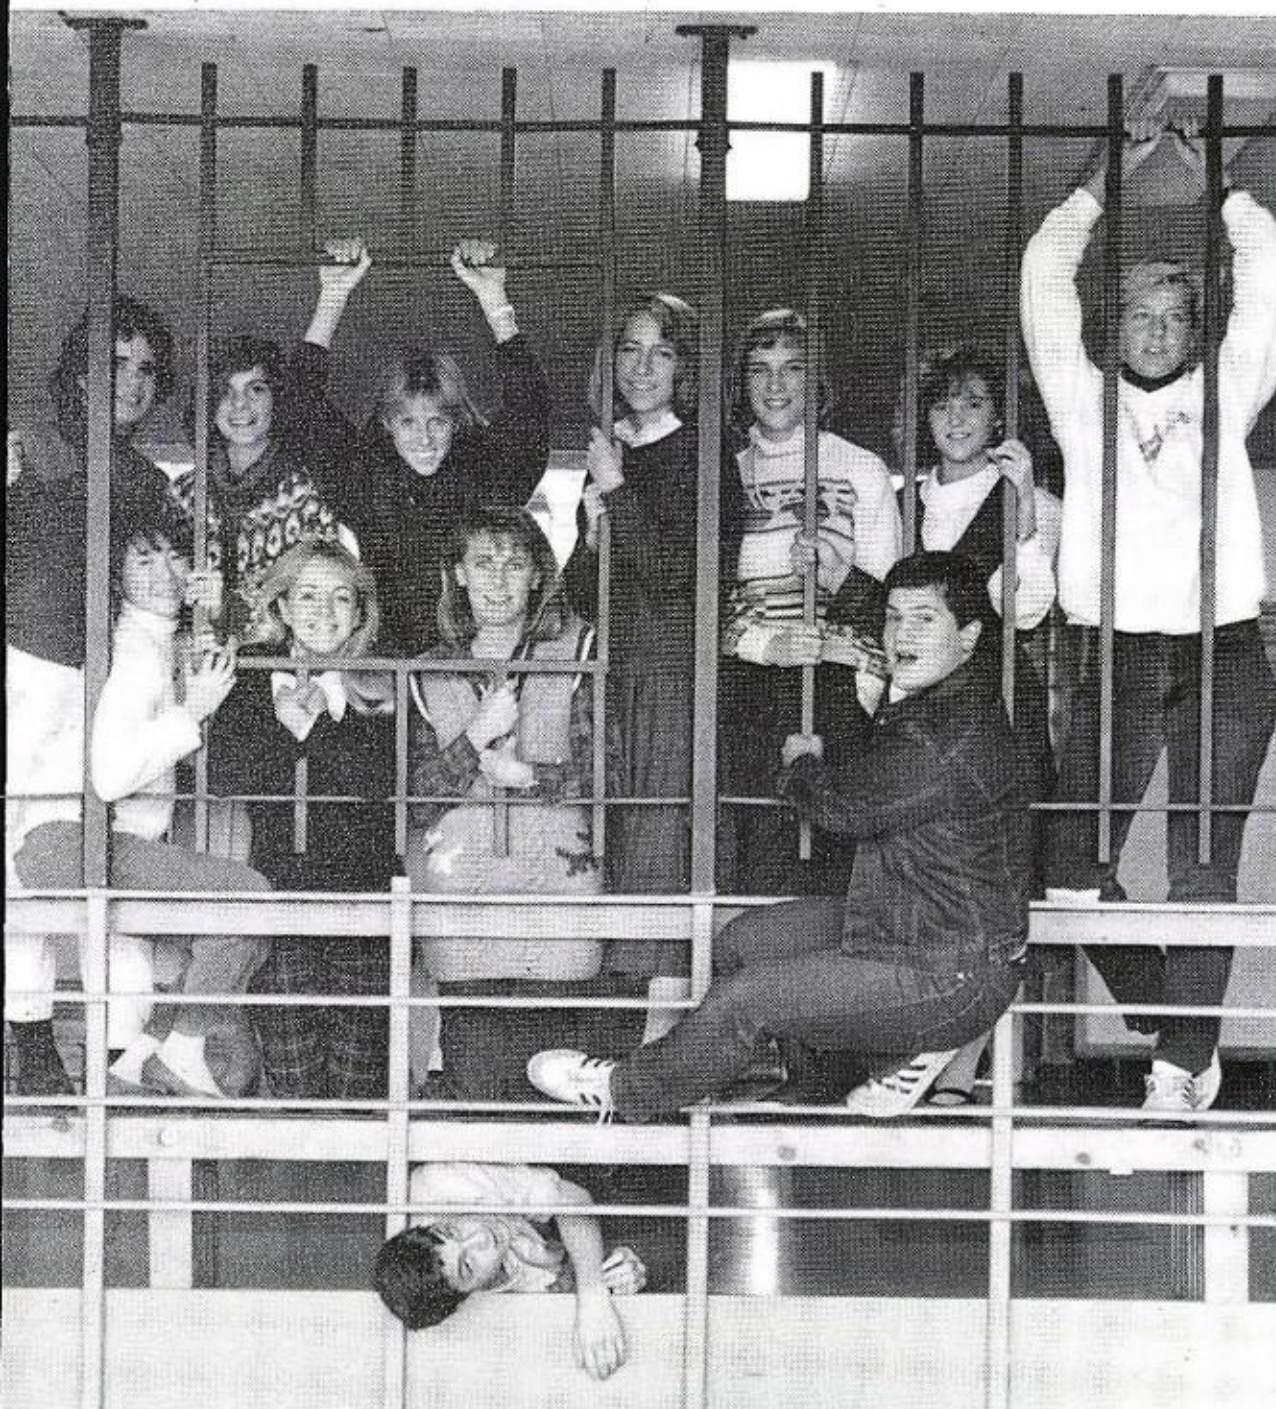

Skates, who replaced Kirk Winters as sponsor, tackled the responsibility for her first time ever. Also, some new additions were made to the format of the book. The faculty section was revised and the mini-mag was enlarged to 32 pages. Editor-in-chief Jill Schoolman explained, "It was a challenge to start out the year without an adviser, but it gave us the opportunity to develop new ideas and plans."

Skates claimed, "At first I was overwhelmed with terms such as picas, mugs, and 3-C copies, but now I can talk to two people and do three things at the same time. It is organization that keeps it running so smoothly. The yearbook is similar to a business — but a fun business." Schoolman stressed that communication is what held the staff together.

Seventh hour in room 119 meant typewriters clattering, photographers dashing in and out, writers bouncing ideas off each other, and deadlines approaching quickly. Senior writer Heather Terril exclaimed, "It's a zoo in here, but I love it!"

East's Changing Voice

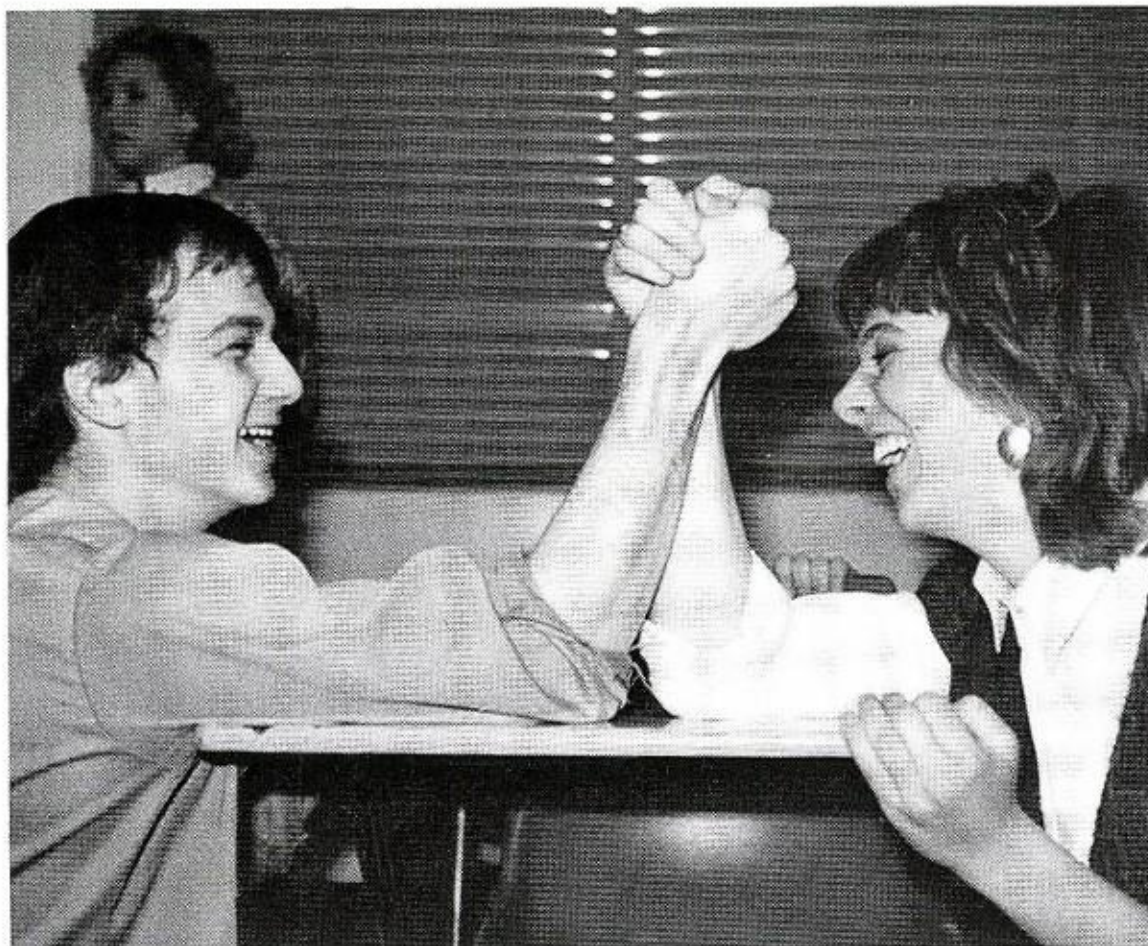

by Ruthie Harrison

When seniors Sarah Fremmerman and Jared Goldstein took on the job of co-editors of SM East's literary magazine, they agreed many changes were necessary. Fremmerman explained, "Part of the excitement was the challenge of making the best issue to date." The staff felt it was time for a new image. So, to start things off, the name was changed from the Labyrinth to Voice. According to Fremmerman, "The name Labyrinth brought an image of something that was tedious and hard to get through. Voice on the other hand conveyed the idea of a magazine which served merely as a sounding board for student expression."

Under the watchful eye of Geoff DiBello, Sgt. at Arms, the staff held a party at an empty house in Westport to raise money and generate interest. Also by being more tolerant of freestyle writing, the staff hoped to receive more entries from a varied group of people. As Laura Rozen, junior, explained, "There is a lot of talent at East that goes untapped; we want to give that talent an opportunity to be seen." Cynthia Belmont, senior, summed up the goals of the group: "Students need a means for expressing their ideas; Voice gives them that opportunity."

Choirs Strike The Right Note

by Diane Roberts

A quiet hum is heard as the audience falls silent. The director's arms are raised. Voices burst forth in sound — another performance has begun.

These performances are produced by the SM East Choral Music Department which is composed of the Choraliers, Chamber Singers (an ensemble of singers selected from the Choraliers), the Concert Choir, and the Girls' Choir. Every student at East is eligible for membership in one of the groups where singing together is the key ingredient for musical understanding and enjoyment.

Each choir is organized according to the age and musical skill of each student. During the spring, singers were evaluated on pitch memory, accuracy of rhythm, tone quality, and sight singing for the following year.

The choirs, directed by Dan Zollars, performed many times throughout the year. Traditionally, the popular Holiday Vespers and Masterworks concerts are highlights of the year. Other annual events include the Fall and Spring Concerts. In addition to performing purely for enjoyment, the Choraliers, Lancer Men, and Girls' Choir participated in the State Music Festival for rating and critique. "East has always upheld high standards of performance at these evaluations," stated Zollars.

As added highlights this year, the Choraliers were invited to sing at the UMKC Choral Arts Festival, and they sang at the dedication of the Veterans' Memorial. Also, the Lancer Men sang along with all the Shawnee Mission schools in the annual convention of Barber Shop Quartets in Johnson County.

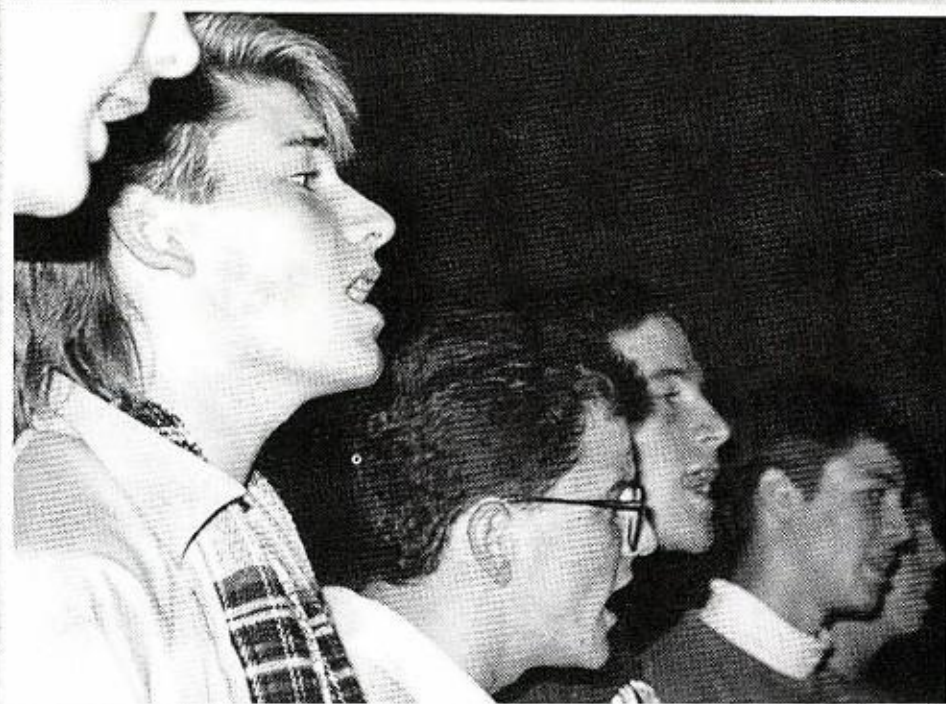

Comparing this year's choir with ones in the past, Zollars concluded, "Each choir is different. Each has its own distinct sound and personality."

Strummin' It Up

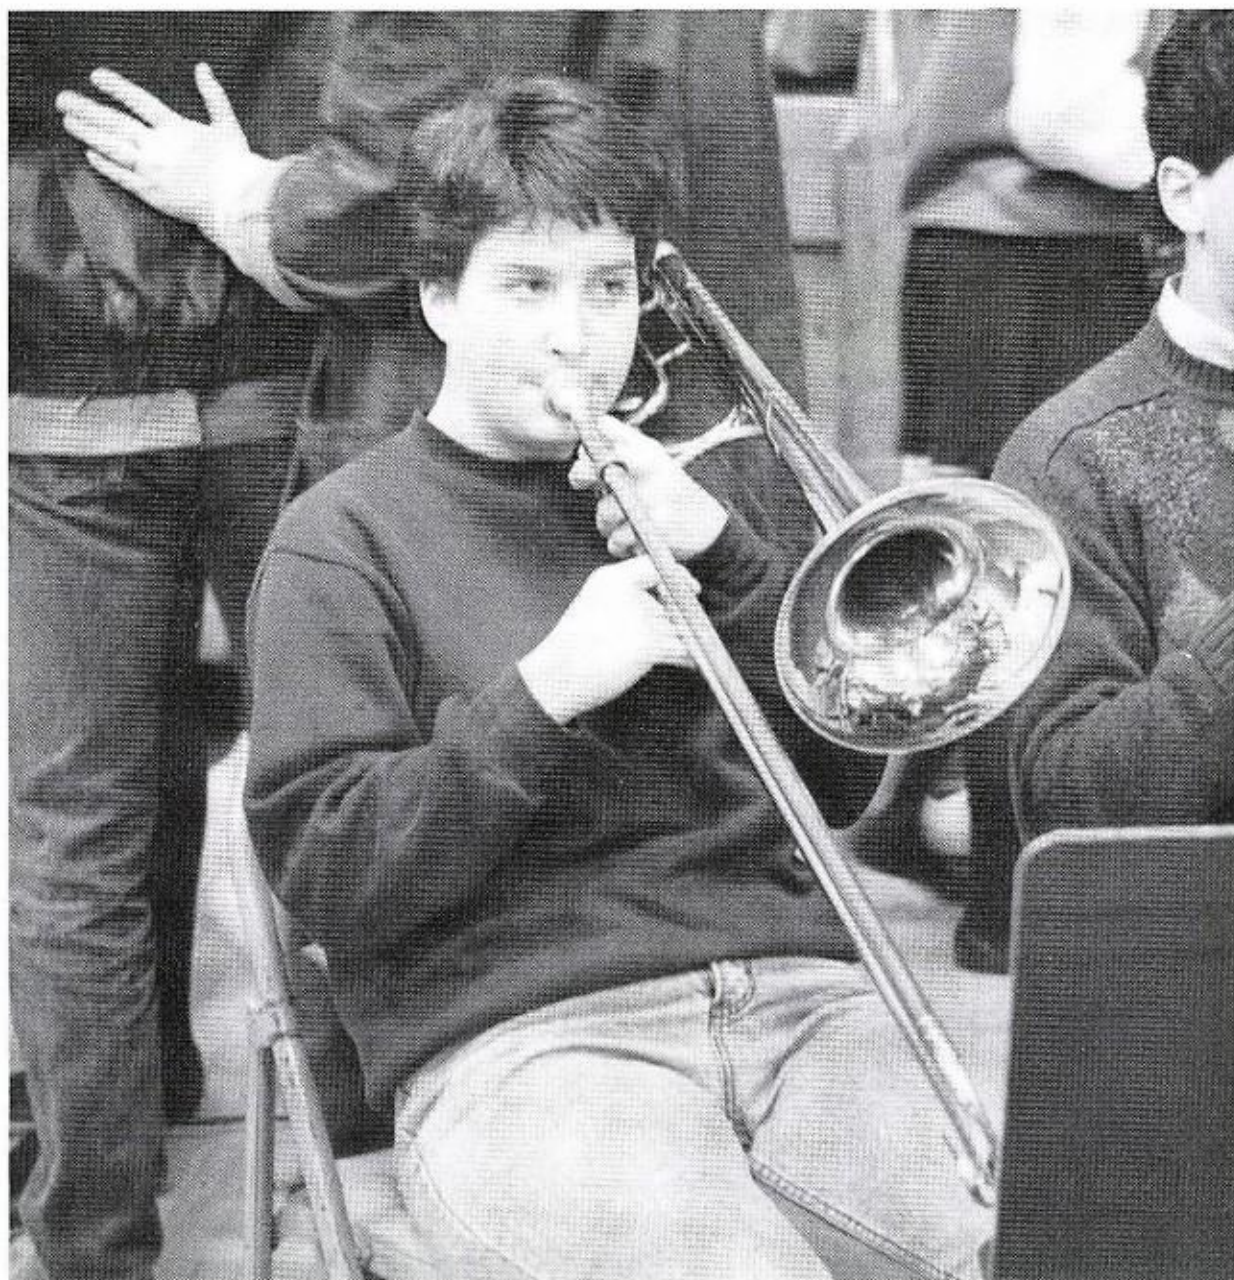

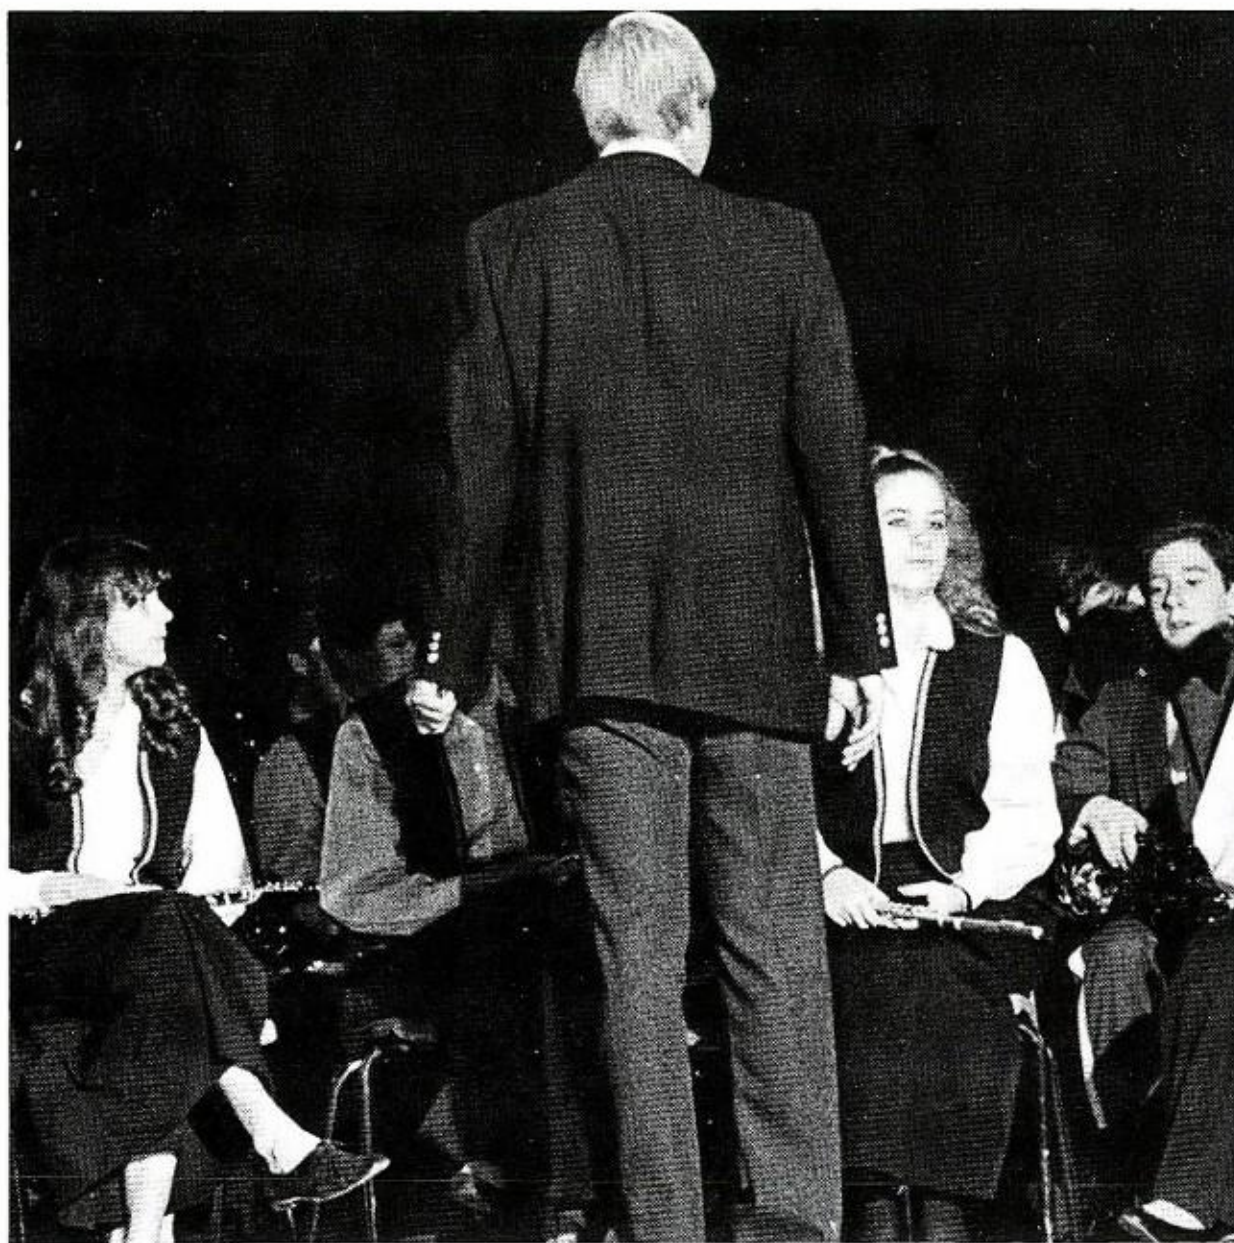

by Jessie Ullmann

With the beat in their feet and the music in their minds, the SM East marching band experienced another successful year. Senior drum major John Neill and junior drum major Najeb Ahmed led the way.

Although the marching band is often seen performing at the football games, the pep band, concert band and jazz band, whose members are also part of the marching band, can be seen throughout the year directed by William Leafblad. There are many competitions and festivals that the band participates in throughout the year, but unfortunately this year the annual marching band competition was cancelled due to bad weather.

However, through a tape tryout, the East band was selected to be among the five bands in the state having the honor of playing at the State Music Convention sponsored by the KMEA. The band was also involved in the Music Festival, a competition event for choir, band, and orchestra, which was attended by schools from several districts.

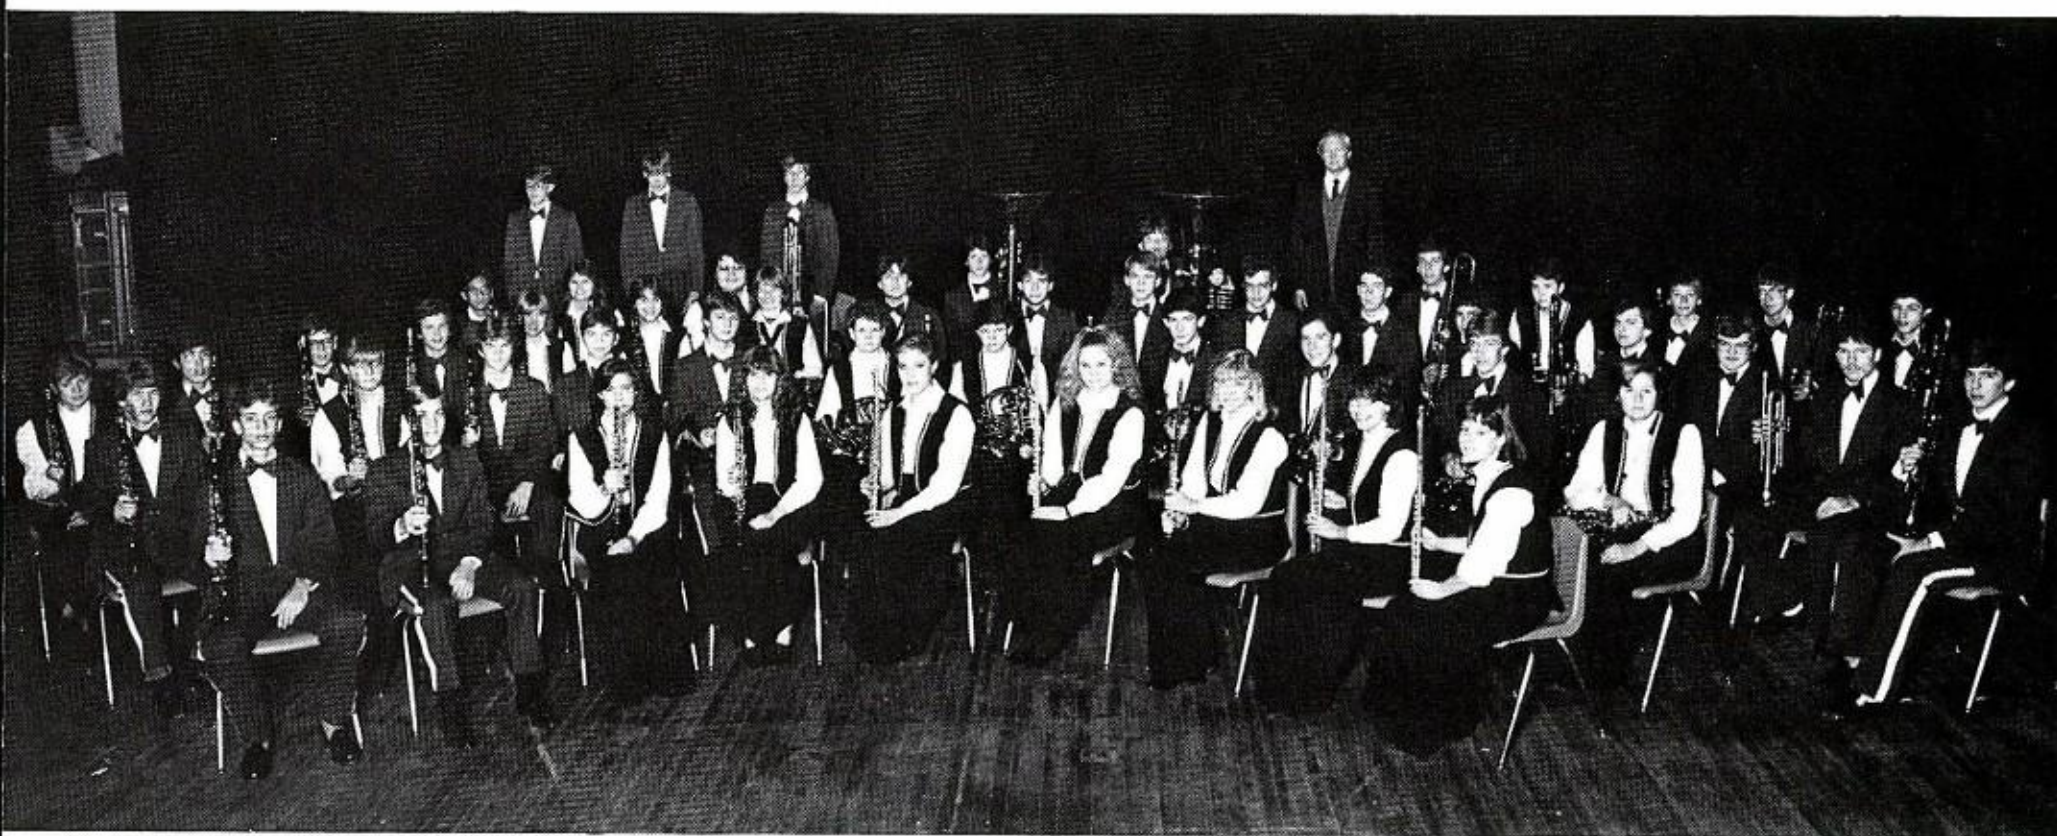

Eighteen members of the East band were chosen to be on the District Band this year. Junior Steve Neptune described the year by saying, "We really have a good time, and when we set our minds to it, we can be a top-notch band."

Mozart, Schubert, And All That Jazz

by Judy Skaptason

There once was an orchestra director who traveled from a faraway land named New Jersey to Kansas. He brought his skill as a musician, his new ideas and hopes, and a different style. He replaced Kenneth Tebow and taught his students Schubert, Mozart, and added a new sound ... jazz.

Jonathan Lane has found that SM East students possess a "higher respect for the arts" as compared to the students back home. "It's a very different situation

... not difficult, just different." His main goal involved teaching students more "quality American music" such as jazz.

Because Tebow, his predecessor, mainly stayed with the classics, Lane has received varied reactions from his students. Kelly Fickel, junior, explained, "We really miss Mr. Tebow sometimes, and it's hard to adjust to a new teacher."

But senior Katherine Brillhart commended Lane by adding, "He's got a different idea of teaching and different styles of music, like jazz, which is good."

Eric Defonso, senior, agreed that Lane has introduced "many different composers, or more so than usual, stylewise" because he is "more apt to try new things."

Although Lane admitted that directing has been "challenging" because of the students' demands for quality, he claimed that he definitely had "no interest for teaching again in New Jersey."

You Are My Sunshine . . .

By Judy Skaptason

"It's pure, light entertainment," claimed junior Lynne Eaton. In terms of the musical Little Mary Sunshine, "light" describes the type of humor taken straight from the old black and white silent films. Only here, "underneath a Colorado sky" can forest rangers become heroes, ladies from the East Chester Finishing School be engaged, and villains repent to become respectable citizens.

Several struggles exist in the mock 1930's play written by Rick Besoyan, including the theme of the government versus the Kadota Indians; Little Mary, senior Alison Smith, versus her overdue mortgage; and evil Yellow Feather, played by junior Mark French, attempting to "have his way" with Little Mary Sunshine.

Karen Helsing, who played a chorus girl, summed up the play in two words, "Super silly."

Although this year's musical was senior Jim Taylor's first, he claimed matter-of-factly that the "performances are fun, the costumes are fun, and Zollars was fun to work under because he doesn't mess around." Dan Zollars was in charge of musical directing, and Rod Carr was the director of stage movement and acting.

East Cultivates Future Politicians

by Juliana Proffitt

Shawnee Mission East is cultivating politicians, public servants, and political scientists of the future through the Young Liberals.

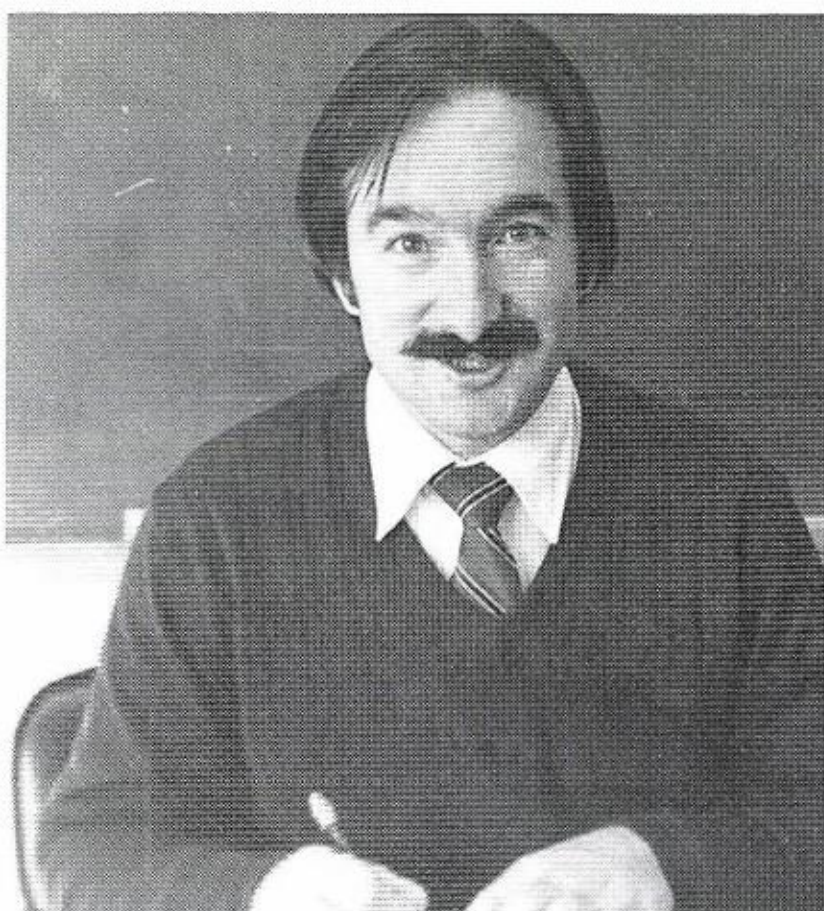

The group, sponsored by Paul DeBarthe, was new this year, the idea originating with Geoff Dibello, Jared Goldstein, and Margaret Keough in response to the Young Conservatives Club. "We just wanted to give the student body another view of political affairs," said Dibello.

The organization, meeting to discuss current issues, drew respectable crowds and roused considerable student interest. There were no officers — the position of chairman operated on a rotating basis, but committees were formed to concentrate on various specific areas such as international, domestic, and school and local affairs to keep members abreast of different issues.

The club organized debates, and in cooperation with their counterparts, the Young Conservatives, invited speakers to give presentations. Issues ranging from abortion to U.S. involvement abroad stimulated the Young Liberals of '85-'86, and next year's club, according to group organizers, promises to prove equally as thought provoking.

Young Conservatives: a New Approach to Old Ideas

by Jared Goldstein

The Young Conservatives Club was started this year after seniors Alex Henson and Max Harvey heard of a similar club at Pem-Day. Said Henson, "We thought it sounded like a good idea. We wanted to get students involved in political issues."

With Henson and Harvey as co-chairmen, the Young Conservatives organized themselves as a real political force at SM East. Almost immediately another club, the Young Liberals, was created to counter the Young Conservatives. The conservatives held meetings on U.S. involvement in Central America and on abortion. Said Henson, "We try not to be dogmatic about politics. We wish to openmindedly examine the issues before reaching a conclusion. We don't just automatically take the conservative side on everything."

But just what is conservatism? Emerson Wilson, sponsor, said, "When you get right down to it, a conservative is really a liberal, and vice versa."

The club planned to hold debates with the Young Liberals and hoped to bring in outside speakers. Henson said, "If we pool our resources with the Young Liberals, we may be able to bring in someone big." Summing up, Wilson said, "Most students are afraid to take a position on anything, and that attitude is what we're trying to change. Today high school, tomorrow the White House!"

Is The Doctor In?

by Judy Skaptason

Shrill cries of pain echoed through the auditorium. It seemed as though a dastardly murder was occurring. Yet, it was only senior Stu Sanks, who played the aching priest, having one tooth (unfortunately the wrong tooth) pulled.

The skit was one of many "vignettes" which comprise Neil Simon's comedy, The Good Doctor, a parody of Anton Chekhov's short stories depicting Russian life at the turn of the century.

The author, portrayed by senior Mark Hansen, had several soliloquies and acted as a narrator. Hansen explained, "It's like the Twilight Zone; both Rod Serling and the author have the same purpose."

This year's fall play was Missy Taylor's third major production as director, and she claims it was "certainly the best job done so far." The cast had to work "more in depth in creating comic characters."

Spencer Brown, senior, added, "The Good Doctor taught us about comic pauses and delivering comical statements. It was an incredible learning experience."

Although the competition was tough because of the World Series and the Tina Turner concert, senior Jane Baden, the House Manager, remarked, "Really the turn out for the play was good; people had a positive reaction to it."

The Thespian Monster

by Laura Rozen

What has ten legs, five heads, and makes a lot of noise? The Thespian executive board: senior Sarah Fremerman, president; junior Jeff Hopkins, first vice president; senior Kevin Burch, second vice president; senior Stu Sanks, treasurer; and junior Cori McBride, secretary.

Troop 1806 of the International Thespian Society was described by one anonymous member as "just a bunch of fanatics who like to do things on stage." This rather diverse group of talented eccentrics was united by only one interest — their common love of the theater. A flair for drama was shown by Thespian members when they dressed up as their favorite characters for a Halloween dance; however, some members didn't need an excuse to get all decked out. For example, senior Stu Sanks could have been mistaken any number of times throughout the year for entertainment's new king of comedy, Pee Wee Herman. ("I know you are but what am I?")

It took a very courageous individual to lead this group of energetic performers. Rod Carr fit the bill as he has a degree in drama and a flair for the unusual as well. One of their programs offered an opportunity to see the hit Broadway musical, Forty-Second Street, when it came to the Midland Center for Performing Arts last November. In Carr's words, the production was "real Broadway stuff."

Other Thespian programs included hosting speakers on various topics pertaining to the media; attending local plays, musicals, and movies; holding video parties; and even just meeting on a couple of Sunday afternoons for a game of touch football. SM East Thespians also took part in the Kansas State Thespian Festival, which took place in Wichita during a weekend in late September. Throughout the conference, high school performers had a myriad of opportunities to perfect their art by participating in some friendly theatrical competitions. They also attended various sessions on acting and related fields of interest.

However, Thespians didn't enjoy all of these activities without a cost. Who do you think dished out popcorn and cokes at the basketball and football games? And who were those diligent construction, costume, and make-up crews that maintained the illusion of ease in the running of East's theatrical productions? The Thespians. As they say in show-biz, the Thespians deserve a great big hand.

East Rocks

by Laura Breneman

Music reverberated through the lunch room at SM East; each song pleased different people. "We try hard to make everybody happy with the music we play," explained Stephanie Wright, junior.

"There will always be criticism, but we do the best we can."

KSME, our resident radio station, consisted of 12 disc jockies who were enthusiastic about sharing their favorites and playing others' favorites as well. Having both the qualifications and experience needed, senior Jeff Derusseau served as station manager. Nine d.j.'s and two alternates completed the staff. Seniors: Jane Baden, Ted Blake, Mark Hanson, Pat Oliver, and Brad Adams. Juniors: Jason Ferney, Jeff Hopkins, Jim Mitchell, Curt Shirling, Stephanie Wright, and Sean Riley.

The sponsor, Rod Carr (known to KSME as "Hot Rod" because of his fast-paced life), believes it is important for students to be involved in school and thinks the radio station provides an opportunity to learn about the responsibilities of being a d.j.

Carr stated, "The people are more serious this year." He believes this resulted from having official tryouts. He added, "The final group wants to be here and takes its responsibilities seriously."

Staff members had varied opinions as to how KSME could be improved. One improvement Carr had in mind was to find a permanent location and develop a well-stocked record collection. "With the incoming freshmen, we'll probably have to change rooms, hopefully to a permanent place."

"We need better equipment and more records," stated Hanson. Blake optimistically confessed, "It's perfect!"

The Threshold Of Debating

by Matt Sheffield

Resolved: that the Federal government should establish a comprehensive national policy to protect the quality of water in the United States. Echoing this resolution through the tournament rooms nationwide this year, debaters quoted the EPA and debated "threshold and impact."

Coach Larry Brown stated, "It's a good topic. It was a good topic the year we debated water and air pollution. A lot of coaches who thought it was going to be a negative year were wrong. Apparently, water quality and quantity seem to be major concerns of many area residents."

This year, SM East held its 28th annual debate invitational tournament on November 15 and 16. It was the largest debate tournament East had ever hosted; 36 schools came to East to compete for the sweepstakes trophy won by SM South in 1984. This year, Oak Park High School won the coveted trophy.

Debaters from East did not debate in the East tournament; however, East debaters were allowed to attend up to eight tournaments during the debate season.

Debaters had to debate at least twenty rounds in order to earn a letter in debate.

Third-year letterman Bill Wolff recalled some of the students he debated: "One girl started to cry; one guy got sick and left the room to throw up; and one time this huge girl was drooling and snorting. She was intimidating, but we still won the round."

Senior Dave Motlagh added, "Debate is a good learning experience for those who are outgoing. I think more people should come out for debate. It's a sign of maturity."

Novice debater Stephanie Snyder concluded, "Debate is my life. Just ask my mother!"

Come On Down!

by Kathy Morris

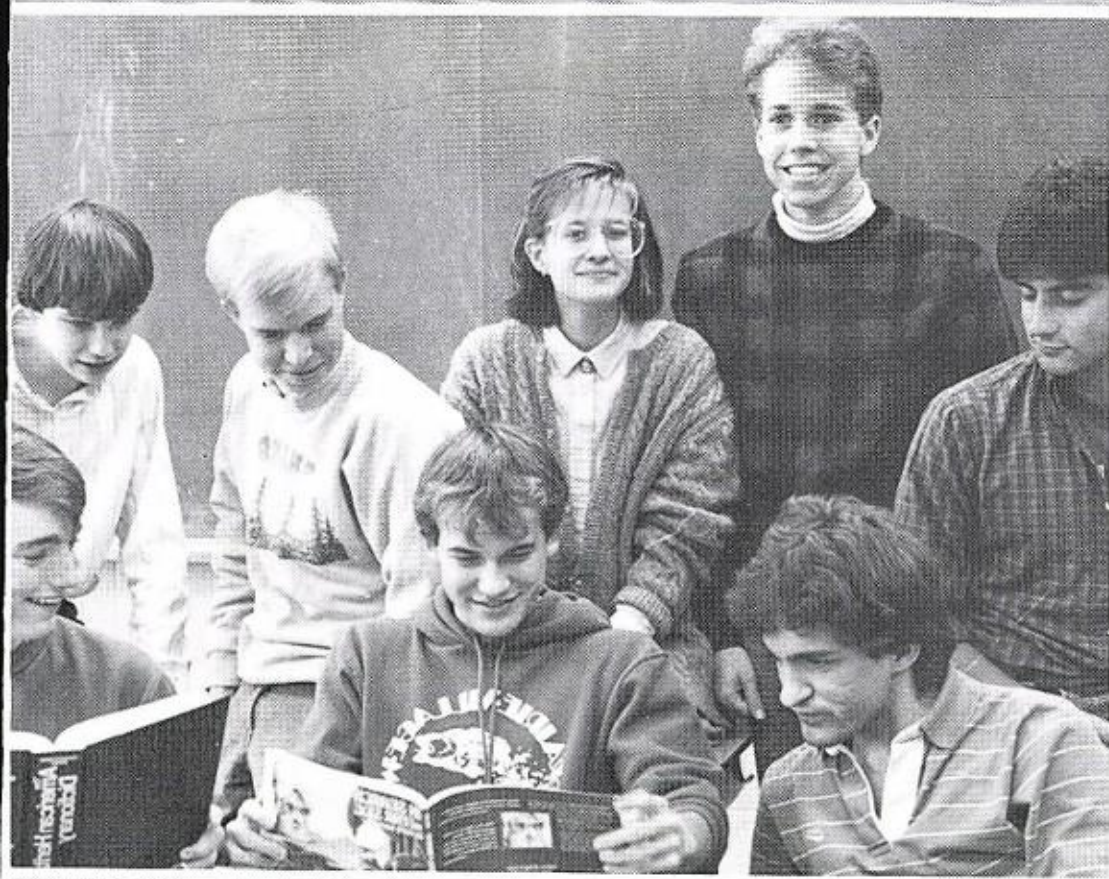

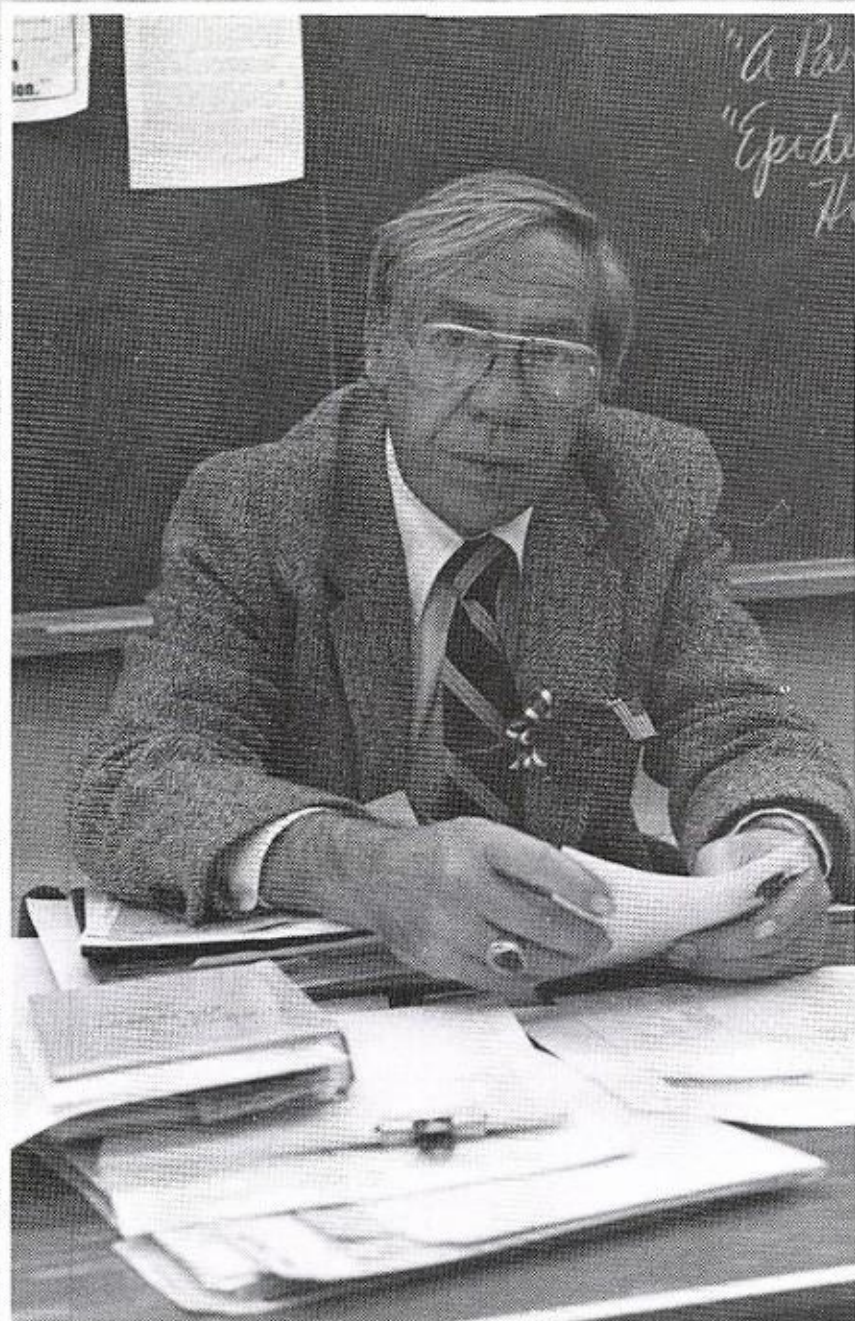

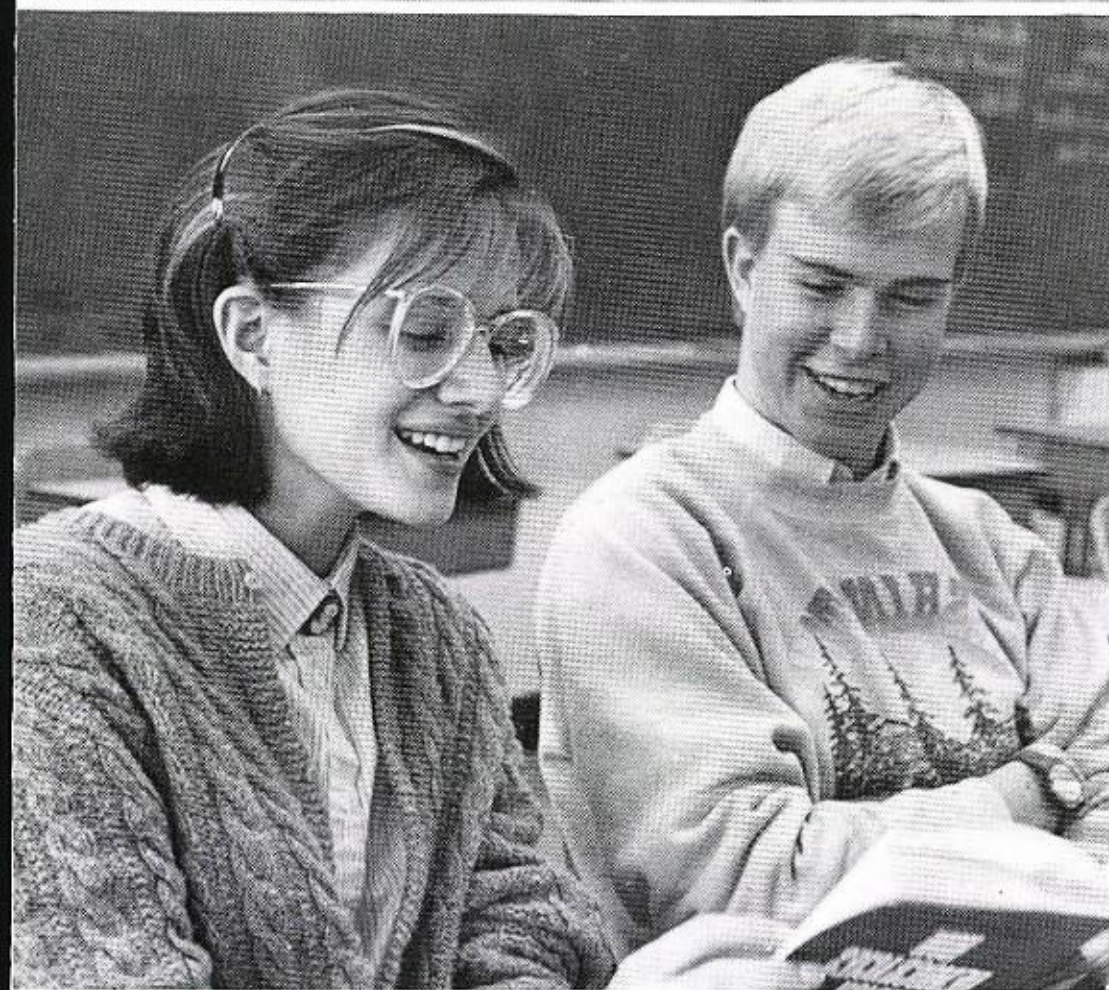

"I kept expecting Bob Barker to jump out from the set," exclaimed Nathan Frank, a senior member of the Categories team. Similar to television game shows, Categories is SM East's competitive quiz team which competed with other SM schools, Blue Valley, and both Olathe high schools. Elizabeth Morrison, a third year veteran, commented, "It's better than Jeopardy; however, I was disappointed my sophomore year to find out we didn't get prizes."

At the beginning of the year, anyone wishing to be a member took a general knowledge test. Everett Rees, sponsor, then chose nine members based on their performance on the test. This team had no practices for any of the competitions. Each competition was taped and shown on PVTv, channel 10A, where these "whiz kids" answered questions on the areas of science, history, geography, and literature.

The team played each school once and participated in Regionals. Then the four best teams advanced to the championships where East has excelled previously. Rees commented, "Success breeds success. We are traditionally a strong team."

This year's members were seniors Lee Allen, Eric Defonso, Nathan Frank, Max Harvey, Alex Henson, Jeremy Kohn, Elizabeth Morrison, and Kip Van Blarcom; the only junior member was Greg Wimpey.

When Students Talk, People Listen

by Heather Terril

"Um, East is . . . Well, we try to uh . . . Basically, we're um . . ." How would you describe Shawnee Mission East? This is the job of each member of the Student Speakers Bureau. "We are ambassadors to the community," stated PTA coordinator Mary Kay Graver. "We promote our school system to those who do not have much contact with the Shawnee Mission schools."

Members go in pairs to speak to such organizations as Rotary Clubs, realtors, and senior citizens groups. Each person makes a short presentation that includes facts about SM East such as how East compares to other schools in the nation, the kinds of activities offered, and the status of the different sports programs. The program is then opened for questions. Graver said that there were always many questions; "We've been very well received." The Student Speakers Bureau began three years ago and has been gaining popularity ever since, according to Graver.

Senior Stu Sanks described it as a lot of fun "even though I didn't get to do my Pee Wee Herman imitation."

No Mumbo Jumbo

A picture worth a thousand words? Not a chance — at least not to members of SM East's forensics team, sponsored by Mr. Rod Carr. But before launching into any fiery debates over the issue — BEWARE! These talking heads are no simple minds. Choose your words sparingly, 'cause talk ain't cheap to these guys.

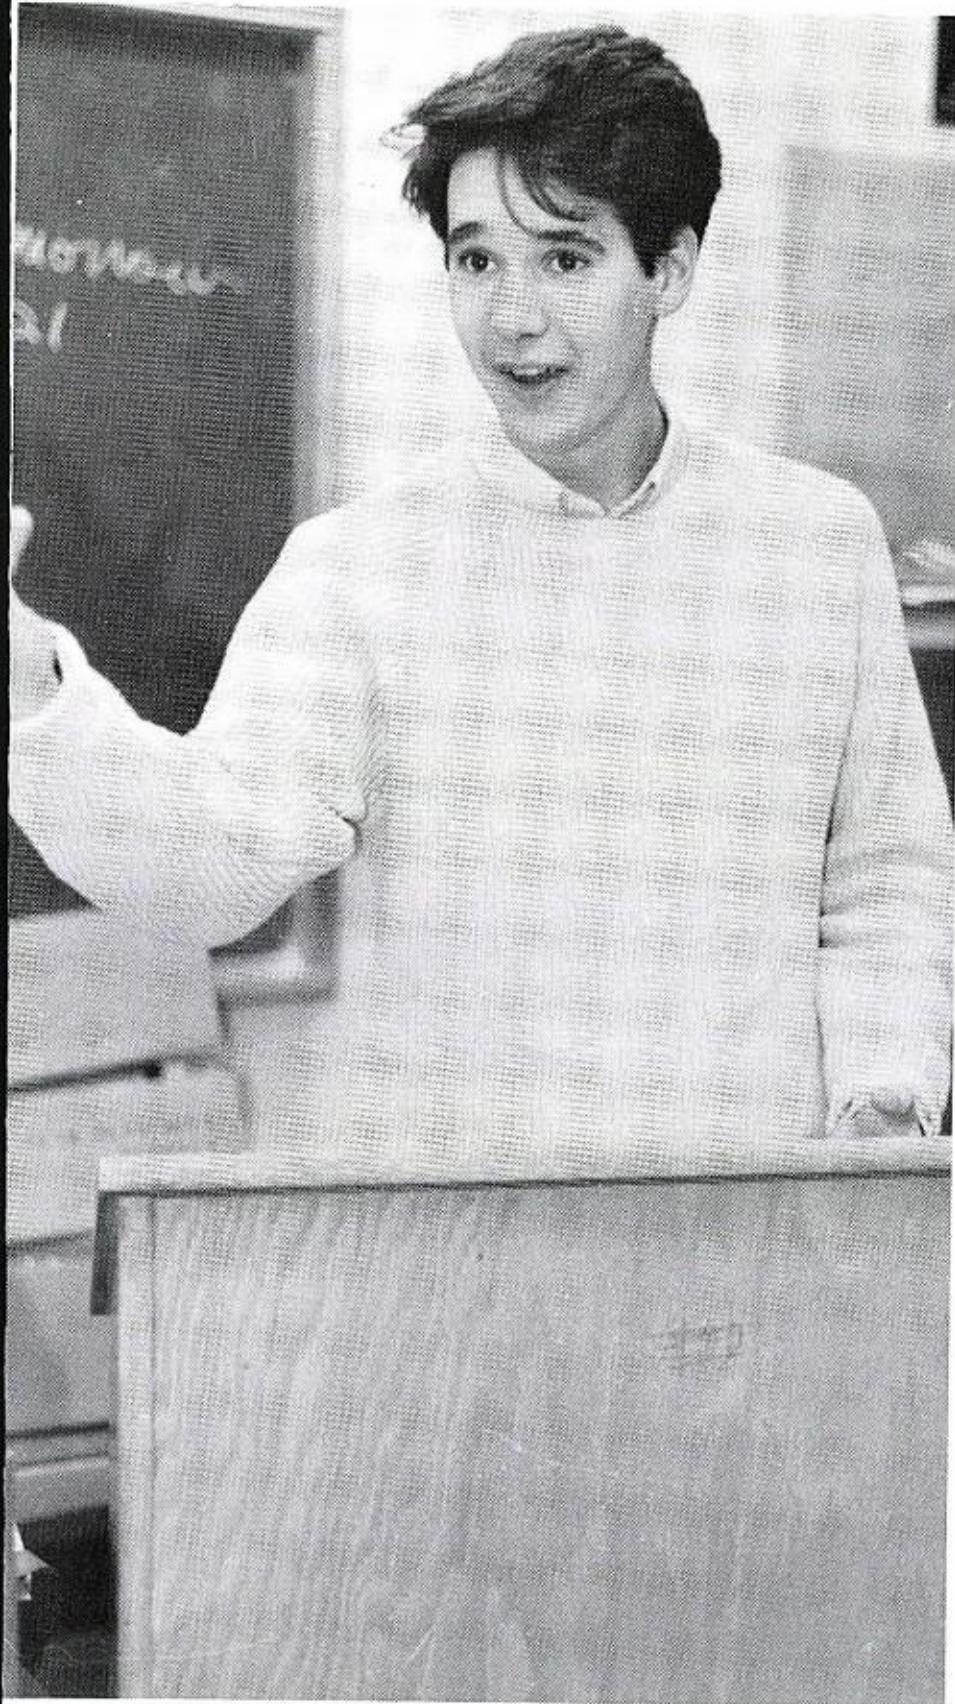

Come spring, when laryngitis season has ended, National Forensic League mouths start jabbing and persist throughout all second semester. Larry Brown who sponsored debate first semester, NFL's corresponding fall activity, coached the debate areas of forensics. In total, these areas included one-on-one debating, dramatic interpretation, humorous interpretation, duet acting, improvisational duet acting, original oration, domestic extemporaneous speaking, foreign extemporaneous speaking, and informational speaking.

As all students in forensics work on a point system, the highest degrees possible are those of Distinction (250 points), and Special Distinction (500 points). In the former are seniors Bill Wolff, Steve Horner, and Matt Sheffield, and junior Kory Ireland. Having earned the degree of Special Distinction are seniors Kevin Ireland and Nathan Frank, both of whom attended Nationals last June.

Commenting on his favorite speech, Brown chose one on quicksand, which he heard at nationals. "But as for an East speech, it focused on the abominable snowman."

SHARE-ing Time

by Juliana Profitt

Who passed out doughnuts after school for no apparent reason? SHARE did.

This was just one of their many gestures of friendliness this year. SHARE, Students Helping in Areas Related to Education, is a service organization sponsored by counselor Debbie Atkinson. The organization was involved in a number of activities, but primarily, members served as guides and greeters at school and community functions.

"We have many sophomore members who have a lot of energy and are looking for an outlet," said junior Laura Rozen, a member of the executive committee. SHARE, with its affiliation with SADD, Students Against Drunk Driving, attracted people with present and past drug or alcohol problems and students who just were interested.

Something new this year was the Buddy System. Betsy Robertson, junior, chaired the project, which aimed at extending a helping hand to new students. Students were adopted by a SHARE member who made them feel welcome by hosting a special breakfast for them and by being available to answer questions.

SHARE's traditional ambassador and health education programs, headed by senior Susan Durham, presented drug and alcohol prevention programs to elementary and junior high students. The aim of the committee was not to make judgments but to give facts. The annual SADD campaign was conducted as well. "I think SADD is the best thing they do... drunk driving needs to be talked about," commented junior Brian Matthys.

Holding assemblies to promote student awareness was another of SHARE's activities. To raise the money needed to pay for speakers, the club held a sweatshirt sale in the fall.

Senior Alexandra Pompushko said, "SHARE is an excellent opportunity for students in high school to make a difference in the community. It's a meaningful organization."

Becoming Fiscally Fit

by Jared Goldstein

DECA, Distributive Education Clubs of America, is "for students who are interested in business and want to get a head start," explained senior Kala Eichhorn, president of DECA. The club links students with members of the business community and gives them practical experience in sales, public speaking, and promotions. DECA members learn leadership skills and civic responsibilities.

At East, DECA is composed entirely of students who are enrolled in Marketing and Retailing I or II. Although membership is optional to students enrolled in M and R, seventy-five percent are members, estimated sponsor Julie Barklage. Membership increased this year to fifty-five with the addition of a second Marketing and Retailing I class.

DECA members learn skills which are important in a business career by planning and participating in various activities. At the annual state conference in Wichita, DECA members demonstrated these skills and were judged by members of the business world. This year's club raised money from a carnation sale; they also planned a civic project. DECA also offers students on-the-job training, or OJT, to qualified members. This year, at least twenty DECA members participated in the OJT program.

East's DECA chapter is in its fifteenth year.

A Touch Of Culture

by Laura Breneman

Culture. That's what the German Club is all about. "I think it's important for students to be aware of lifestyles other than their own," explained sponsor Joel Nagel.

The German Club is not really a club in the traditional sense of the word. There are no officers, and meetings are called only for special occasions. Unlike other clubs, the German Club automatically includes as members everyone enrolled in German. "I think it's a good idea because this way everyone is encouraged to get involved," stated sophomore Tracy Coughlin.

What exactly does the German Club do? It provides a chance for students to learn more about Germany through games, dances, songs and food. "Each Christmas we have a holiday dance which German students attend. We play German music and dance German dances. The students have a great time!" stated Nagel.

Last year the German Club spent much of its money making German video tapes. This year, they were promised special equipment needed to play them. "We're saving what money we have left in the treasury to make even more tapes when the equipment arrives," explained Nagel.

In the years to come, Nagel hopes to continue increasing the resources to promote better understanding of the German culture.

Around The World In A Club

by Jared Goldstein

"International Club is the school club which represents the world. It is the only club which has real global relevance," declared International Club president, senior Kristin Stoneking. The club's membership includes SM East's foreign exchange students and is open to any East student interested in intercultural experiences. The club provides support for the exchange students and an opportunity for them to share their culture. International Club also plans speeches from those who have experienced another culture and promotes the AFS program for students traveling abroad.

"This year's club has really gotten its act together," said sponsor Larry Brown. The sixty members were a record number for the club. Stoneking added, "We are much more active than ever before — we're having regular meetings for the first time, and they're well attended." This year's club also received a record number of applications from East students for

AFS. International Club had its annual Lobster Landing fundraiser and also helped to restore a World War I ambulance which will go on permanent display at the Liberty Memorial along with a plaque containing the names of all who worked on the project.

This year's International Club attempted to educate students about the fact that there is more in the world than a little building at 75th and Mission known as Shawnee Mission East High School.

Get Psyched!

By Matt Sheffield

Is your Id getting the best of your Superego? Have you found yourself making Freudian slips lately? The answers to your questions or the questions for your answers were probably discussed this year at one of the Psychology Club's meetings.

The Psychology Club, sponsored by Ken Swearingen, allows any interested student, whether enrolled in psychology or not, to be in its club. Senior Mark Kaufmann, club president, stated, "Students deal with a lot of pressure, and the Psychology Club gives us a chance to look at how we deal with those problems."

The club's activities included hosting the "Panel of Patients" from the state mental hospital, arranging for other speakers, doing community service work, sponsoring a student with a project in the R&D Forum, and holding discussions.

This year, the club purchased equipment to video-tape programs on subjects such as the brain, emotions, self-image, sex roles, Freud, and motivational studies.

So, if you discover that you're claustrophobic, astrophobic, ophidophobic, ailurophobic, agoraphobic, or triskaidekaphobic (see page 81 in 30 Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary for definitions), just stop by room 225 for a visit with the Psychology Club. However, if you discover that you are schizophrenic, please leave your "friends" at home.

Look Out: Lancers on Wheels

This year a club ... in the future a competitive varsity sport. In its second year, the Bike Club's ultimate goal is to make cycling a spring varsity sport in the SM district. Jon Neill, senior member, can already envision "the school track elevated at the curves for competitions." He added, "If East had a bike track, we would be unique."

Until that happens, "the club provides a means for people who are interested in cycling to meet others who share the same interest," stated Marcie Hechler, treasurer. This year's officers were senior Carl Damon, president; senior Mike Hile, vice-president; and junior Paula Bynan, secretary. Stan Moore, science teacher, was the sponsor.

Along with the officers, the energetic members ventured to Shawnee Mission Park and Stanley, Kansas, on rides that averaged anywhere from 10 to 45 miles.

Rides were planned to Clinton, Missouri, and the Ozarks for the serious cyclists.

Surprisingly, the club still functioned during the winter. Hechler stated enthusiastically, "We might buy bike riding suits made just for the cold." The club hoped to purchase special bicycle rollers to ride on in order to train for spring competition. Neill proclaimed, "Give cycling a chance. It's a popular sport."

Peanut Butter Crusades

by Laura Rozen

No, the Social Service Club is not a dating service, as some students mistakenly assumed. Rather, it is a project comprised of SM East individuals dedicated to community volunteer work.

Explained senior Heather Terril, vice president of the organization, "The purpose of the Social Service Club is to provide for people with special needs."

Started in the fall of this year by senior Jill Schoolman, the club organized various programs to benefit the community. Schoolman recruited fellow service-oriented seniors and sponsor Connie Lutz to get this project off the ground.

The officers of the club for its first year were seniors Jill Schoolman, president; Heather Terril and Sarah Fremerman, vice presidents; Larry Long, treasurer; and Laura Cohen, secretary. In addition to these executives were several committee chairmen, who oversaw such activities as the traveling clowns, headed by senior Larry Long, and Big Brothers/Big Sisters, headed by seniors Matt Sheffield and Kim Smith. All these groups, organized collectively under the umbrella organization of the Social Service Club, worked closely with the SM East Student Council and PTA to get people involved helping others in the Kansas City area.

Whether student involvement was in wrapping collection boxes for the holiday food drive, visiting pediatric hospital wards and geriatric centers in full clown attire, or even simply donating a jar of peanut butter for the city-wide Harvester's autumn collection, the satisfaction received by doing something for others was enough reward to recruit many dedicated volunteers. The organization collected 118 jars of peanut butter and 1,531 cans of assorted goods from the student body.

As senior Sarah Fremerman explained, "I just felt that I should be doing something like this instead of just talking about it!"

Positional Strategy

by Kathy Morris

Ever heard of a chess festival? SM East hosted one last January because the Kansas State High School Activities Association did not approve a chess "tournament." Paul DeBarthe, Chess Club sponsor, stated, "We bypass regular tournaments by having festivals. This way, we bypass the hassles."

Besides problems with the KSHSAA, which also does not recognize the state and national tournaments, the '85-86 Chess Club had difficulty because two of the best players, John Bauer and Jeff Vanet, moved away. However, DeBarthe stated, "Todd Chappel, Dan Mason, John Moberg, and Brett Hartman will carry the team if we go anywhere."

Calling himself the "coach, motivator, and basic instructor," DeBarthe taught the members to play a positional game for tournament chess. Speaking of his personal strategy, Todd Williams emphasized, "The conquest of the opposing queen is the consummation of a good chess game."

Adding to this, Jeff Hopkins comically remarked, "I like chess because it offers physical stimulation, and it keeps me in shape."

The members of the Chess Club gained more from tournament play than one might think. DeBarthe explained, "Chess has an impact on people's lives, it organizes them."

StuCo Changes but Keeps Traditions Alive

by Judy Skaptason

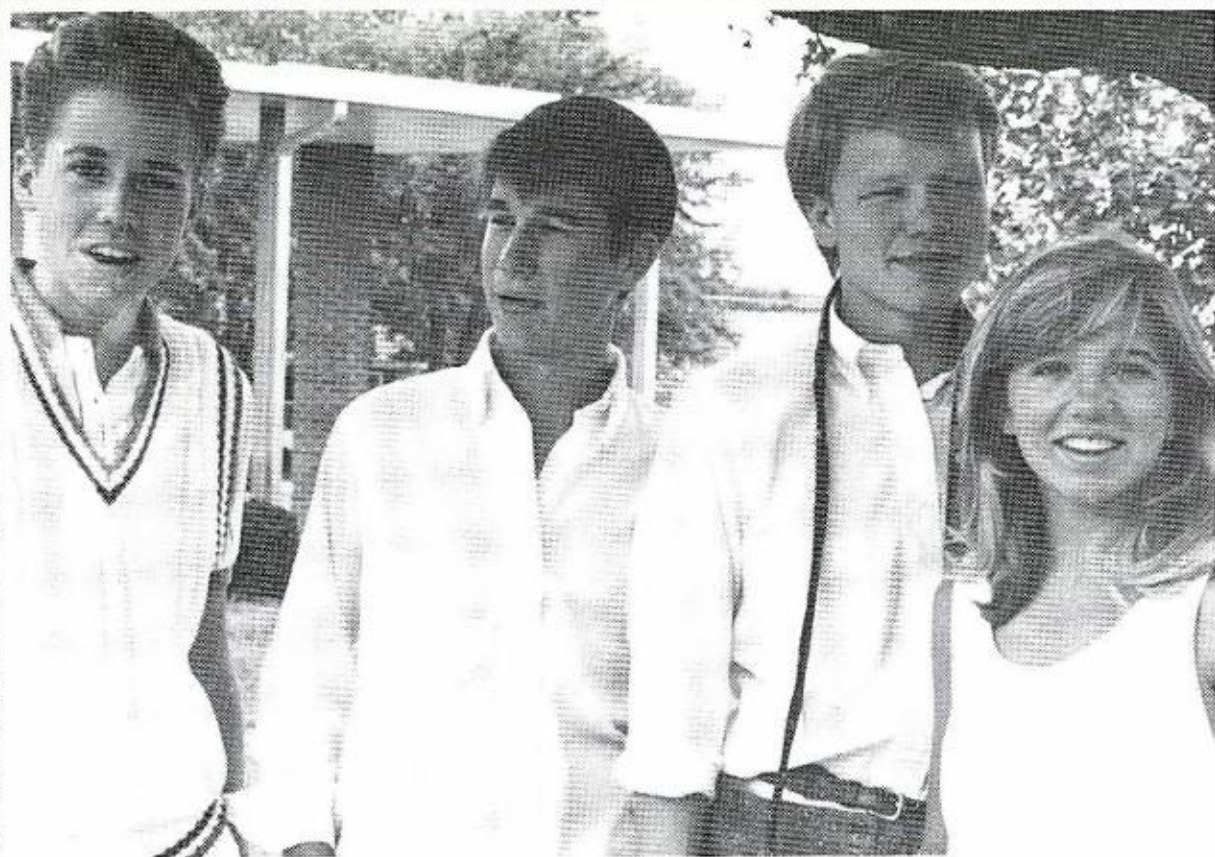

In 1787 our forefathers created a document which marked the start of a new government. Although the 1985 constitutional convention lacked the appearances of George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, or James Madison, the rewrite of SM East's constitution could be labeled as equally important to the participants of Student Council.

"We're changing a lot of things in order to plan for 1986's four-year high school," explained Hubertus Kuelps, StuCo president. Secretary Nathan Frank added that this year's Student Council had a "different responsibility." East in 1986 will have more new students than returning students; therefore, a need exists "to tell what is happening, to keep the traditions alive, and generally to supply information" to those new recruits.

This year's sponsor, Trudy Lounds, committed much of her time to making StuCo a profitable "learning experience." She advised the student leaders, acted as a buffer between the students and the administration, and liked to think of herself as a "sounding board for new ideas."

Rodney Riffle, sophomore class president, commented that "Lounds really knows what she's doing." Also, both Kuelps and Frank agreed that she was a very "capable sponsor, energetic, and always willing to hear everyone and tell us her opinions."

StuCo sponsored a fund raising drive which included "Charity Week." Over 2,700 dollars was raised for the Red Cross, United Way, and Johnson County agencies. In addition StuCo was involved in planning the dances, Battle of the Bands, and the annual car wash, not to mention elections of class officers and Homecoming and Sweetheart Queens.

With all these activities and many more to co-ordinate, no wonder Lounds claimed StuCo was "one job by itself."

Joel Joyce, junior vice-president, anticipated, "It's going to be a challenge!"

A Royal Knight

Roses. Lace. Taffeta. Tuxedos and top hats. A sensation of enchantment filled the air as the band played songs from Camelot and the drill team marched, carrying shields and balloons. Then the fifteen glamorous candidates appeared, each escorted by her father and greeted with a rose by the Heralders. The excitement peaked when Sally Riekhof was crowned Homecoming Queen. Next came the recognition of her royal court: Mary Bradbury, first attendant; Eric Waugh, second attendant; and Sarah DeBauge and Lindsay Bjorseth, third attendants.

This year's Homecoming was memorable because of the numerous alterations made in the traditional proceedings. The game was on a Saturday instead of Friday night, making it necessary to change the traditional Saturday night dance to a Friday. The assembly which had formerly been held to introduce the fifteen candidates to the student body was cancelled, and instead, the candidates were introduced at the dance. In addition, voting was held during the dance and the first quarter of the game instead of during school hours.

These changes were successful with the help of StuCo and Pep Club. Senior Dance Chairman, Mary Stechschulte, was in charge of decorations, chaperones, and the band. Girls' Pep Club vice president, Sally Riekhof, headed the plans for the half-time ceremony at South Stadium. And as a perfect ending to the evening, the Lancers defeated the North Indians 25-0.

SWEETHEART

Queen of Hearts

by Julianna Proffit

In contrast to the changes that 1985 brought to Homecoming, Sweetheart activities followed the traditional course. StuCo and Pep Club joined forces to organize the events.

Seniors nominated 15 girls (only those candidates for homecoming were ineligible) who were introduced to the student body in an assembly, followed by voting by the entire school. Up for the honor were Edie Blackwood, Diana Bliss, Trina

Chase, Mignon Disney, Molly Graver, Kathy Grether, Julie Nall, Kristen Pierson, Lisa Rossi, Jill Schoolman, Dawn Sederquist, Allison Smith, Stephanie Smith, Heather Terril, and Angie Watkins.

Taking a break from the sweat of sport and the referees' whistles, the crowds looked on as candidates, escorted by their fathers, were presented. The queen and her attendants were announced during a half-time ceremony at the Valentine's Day varsity basketball game played at home against SM South.

Alison Smith took the throne as "queen of hearts," and at her side were first attendant, Molly Graver; second attendant, Julie Nall; third attendant, Trina Chase; and Angie Watkins, fourth attendant.

The Lancers went on to defeat the Raiders, and the royal court reigned over the sweetheart dance held in the Girls Gym the next night.

Life in the Fast Lane

Event: State Cross Country Meet

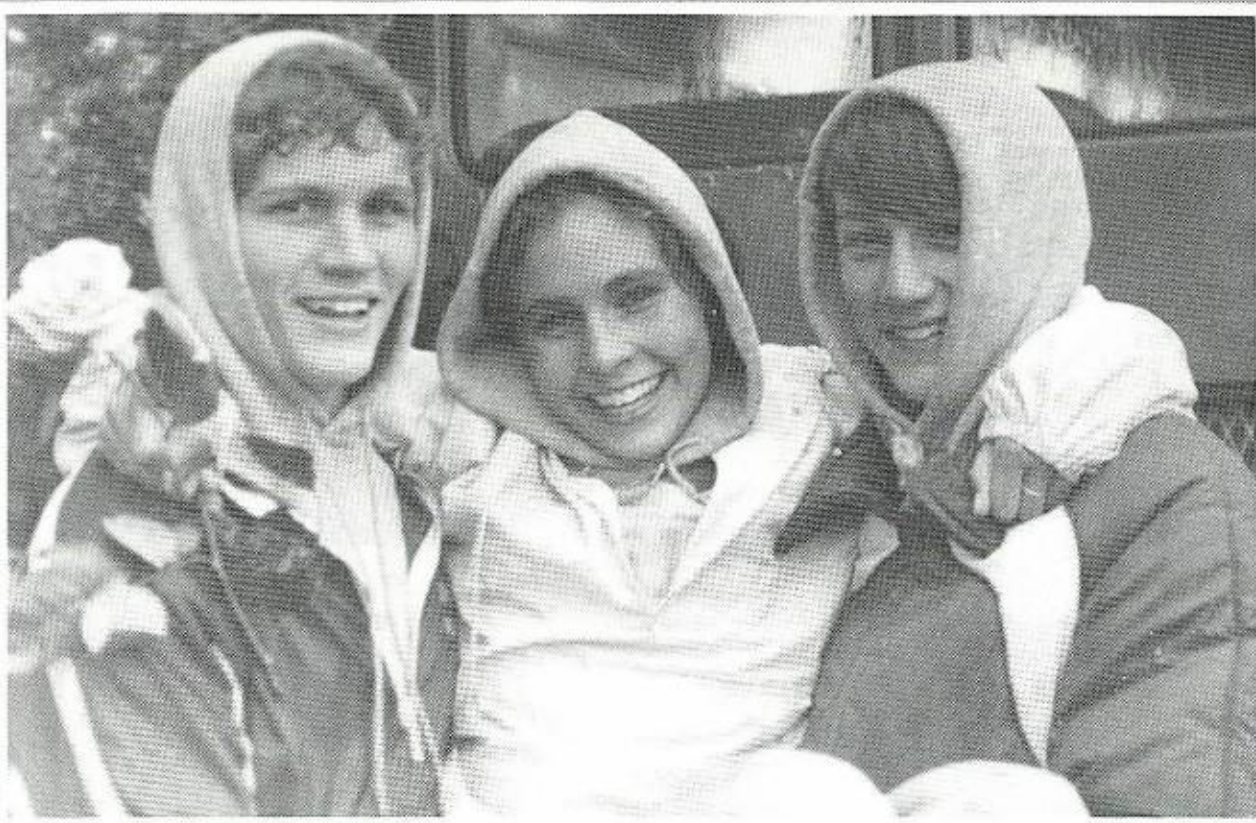

A mass of bodies crowded onto the starting line. Whereas a month ago the weather had been unbearably hot, now a chilling north wind caused the runners to shiver. Hundreds of training miles lay behind. But now those miles were forgotten, and each runner realized that only the next race mattered.

At the state meet, the training miles paid off: the boys' cross country team placed eighth and concluded a successful season. During the year the team had to adapt to the new, longer distance of 3.1 miles instead of two-mile races of the past, but the team coped well. As Coach Englund remarked, "The transition between distances helped us achieve our goals."

Although many varsity runners from last year graduated, the team still did well. According to Englund, their success was due mainly to the team's spirit. "The kids always kept their attitude up. In a way, they emulated the Royals. They did better than some people expected." He thought the success of the team was due mostly to the depth of the team and also to the variety of runners.

The girls' team seemed to be plagued by bad luck and misfortune this season. During the regular season the team members were struck by illness and injury. These problems became most evident at Regionals when Kathy Therou was unable to compete because of a strained muscle, and once again at State when Susan Hedrick sprained her ankle the day before the meet. Coach Haraughty was somewhat disappointed by all of the setbacks the girls suffered, but when looking back, said, "Considering the difficulties, we did all right. We will have a really strong team next year." The varsity team placed fourth at Regionals and ninth in State. Whereas the boys' strength came from team depth, the girls' strong points were their top runners and the high quality of the sophomore runners.

Surviving the worst weather in years, both teams managed to enjoy winning seasons, and each team holds promising talent for next year.

Changing Their Image

by Ruthie Harrison

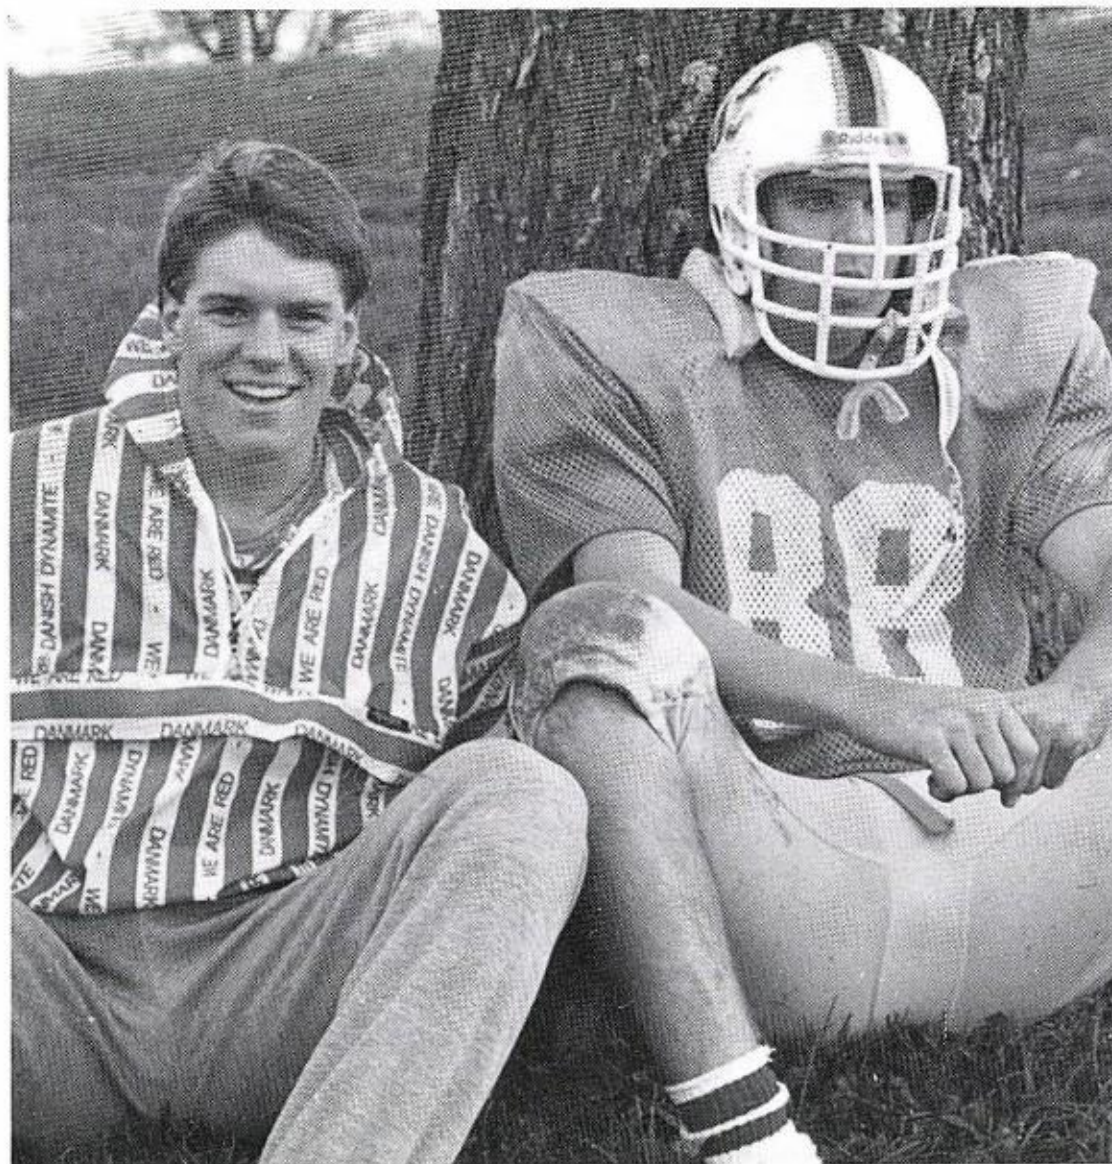

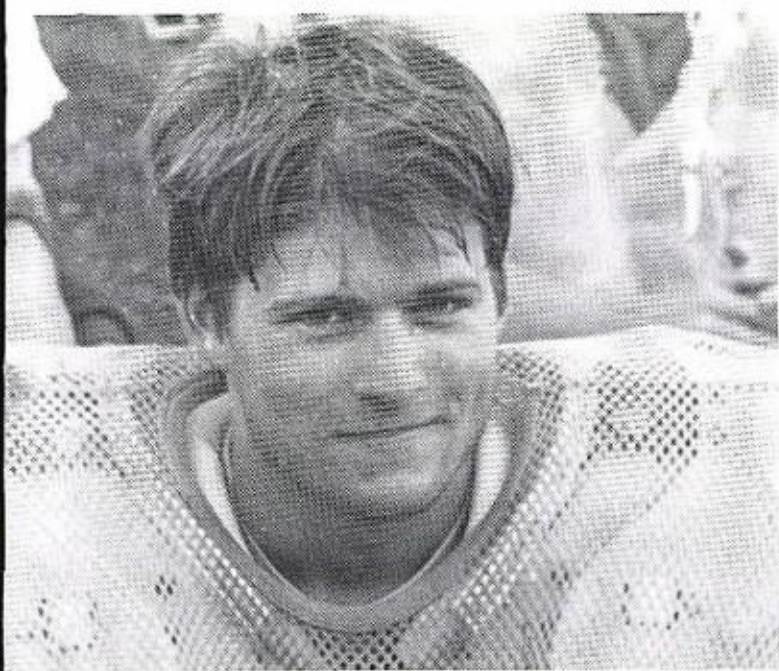

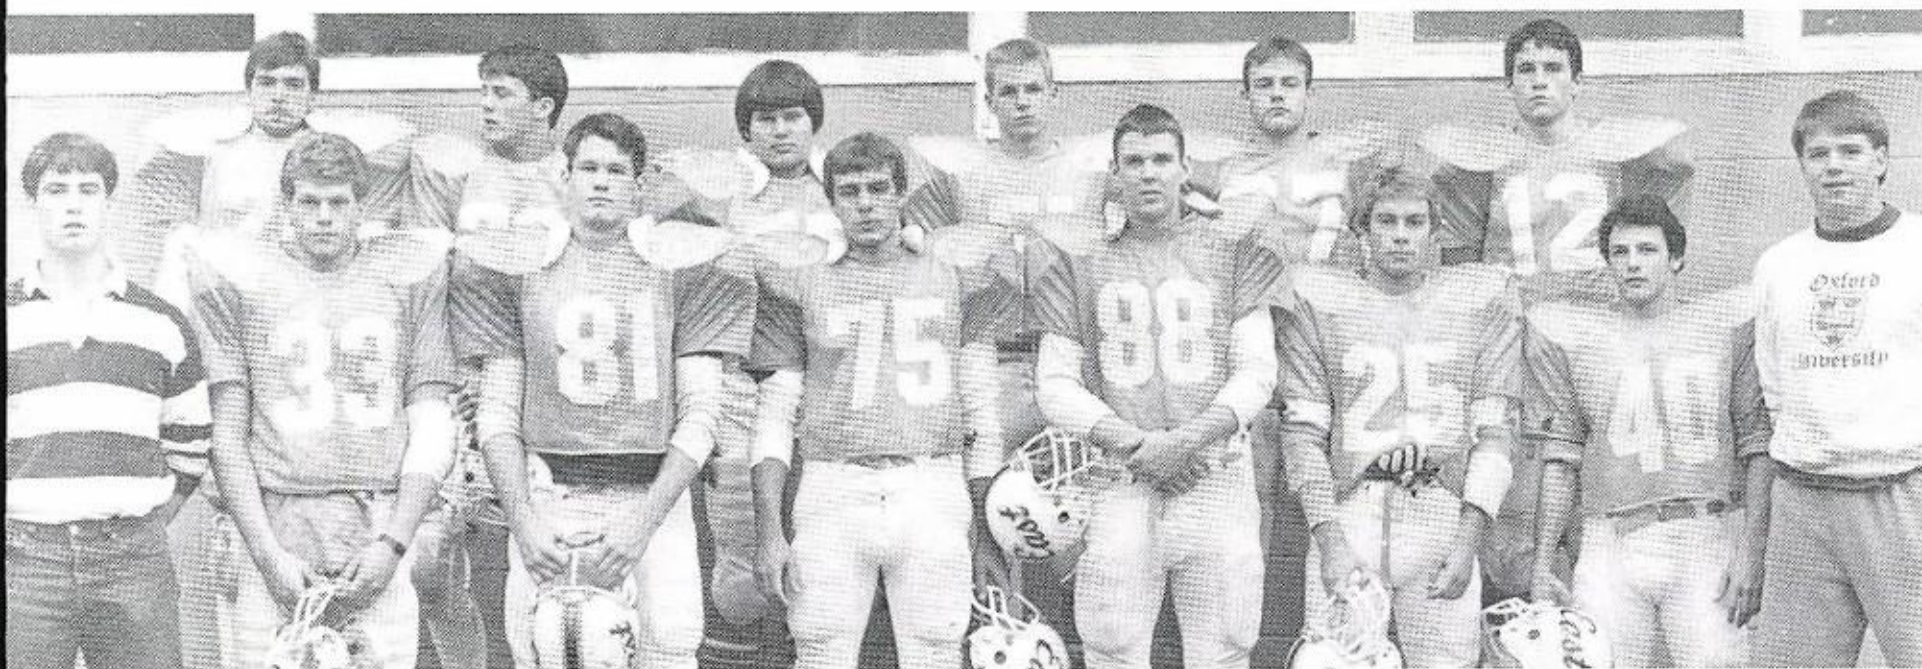

For the first time in the history of SM East football, the team won Districts and played in a post-season game. Although they lost to West in the first round of the playoffs, that could not quiet their enthusiasm. They had done something no other Lancer football team had ever done; they were champions and conducted themselves as such.

The entire school was caught up in the excitement of the team's victory. The pep club planned rallies and tailgate parties to show their support. Stephanie Smith, varsity cheerleader commented, "I admire their team spirit and enthusiasm."

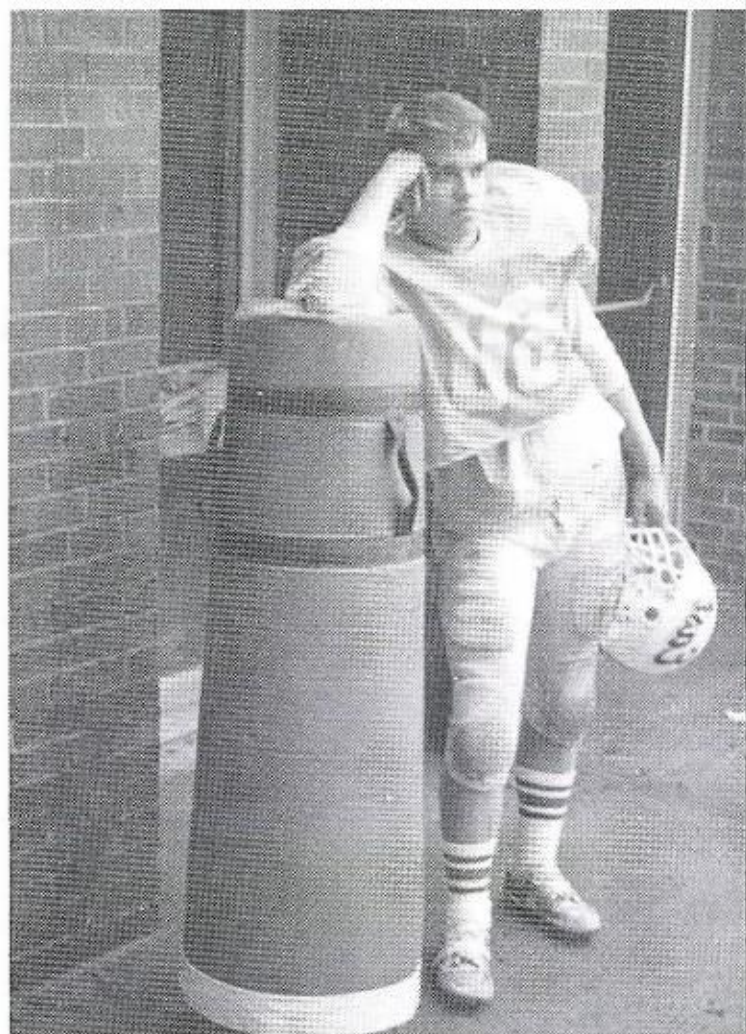

The boys, who were under the direction of head coach Bill Stiegemeier, performed well all year. Mark Kaufmann, senior, explained, "We had a strong defensive front that kept us going." Stiegemeier attributed much of the team's success to all the hard hours of practice. He also felt the team gained a real sense of unity throughout the season. Senior Bill Griffith commented, "We worked as a team and it really paid off."

Lancers Get Their Kicks

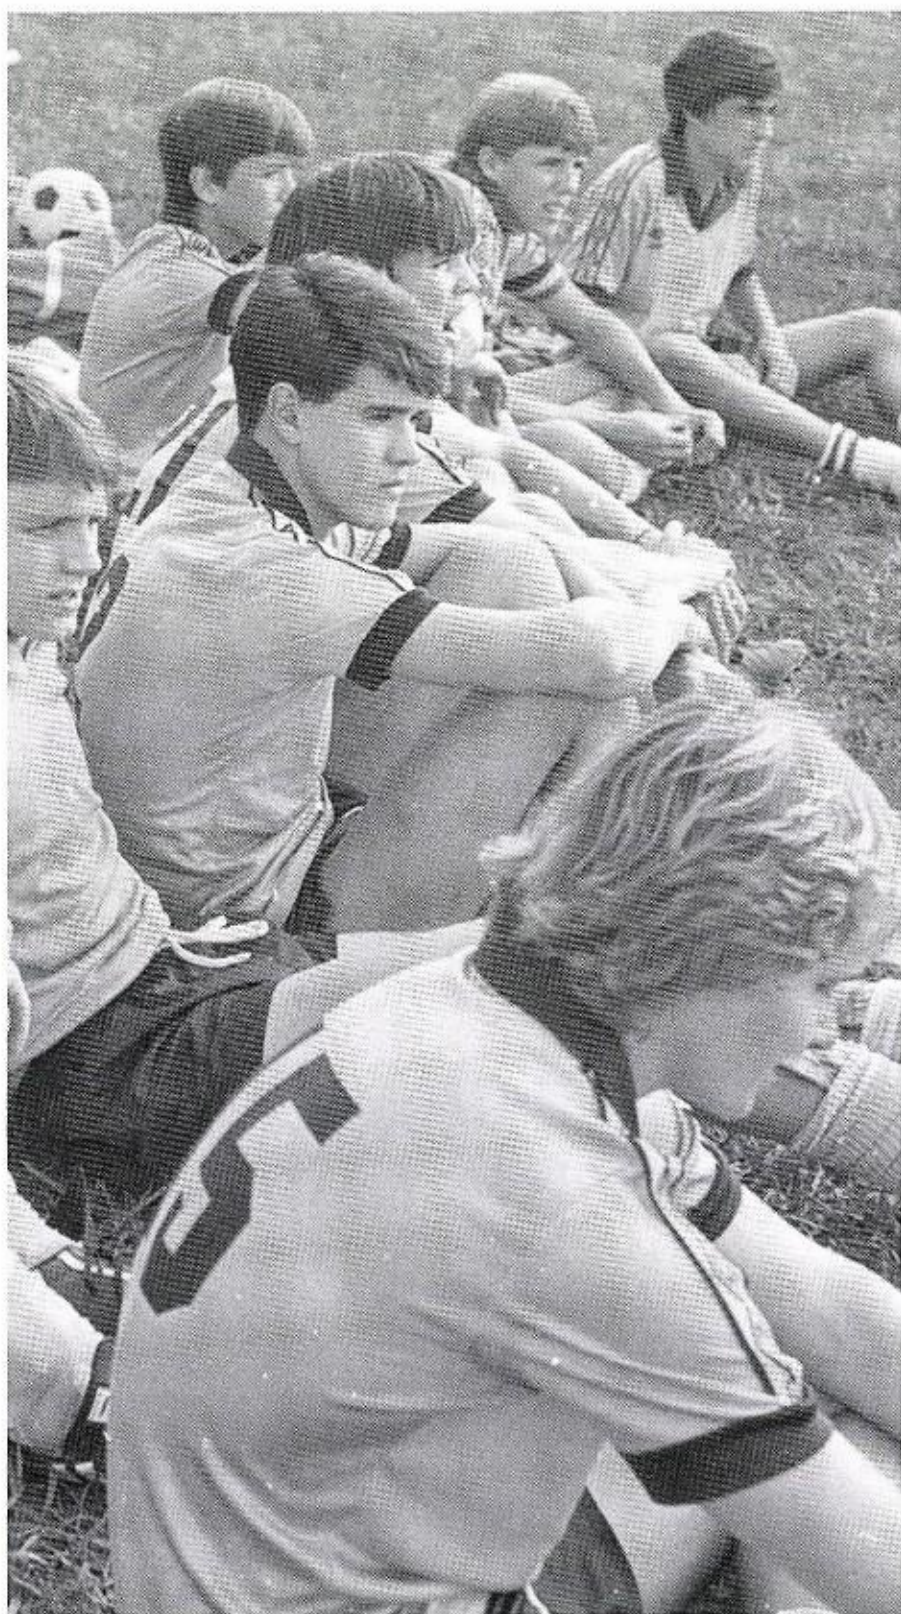

by Heather Terril

When Mrs. Barnes, English teacher, gave an assignment to write about a sport or a pet peeve, she was bombarded with essays about soccer. The response to her assignment illustrated captain Tom Cartmell's statement: "Soccer at East is quickly becoming a popular, competitive sport." This year, 170 people tried out for 75 positions on the three teams. "All three teams were very successful," stated Coach Sulzen. The varsity team finished the season with ten wins, ten losses, and one tie — their best record in several years. The junior varsity ended their season at 10-7-1, and the sophomore team finished at 13-2-1.

"We had a great year," said senior Rick Carvajal. "We did a lot better than everyone expected." Coach Sulzen said that he expects next year's team to be even better because of the success of the teams this year, the fact that nine junior and sophomores played varsity, and because, as he explained, "We suffered many key injuries that kept us from doing as well as we could have. We should be very competitive in the future."

Volleyballs And Follies

by Laura Breneman

Teamwork — the essence of volleyball. As no person can dominate an entire game, everyone needs to work together in order to be successful. "It takes a lot of cooperation. We had to work long and hard, but we had a good time doing it," stated junior Ellie Crow.

The cooperation showed in the final results for the varsity team. They won second place in the league and second place in Sub-State. "We had a good time," stated Ed Stonner, varsity coach. "The players were aggressive and had a lot of talent. They set a good example for the j.v. and sophomore teams."

Following also in the Lancer tradition, the j.v. team won sixteen of their twenty-six games and placed third in the Bishop Miega tournament. "We had a good season this year," said Eva Yearout, junior, "and we're looking forward to next season."

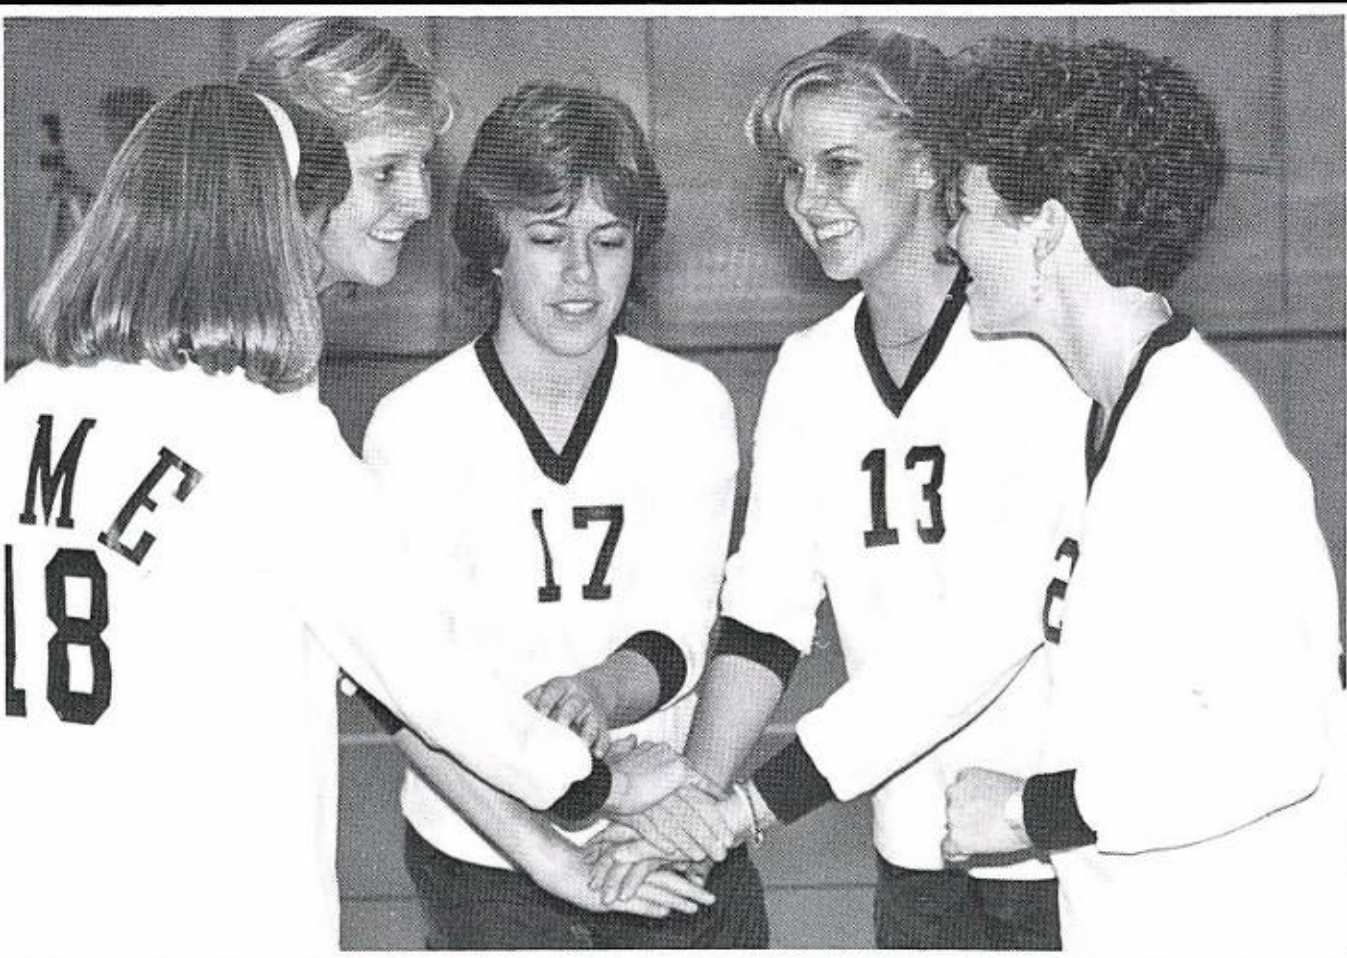

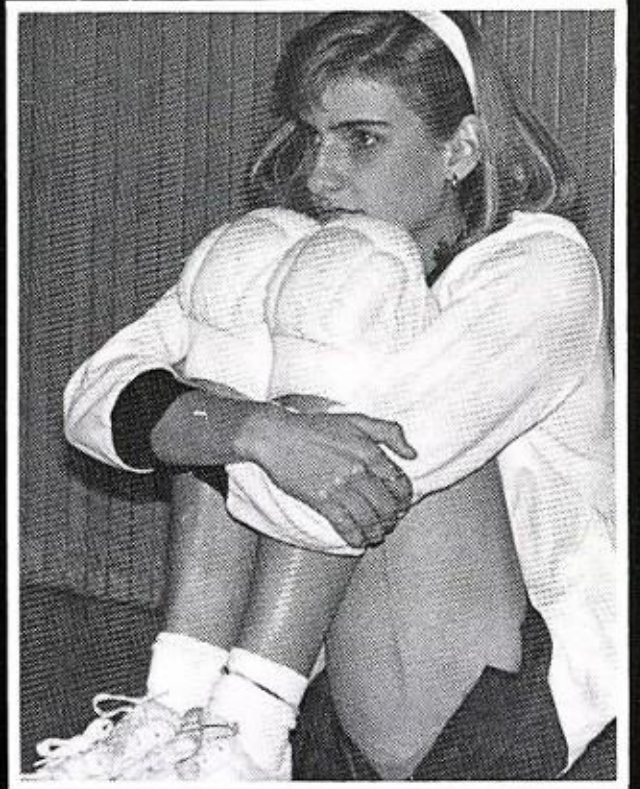

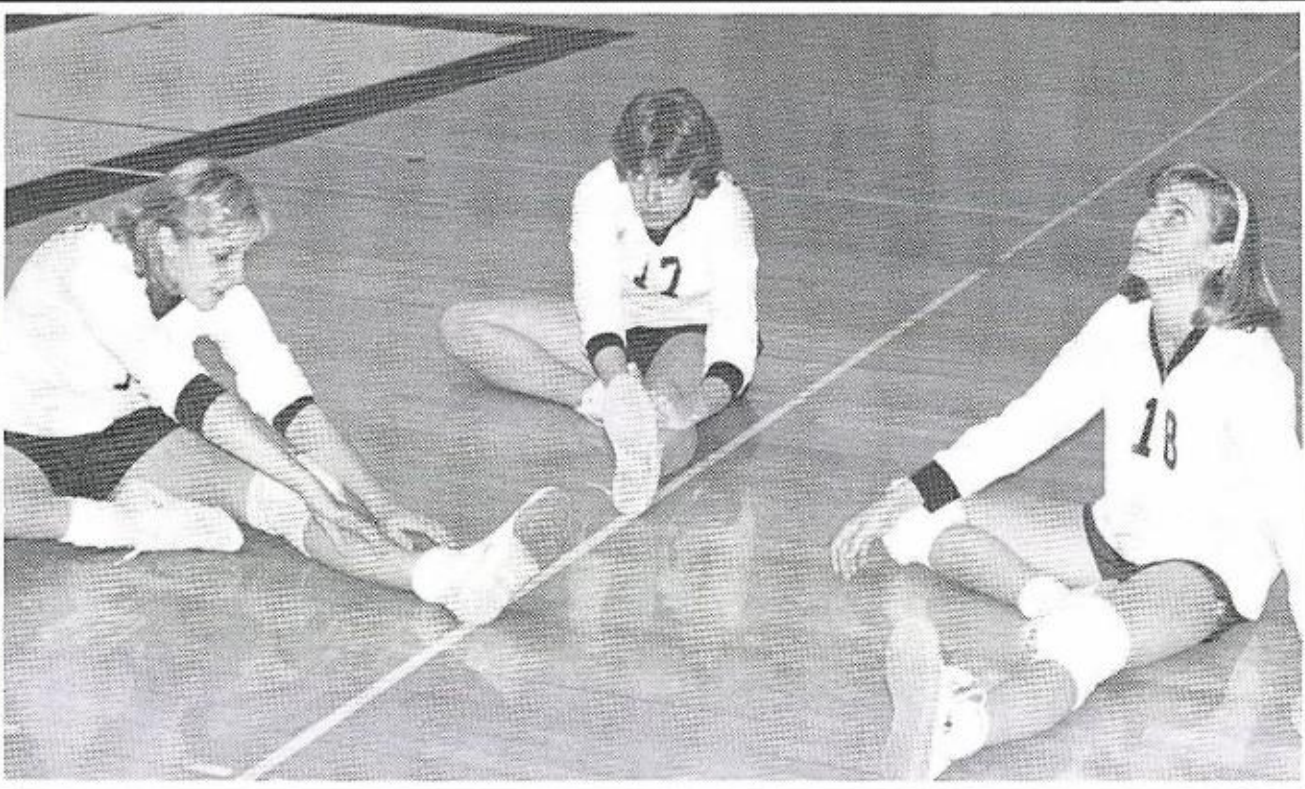

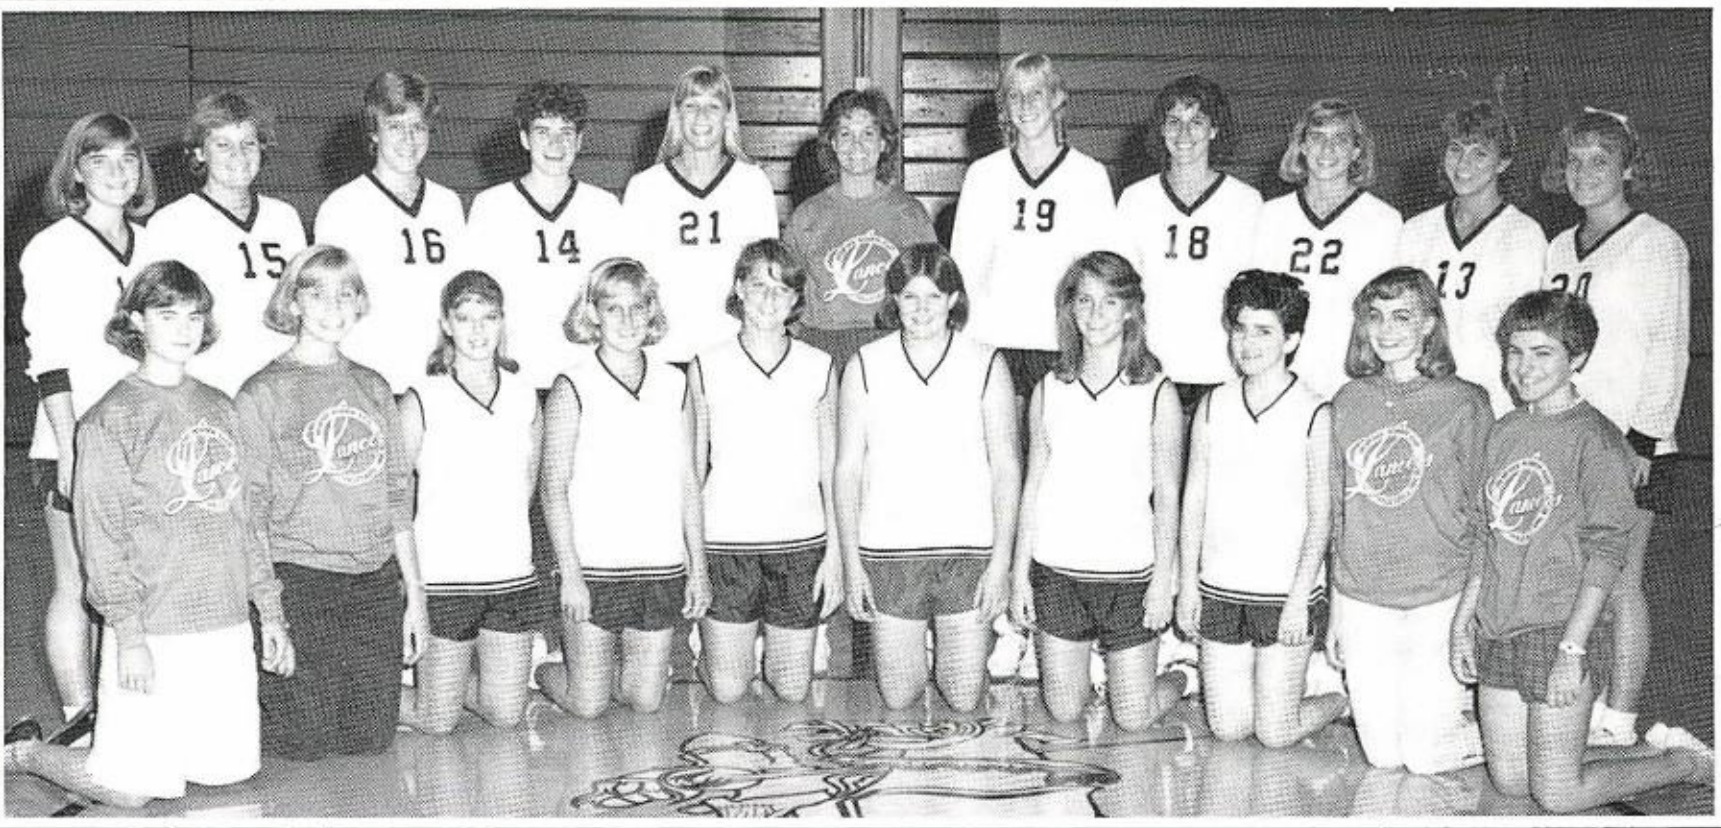

The two sophomore teams also demonstrated their ability by winning sixteen of their twenty-six games and placing fourth in their tournament. Sophomore Tammy Martin said, "It was a big honor just to make the team; and after we got started, it was a lot of fun. We worked hard and played hard. We have a lot of talent and are looking forward to playing next year."

Julie Dick, junior, summed up the feelings of the players when she said, "Teamwork, practice, and talent made our team so strong. We worked and played well together. Although we didn't make it to State, we learned a lot about both our team and individual skills, and next year we'll be even stronger."

GIRLS' TENNIS

En Route To Wimbledon

by Laura Rozen

Four score and seven . . . No, this is not an echo of Abe Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Rather, it is the tournament record for the 1985 girls' tennis team's fall season. Once again, the SM East girls have walked away from four major tournaments as champions — SM District Tournament, SM East Invitational, Sunflower League, and Regionals. This is the eighth year in a row that the East girls have captured these titles.

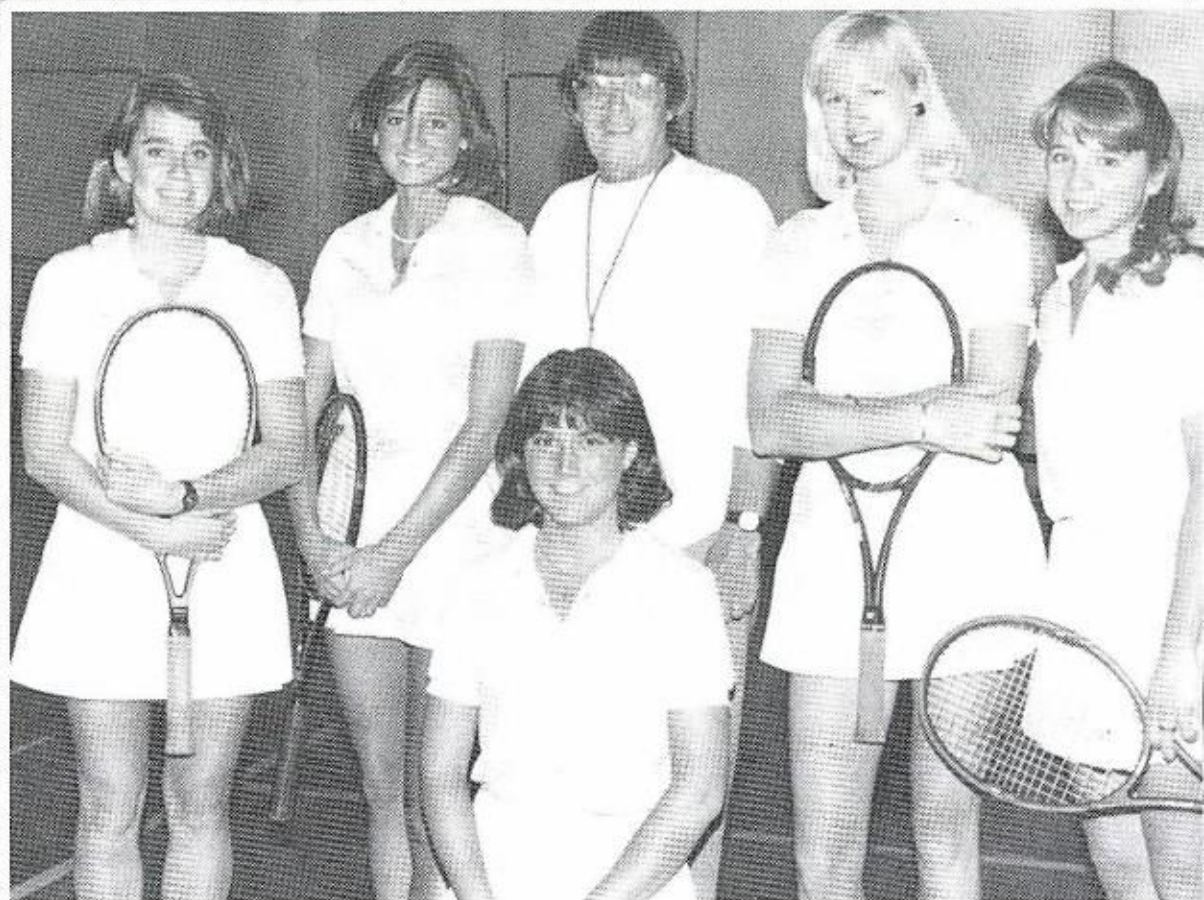

In light of the above record, it was with good reason that the champions' sponsor, Carolyn Howard, conveyed the pride that she had in the girls' accomplishments. The varsity record of the season was 23-2; the junior varsity finished 20-3. Howard thought the team was strong enough to play Missouri teams, which are not subject to the Kansas law prohibiting any player from participating in more than eight matches. This allows them to rotate their best players without ever including less competitive ones. Despite this frequent disadvantage, East came out strong.

"We love Howard. She does such a good job of bringing the team together and motivating us," emphasized senior letterman Julie Rester.

With a hefty team membership of sixty-five players, the team had to split up into four practice groups according to ability in order to allow everybody practice time on the courts. Because of the large number of girls who went out for tennis this year, Howard was forced to trim membership by cutting. After having once managed a team consisting of one hundred five players, Howard vowed, "Never again!"

Despite team rank being determined by ability, all players were able to play in at least four competitions. The team, which had been divided into varsity, junior varsity, and sophomore groups, came home from Lawrence holding a trophy for third place. Though proud of the girls' playing, Howard complained of bad seeding at the competition. The state team consisted of seniors Kendra Healy, Trina Chase, Laura Cohen, and Michelle Abbott, and juniors Kelly Nawroth, and Linda Weisenborn. These girls headed on of the most competitive teams in the area. East was the only team in the state to qualify six players which is the limit of girls from one school allowed to attend.

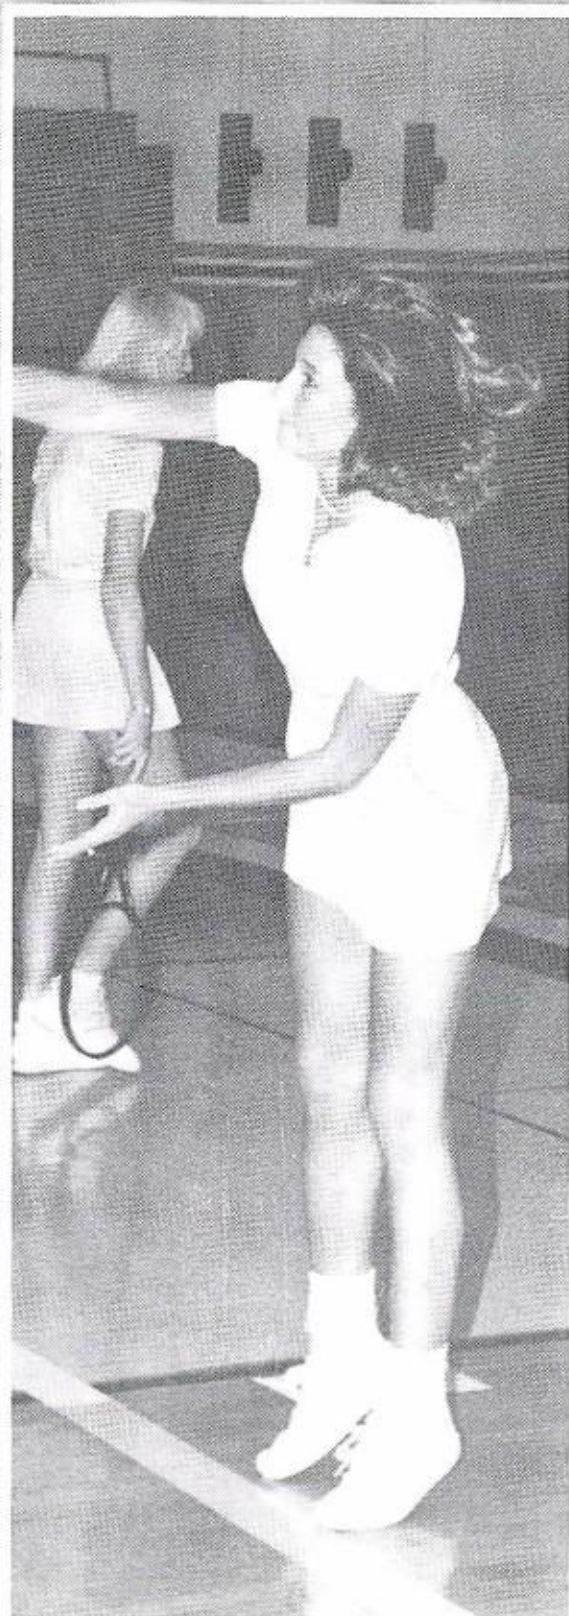

Reflecting on the season's results, Howard said, "I think we had a very successful season. They're a good team with a lot of promising sophomores."

Golfers Get Up And Go

by Jessie Ullmann

The closest many students ever come to playing golf is tapping a red or blue rubber ball over plastic turf with a 3-foot club at the nearest Putt-Putt Golf Center. But for sixteen Lancer girls, golf was the name of the game for competition. This year the team had an up and down season, but a slowdown never became apparent in the scores of the four major 18-hole tournaments in which Varsity participated. The Lancers, first in Regionals, and third in State. "I only wish that at times I had played as well as I did in practice," joked junior Kathy Klein, a returning letterman and member of last year's First All-Metro Team.

East was considered to have one of the youngest golf teams in the district with senior Susan Durham, juniors Kathy Klein and Ann Hall, and sophomores Dana Chase, Mary Ann Guastello, and Emily Sawyer playing in varsity tournaments. East is also favored to win State next year with Klein and Hall being named to be on this year's All-Metro Team. "One reason we were so successful," commented Hall, "was that we didn't have one particular player who was outstanding; instead we all played at about the same level."

Lancers Perform Gymnastic Feats

by Juliana Proffitt

Kip, back flip, aerial. How do they keep from breaking their necks?

Gymnastics requires agility, flexibility, coordination, and persistence. With these, the '85 SM East gymnastics team plunged into the fall season with enthusiasm — building skills and refining performances. In preparation for the competition, the team practiced two hours a day, six days a week, and the dedication paid off.

Led by captain, senior Emily Dees, and coach Laurie Propst, Lancer gymnasts greatly improved meet performance this year. Senior Jennifer Till attributed the success to the team's unity and attitude. "We set high goals and helped each other out; being critics for one another was really important." The team also claimed steady progress and consistent scores to be a definite factor.

East gymnastics, however, is more than competition and hard work. "It's fun more than you can imagine. You meet people with the same interests and make a lot of friends," said Dees.

"We all have fun together. We go out to eat after the meets and get together outside of gymnastics, too," commented Julie Sangster, senior.

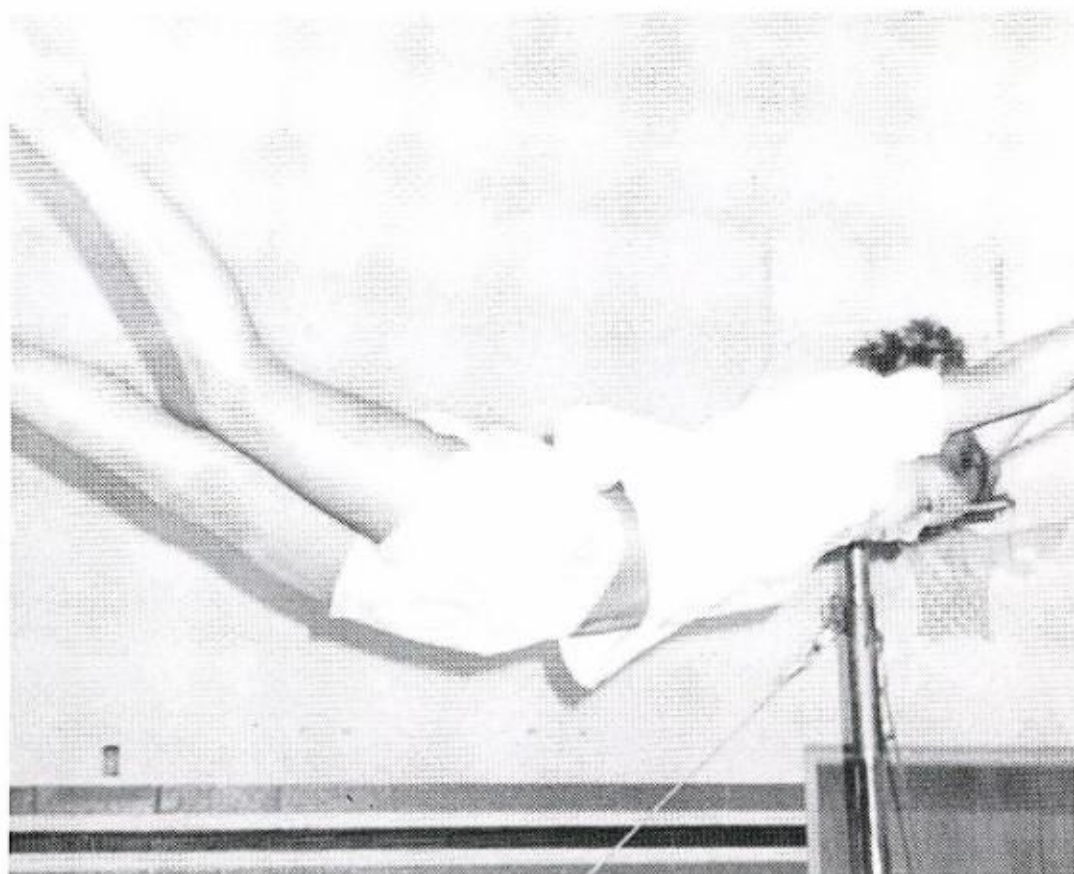

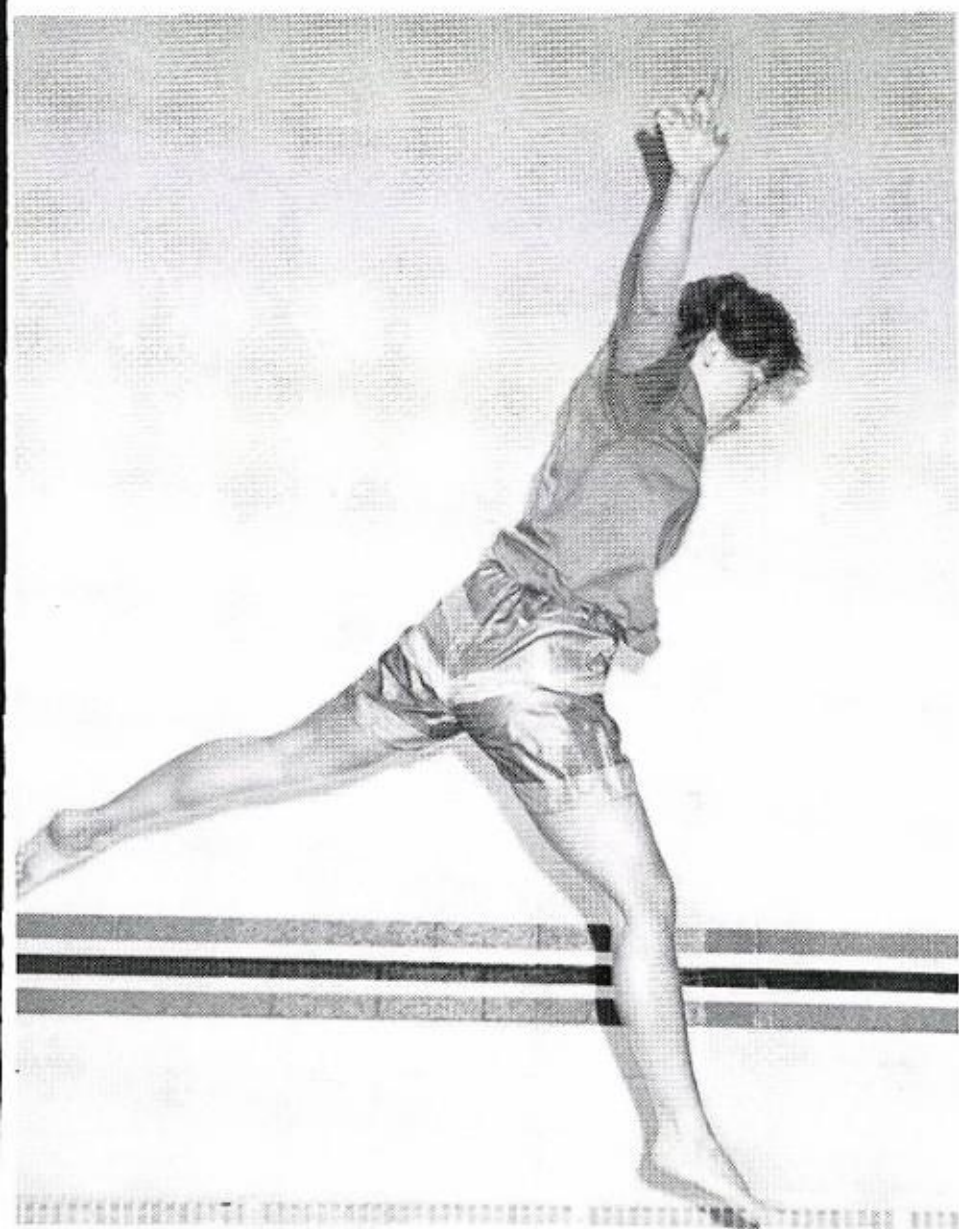

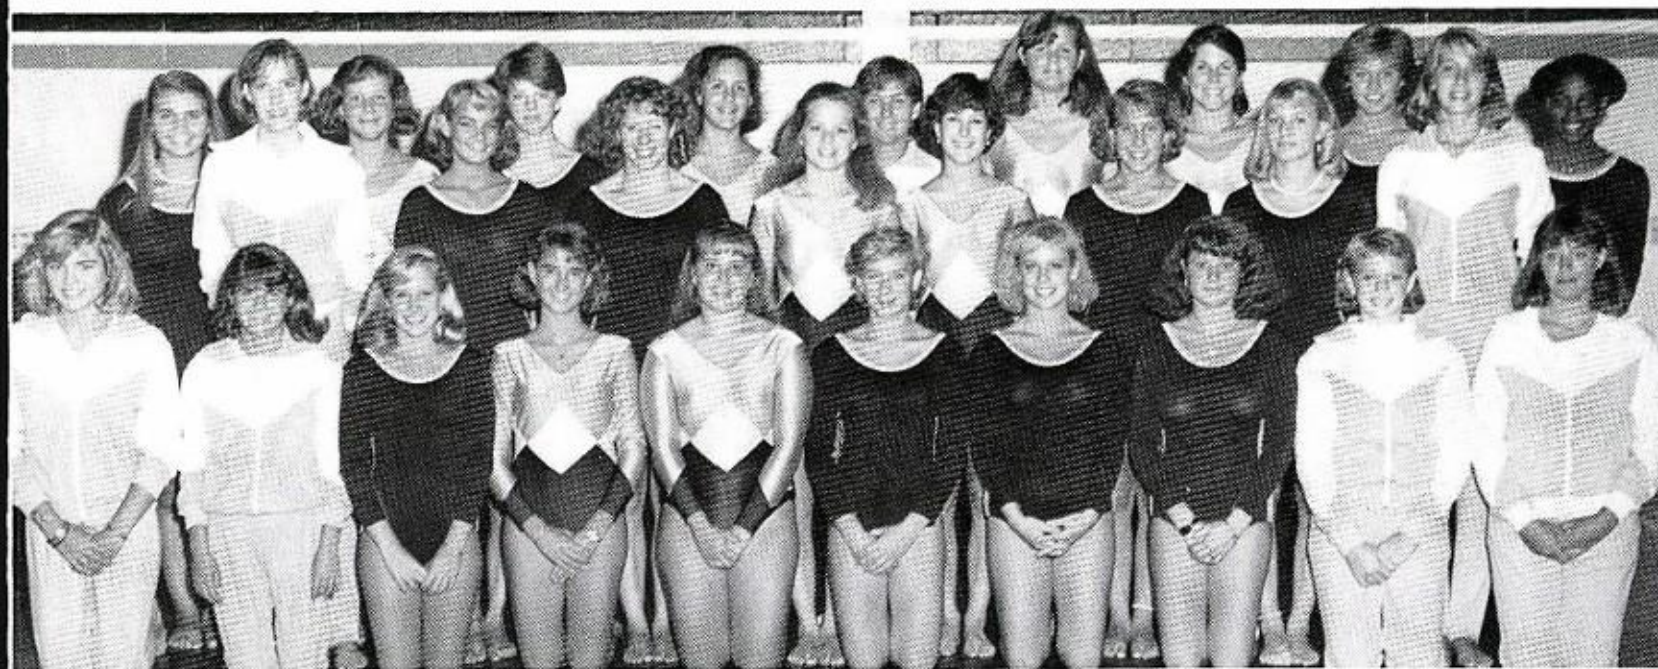

The team looks for a solid returning team next year and expects the fun and hard work to continue into the '86 season.

A Season Of Rebounding Success

By Matt Sheffield

... 3 ... 2 ... 1 ... BZZZZ! Swoosh!!! Senior guard Don Ross had just hit a jumper from the corner to win the game over the Kansas City Star's fourth ranked team, Blue Valley.

Varsity boys' basketball tipped off its season by beating SM North at home and going on to win the SM East Invitational, highlighted by the victory over Blue Valley. With its height (Cooper Milledge and Scott Smith) and depth, varsity had the makings of a banner season.

This year's team had more strengths than weaknesses. Wolff said, "We never stop giving 100%. We play well as a team, and everyone is totally unselfish. We just want to win ball games. Our weakest part is free throw shooting." East also played well in the Coffeyville tournament, taking third. Other big victories include beating Kansas City Star's #8 ranked team, West, on February 4th at the buzzer and SM South on February 14th.

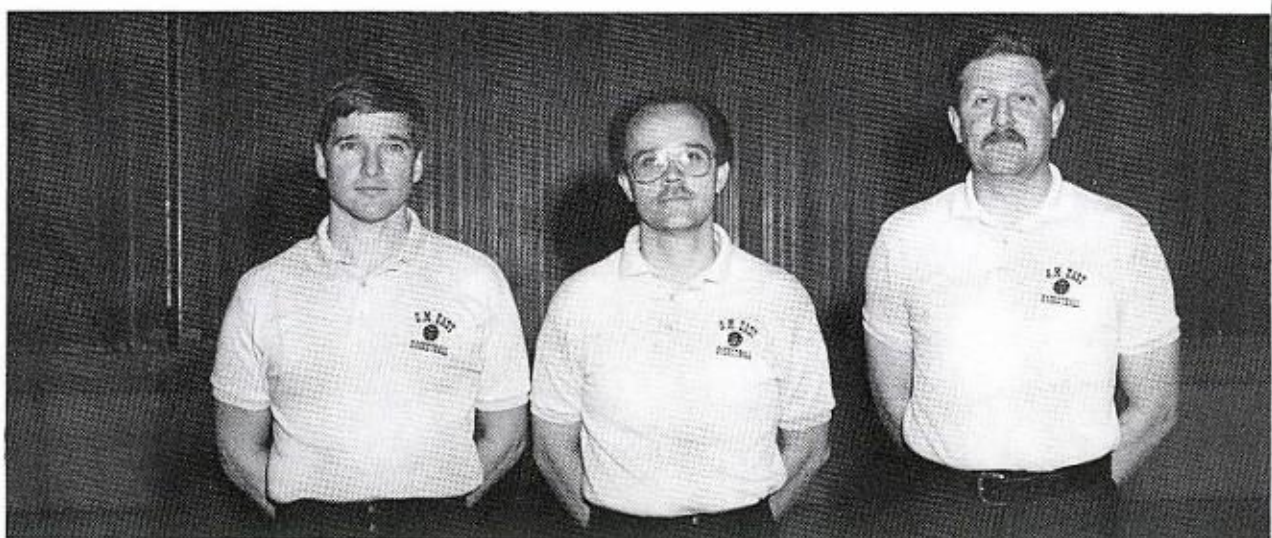

Wolff commented on the four senior players: Cooper (Milledge) played outstanding down in Coffeyville. Don (Ross) hit the big shot against Blue Valley. And Marcus (Clardy) has incredible ability and made the winning shot against West."

Backed by an enthusiastic home crowd, East knocked off SM South and then Blue Valley March 2 and 3 to win Sub-State. The crowd, led by the Pe Club, was the "sixth man" again at State in sparking the Lancers back from a twenty point deficit. Manhattan was able to hold off the Lancer attack, thus eliminating East from advancing to the State semi-finals. East ended up with a record of 13-10 and was the only school from the Sunflower League, Olathe, Blue Valley to go to State.

Lady Lancers Remain Strong

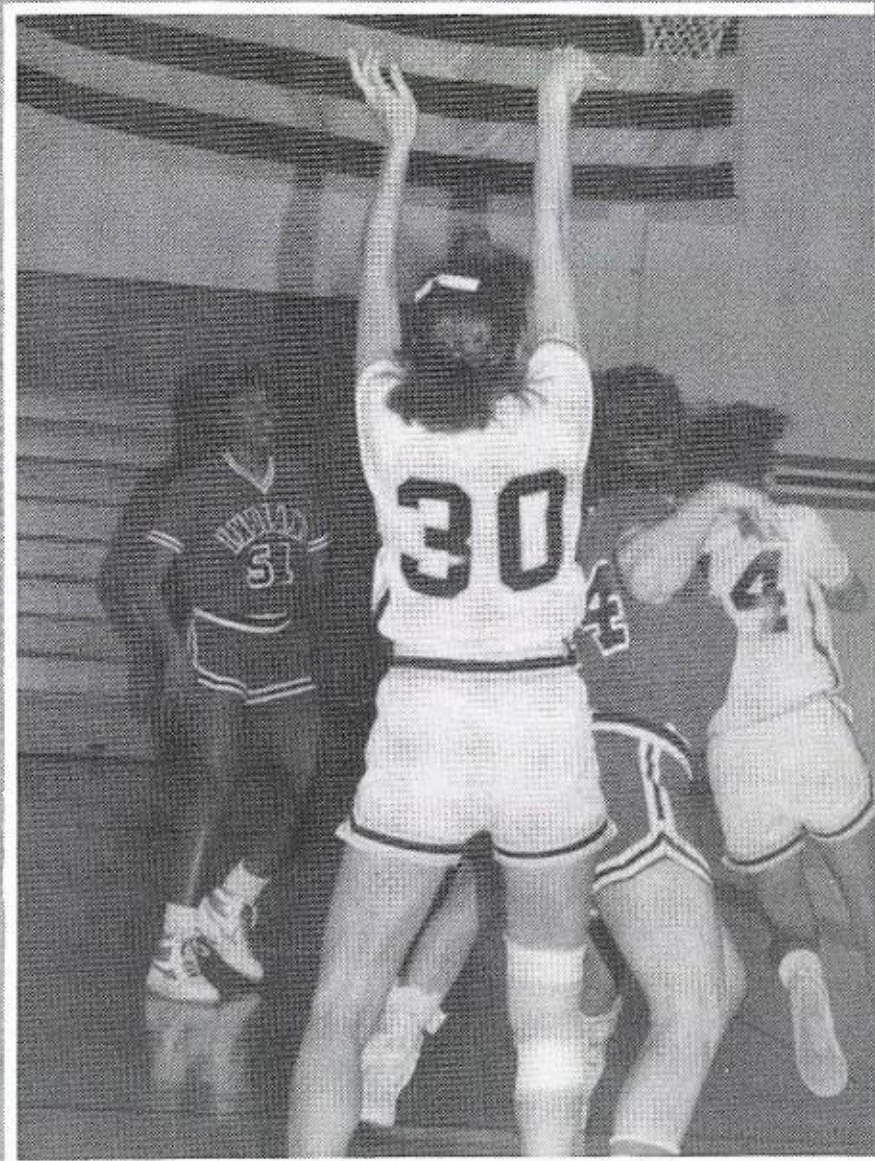

by Laura Breneman

"Strong defense, quickness, and solid experience" provided the backbone of the Lady Lancers, according to varsity coach Dave Rehfeld. The starting varsity team consisted of seniors and juniors: Nancy Toalson, Laura Voelm, Julie Dick, Anne French, and Michelle Abbott. Many of the players were known for their particular strengths: Karla Kalin for hustling, Julie Dick for dribbling, and Laura Voelm for her free throws. All of the players have worked hard and have been rewarded with a record that is hard to top: thirteen wins, seven losses.

The j.v. team also had a rewarding year. "We had some problems running an offense, but our defense was always strong," said junior Ellie Crow. Their record was tied with eight wins and eight losses. Coach Ed Stonner thought that the dedication and perserverance of this year's j.v. players would bring an even better season for them next year as varsity.

For the sophomore team, this year has been a "learning experience," according to coach Connie Lutz. Because many players played j.v. and varsity as well, the sophomores had a somewhat unstable line-up. They played their best, though, and many predict a great season next year.

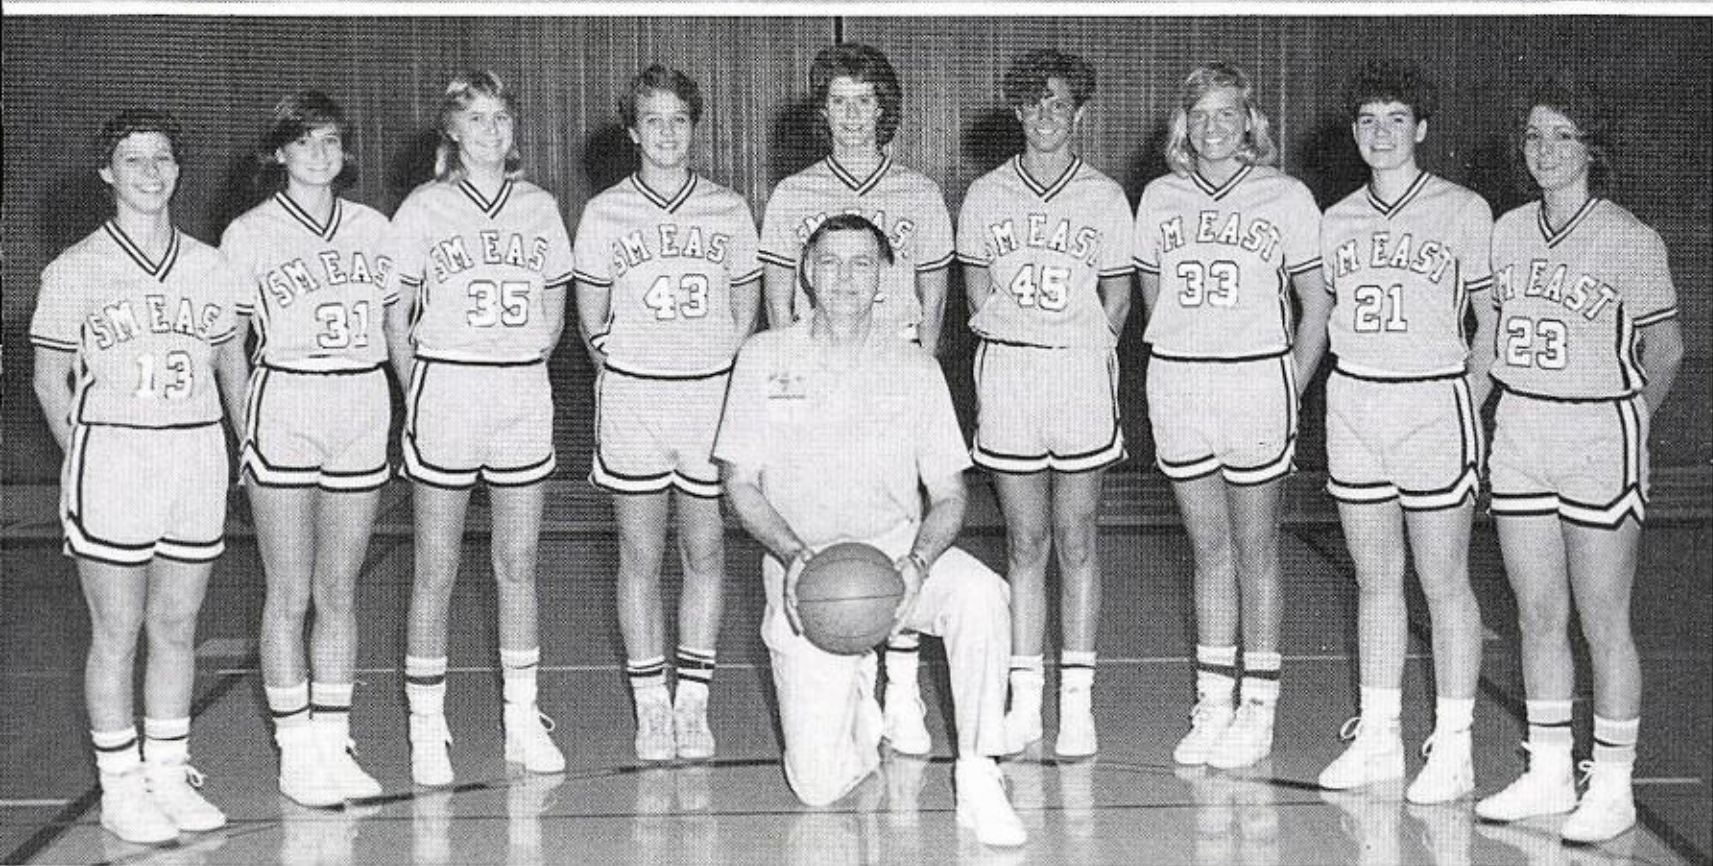

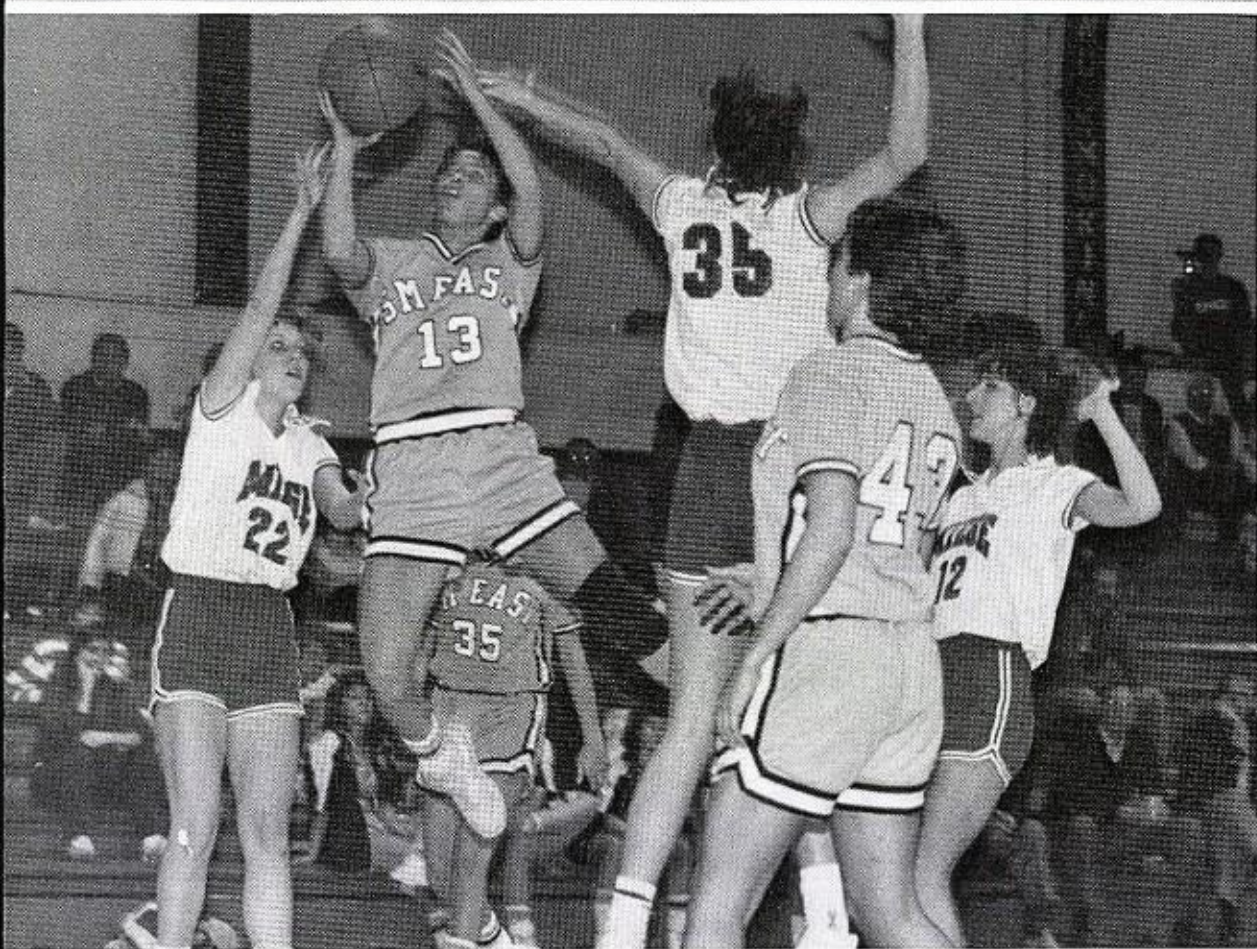

"All in all," said Rehfeld, "We're a pretty good ball club. We play great defense, and we work hard. We just need to keep practicing and shooting."

Kings of Pain

by Laura Rozen

Somewhere between martial arts and boxing falls the sport of wrestling — physically, a very brutal sport. However, in reality, wrestling demands just as much mental discipline as physical bulk and agility. As junior Justin Surma explained, "You have to be able to endure the physical pain. Wrestling hurts — I've broken my nose six times already."

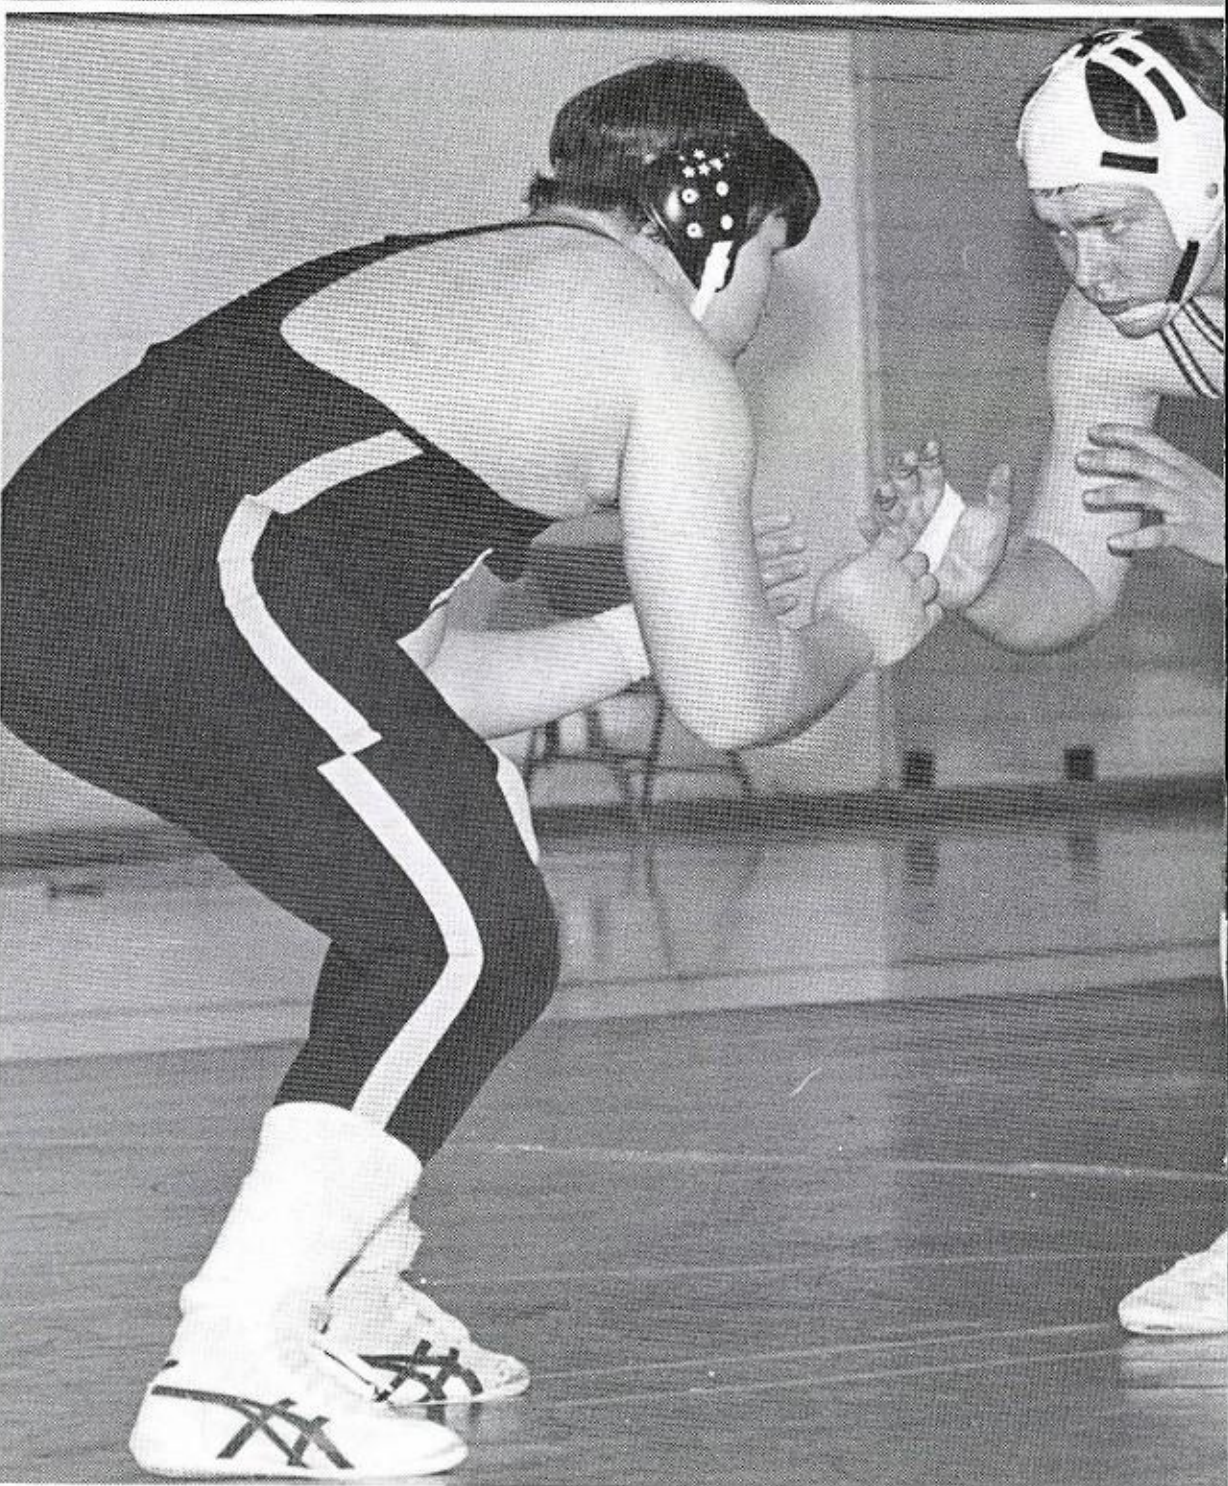

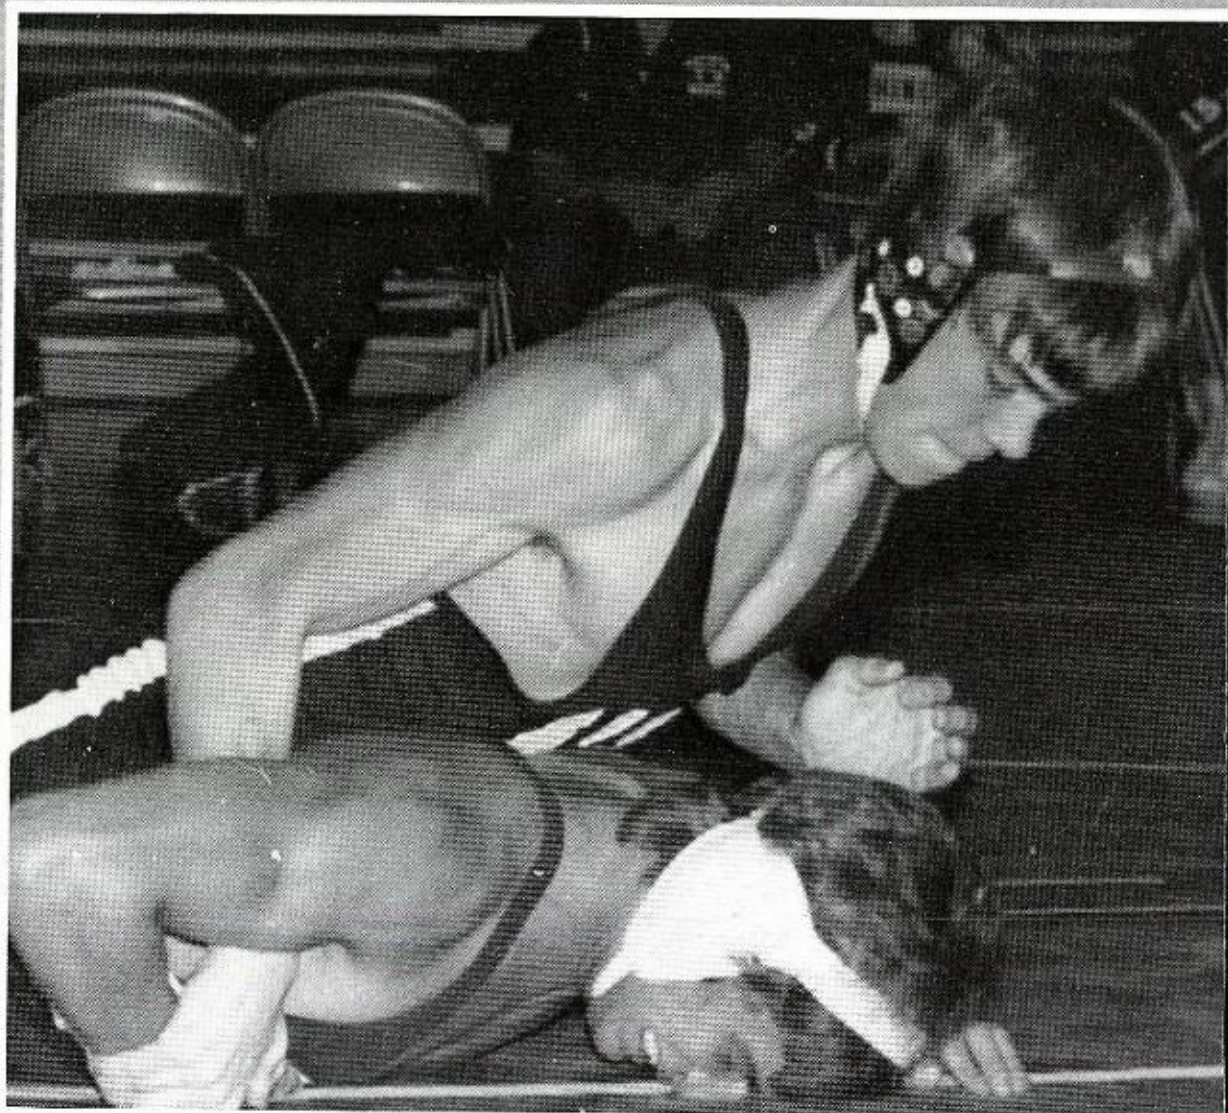

In order to endure the "discomfort" the sport entails, wrestlers strive for a mind-set that is a step beyond the physical. Inspirational music is incorporated in a practice termed "lights out" (a period of concentration before a match to "psych 'em up!").

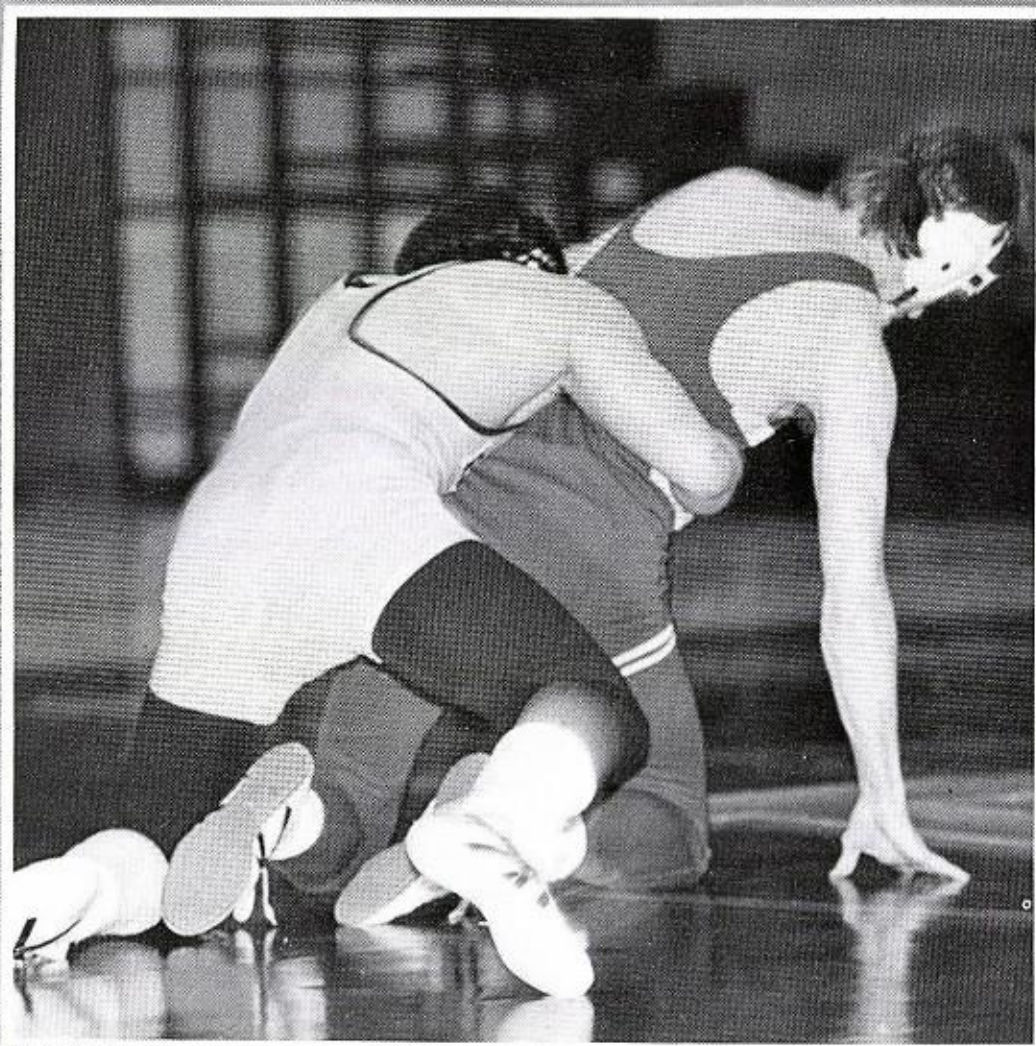

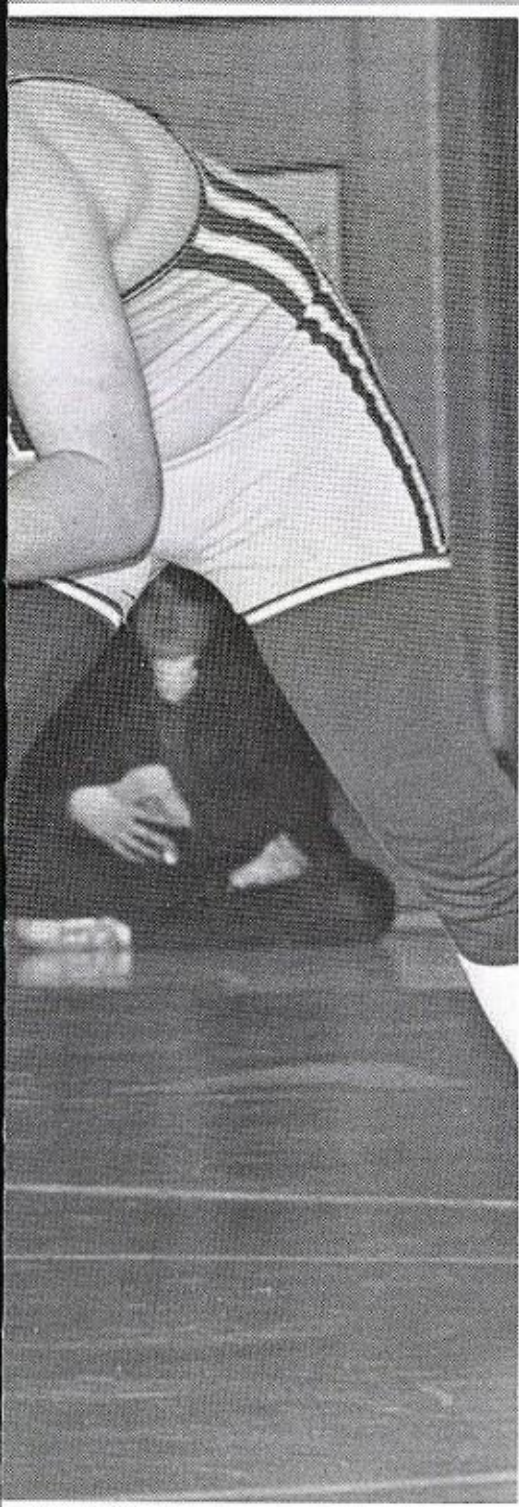

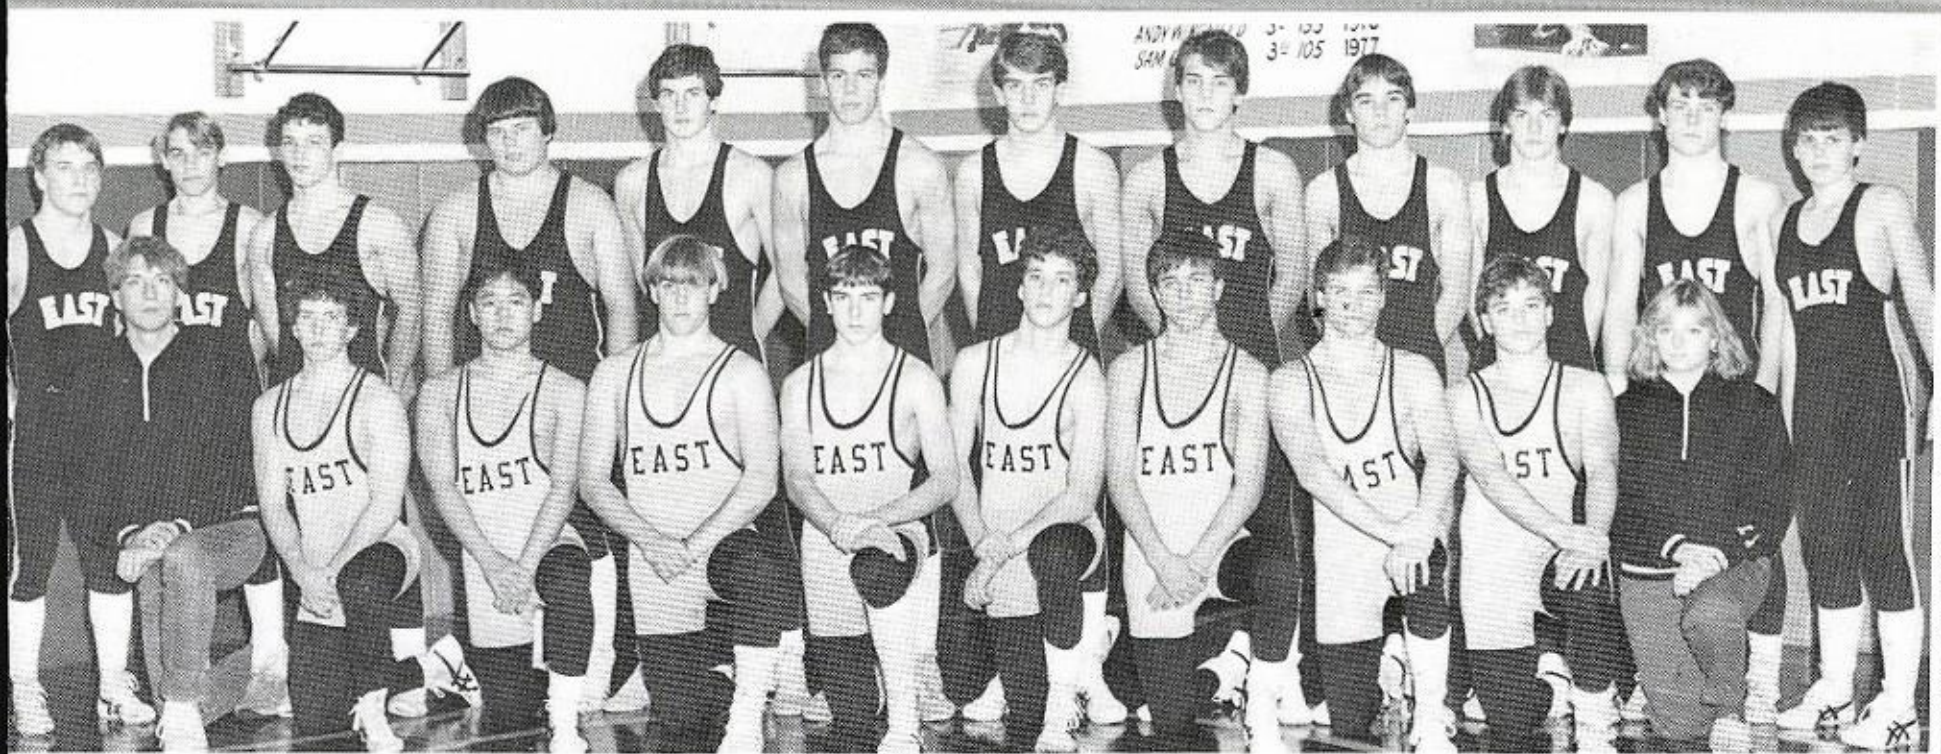

Far from the leopard-skin togas and the balloon-bellied goons that roll around on Sunday morning's All-Star Wrestling, amateur wrestlers endure the most demanding of training regimens. While Scary Larry, Big Al, and Gorgeous Gary Royal bumped bellies in front of the camera, our guys were subjecting themselves to daily practices, consisting of exercises with names that are scarier than Larry would ever wish to know. Coaches Wisthoff and Kramer coined such terrors as "tired man," "king of pain," "three-man rolls," and "wind sprints" to describe these torturous exercises. Yet it is with relatively no complaint, but with a sense of pride, that wrestlers relate their trials.

Actually, it is this combination of stamina and self-discipline which builds the character of each individual wrestler and in turn accounts for the strong bonds which distinguish the wrestling team. As a result of this unity, team members suffered a real blow after the 1985 team captain, Brett Minden, fell to his death this past Christmas. Admired as an athlete, a musician, student, and friend, Brett is always recalled with a tone of respect. Because of Brett's commitment to music, this year's team made a dedication to the Kansas City Youth Symphony in Brett's name.

Captains, juniors Richard Muller and Mark Erickson, stressed the idea that wrestling is mind over matter. As Erickson summed up, "Wrestling is based on pain. Anyone who has a strong enough will to overcome it will be successful. But, unfortunately, many potential wrestlers are cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat because they have no spine to endure the pain . . . Basically, it's fun to squash people."

A Stroke Of Glory

by Diane Roberts

Tragedy often inspires people to go beyond their limits. When questioned about this year's tragedy and success as a team, the swimmers repeatedly gave the same reply: "We did it for Jerry." During the summer of 1985 the Lancer coach, Jerry Sprague, died of a heart attack. Each team member had to cope with the loss of a friend and coach as well as meet the rigors of practice and competition.

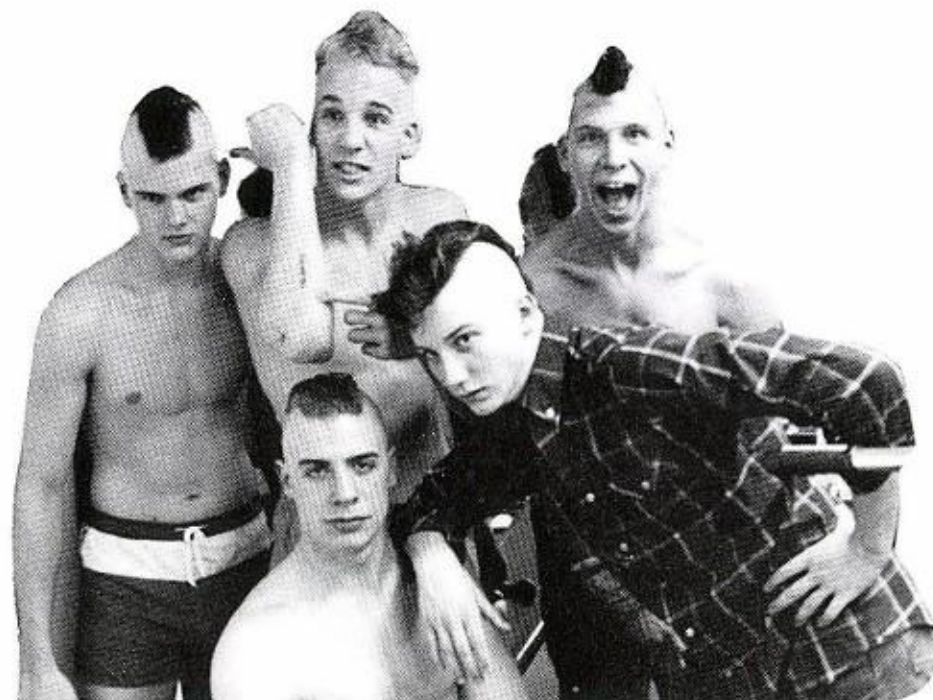

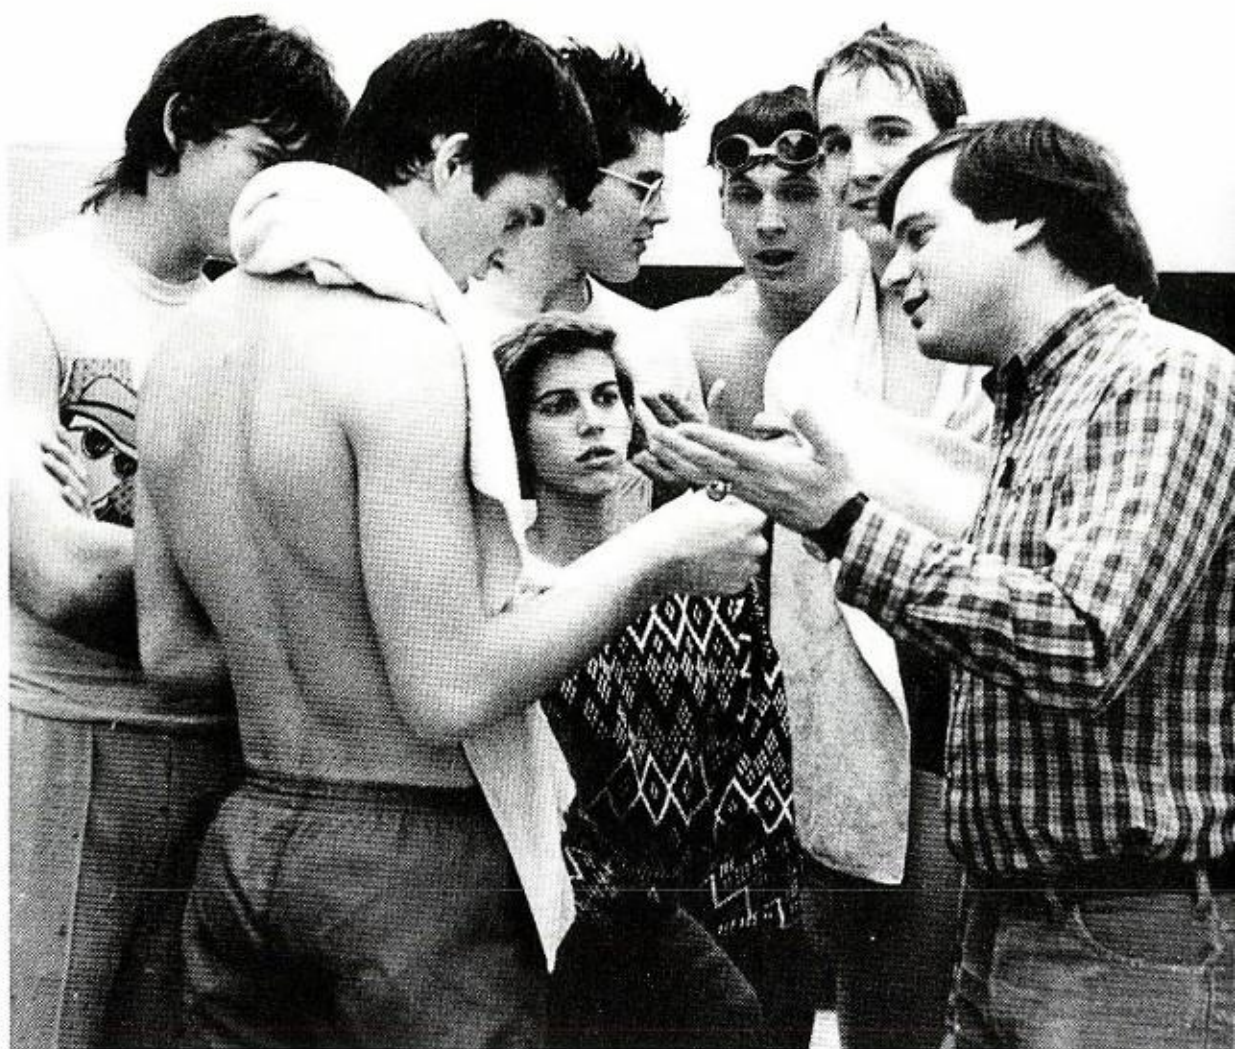

No one could have asked for more than the swimmers gave this year. Set back by sickness and injury, including a car accident involving three varsity swimmers, the season began with low expectations for the team. But the tankers refused to give up on themselves. "No one thought we would accomplish our goals, and yet we blew away Northwest to win League," pointed out junior Greg Windju. Even after winning League by fifty points, the Lancers were still considered to be the underdogs for State. Once again the swimmers put forth tremendous effort to capture second place, losing by only two points to Blue Valley. "Blue Valley wasn't even excited about winning. They knew it could have gone either way — we're just as good as they are. Six-tenths of a second is such a small margin," stated senior Carl Damon.

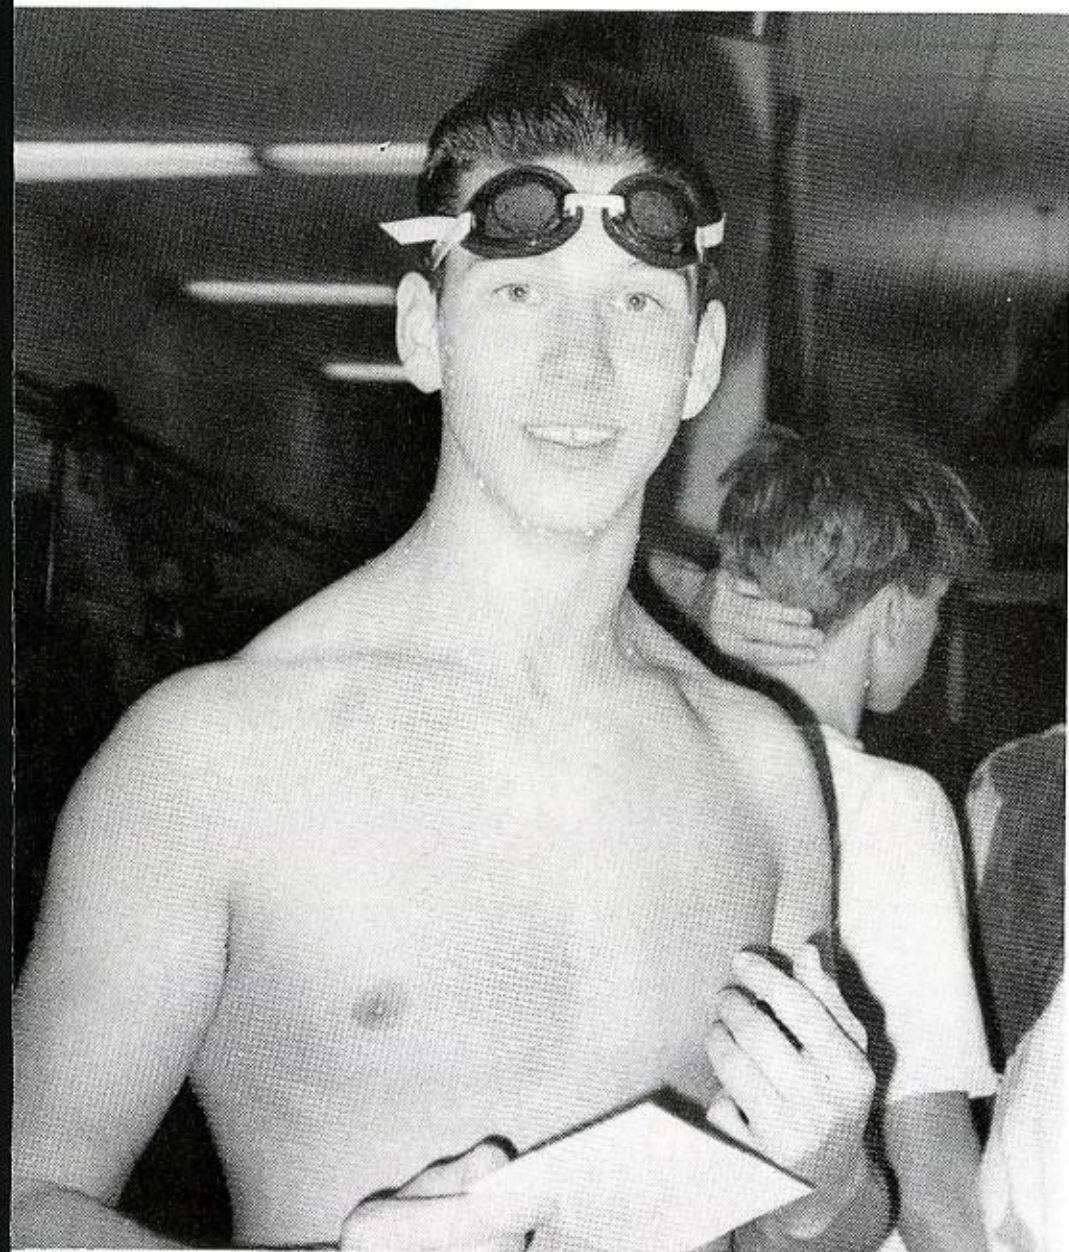

Stu Sanks, senior, led the Lancers in diving by winning second place in both League and State. Sanks was excited about the season: "State and League were great. I was pretty happy with my performance."

The Lancer swimmers had a good year. The reason for their success: "Everything we've done this year, we did for Jerry. We pulled together for him," explained senior Mark Morash.

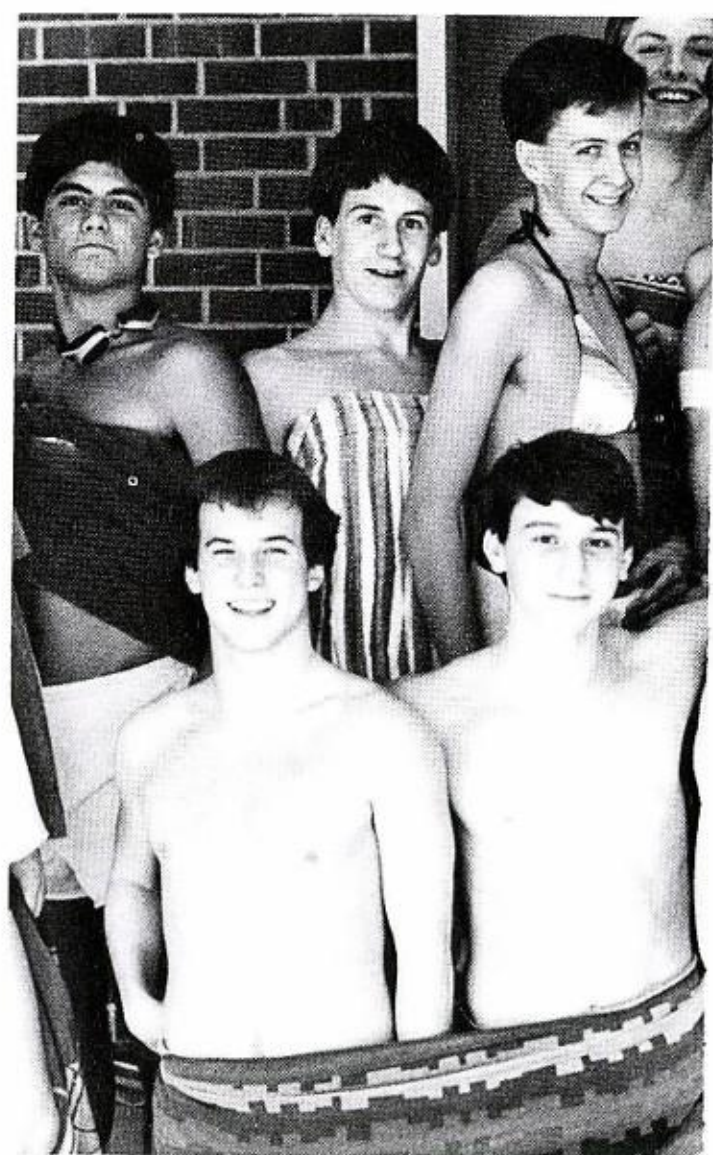

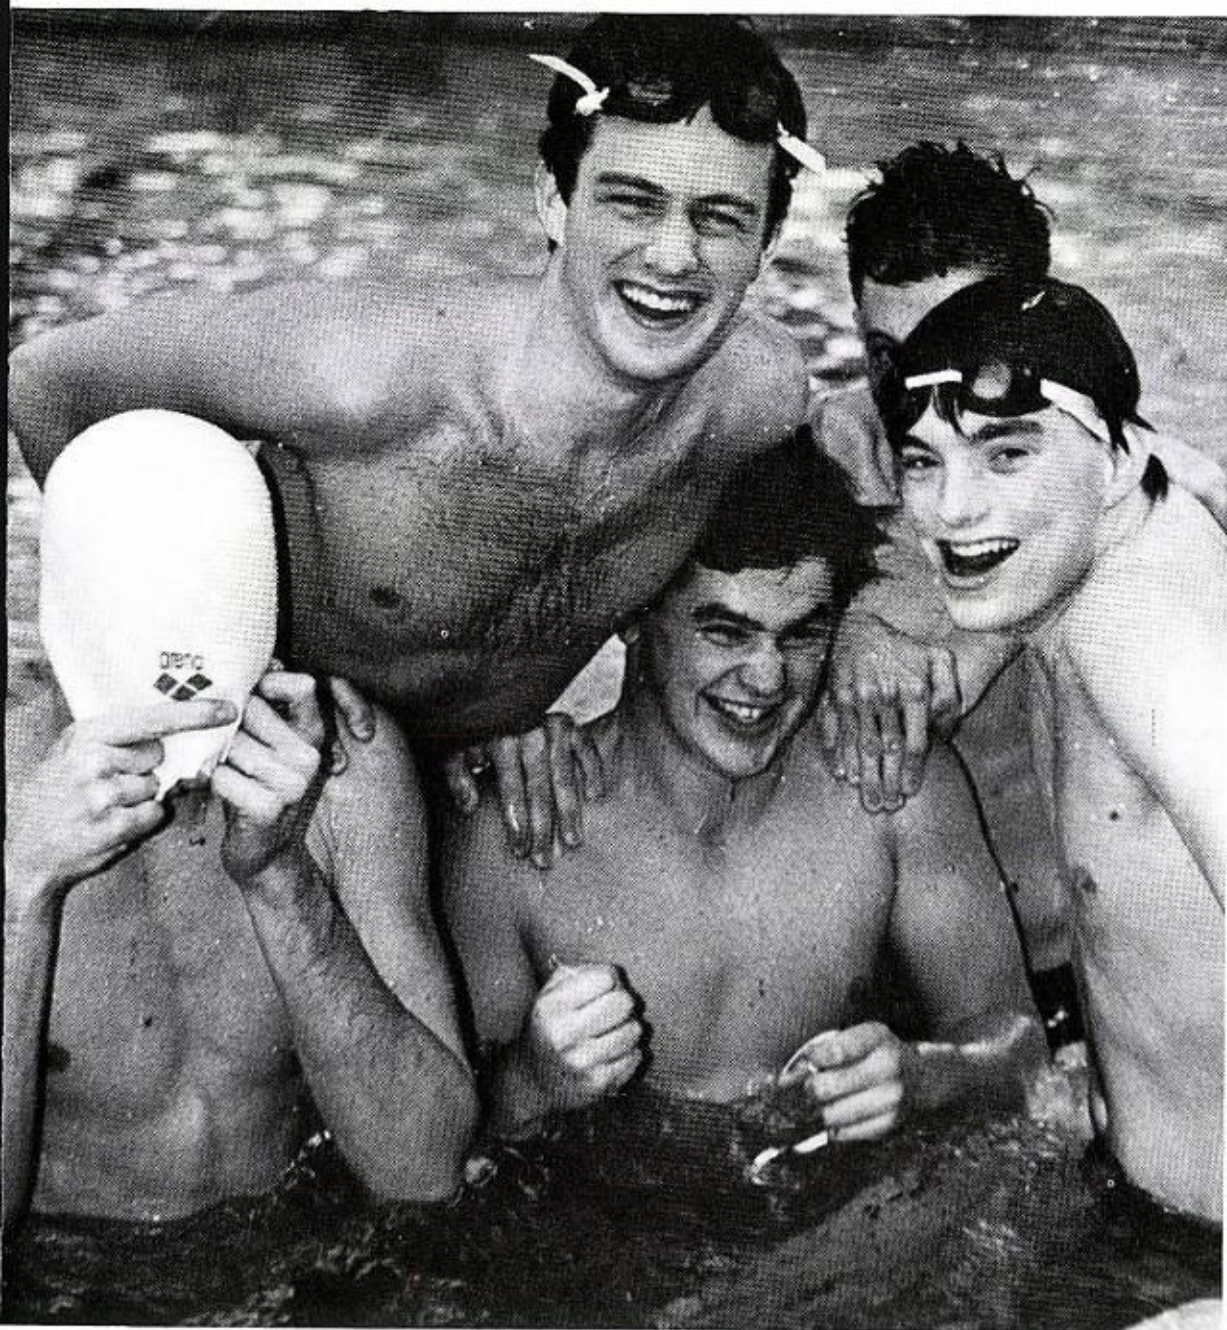

Larry Long, senior, reflected, "The years of work, the loss of hair and weekends — it was definitely worth it."

On The Wild Side

by Jessie Ullmann

So, you didn't make the East basketball team. Is it the end of the world? Do you throw your cat out of your bedroom window? Of course not because there were intramurals to sign up for. There were several boys' teams from each grade level and four girls' teams. Each team only plays other teams in the same grade. There was also a faculty team which included Bill Stiegemeier, Rick Royer, Joel Nager, Larry Tice, Dick Kramer, Charles Sulzan, Ed Stonner, and Rusty Newman; they played the seniors.

Monday night was the night to play with five games going at once and 19 games a night. At the center of all this activity was Chief Organizer and Horn Blower, Diane Roberts. Diane took offensive and defensive stats, recorded points scored and points scored against, and had the responsibility of scheduling the games. "Scheduling takes the most time because I have to make sure two teams don't play each other twice. I try to make them back to back because each team plays two games a night, but that gets really complicated when teams start making requests," said Roberts.

Each team picked its own members and name. Team names were most unique. For instance, there were the Ivan Dragos, The Team, Ol, the Studs, Friends of the Zoo, etc. At the end of intramurals, Roberts planned a big tournament to decide which team was really the best.

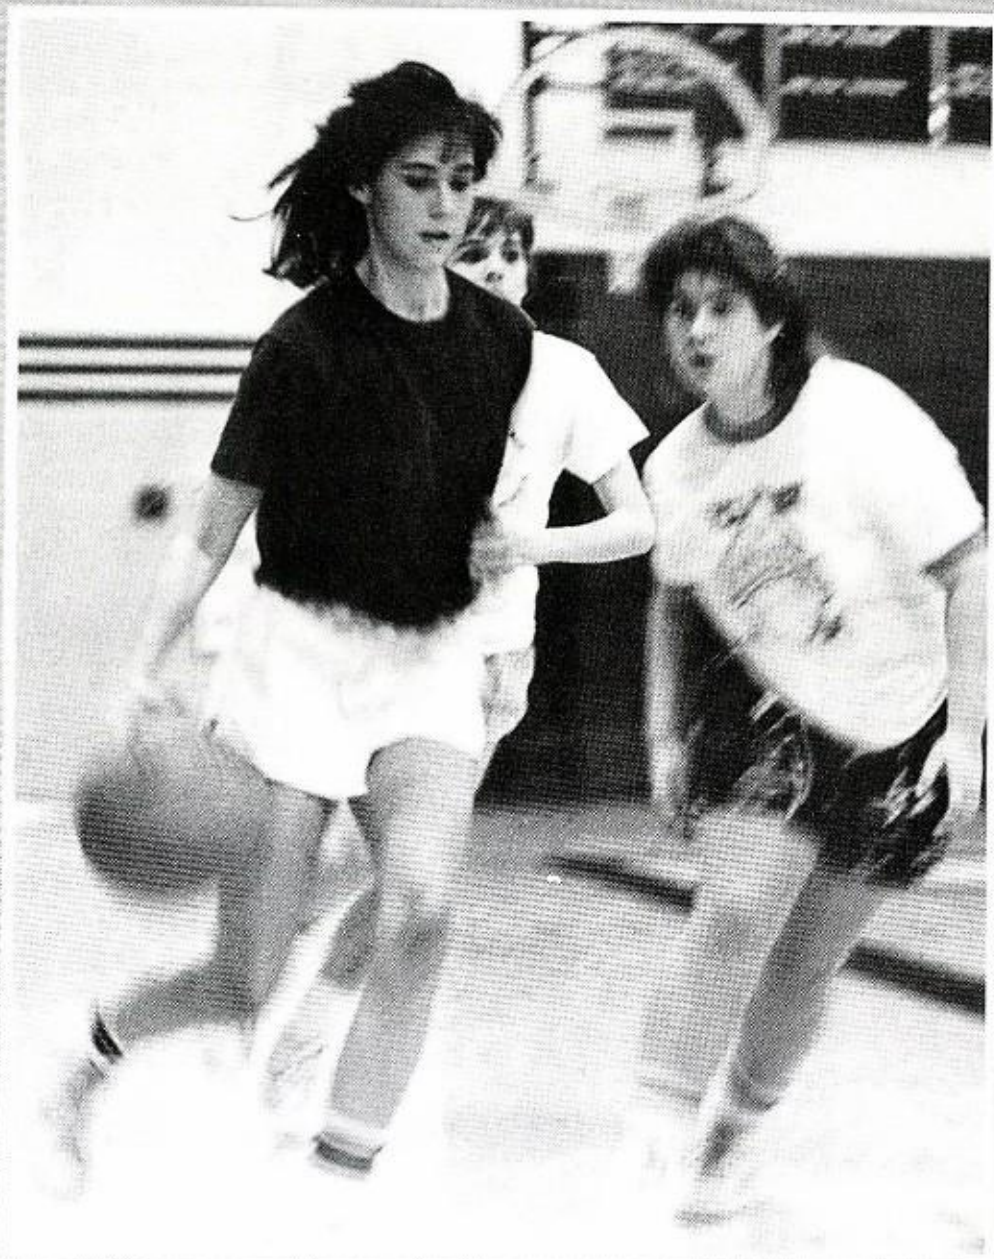

"It's really nice to be able to play again," commented Royer on the fact that there hasn't been a faculty team for about ten years.

MINI-MAG

Pike's Peak or Bust!

by Jessie Ullmann

If you ever happen to be driving around downtown Kansas City at night and just happen to go by the KCPL building and see tiny figures scaling the side, don't be alarmed and don't call the police. It's only the East Climbers Club keeping in shape since Kansas is a bit lacking in high rocky peaks.

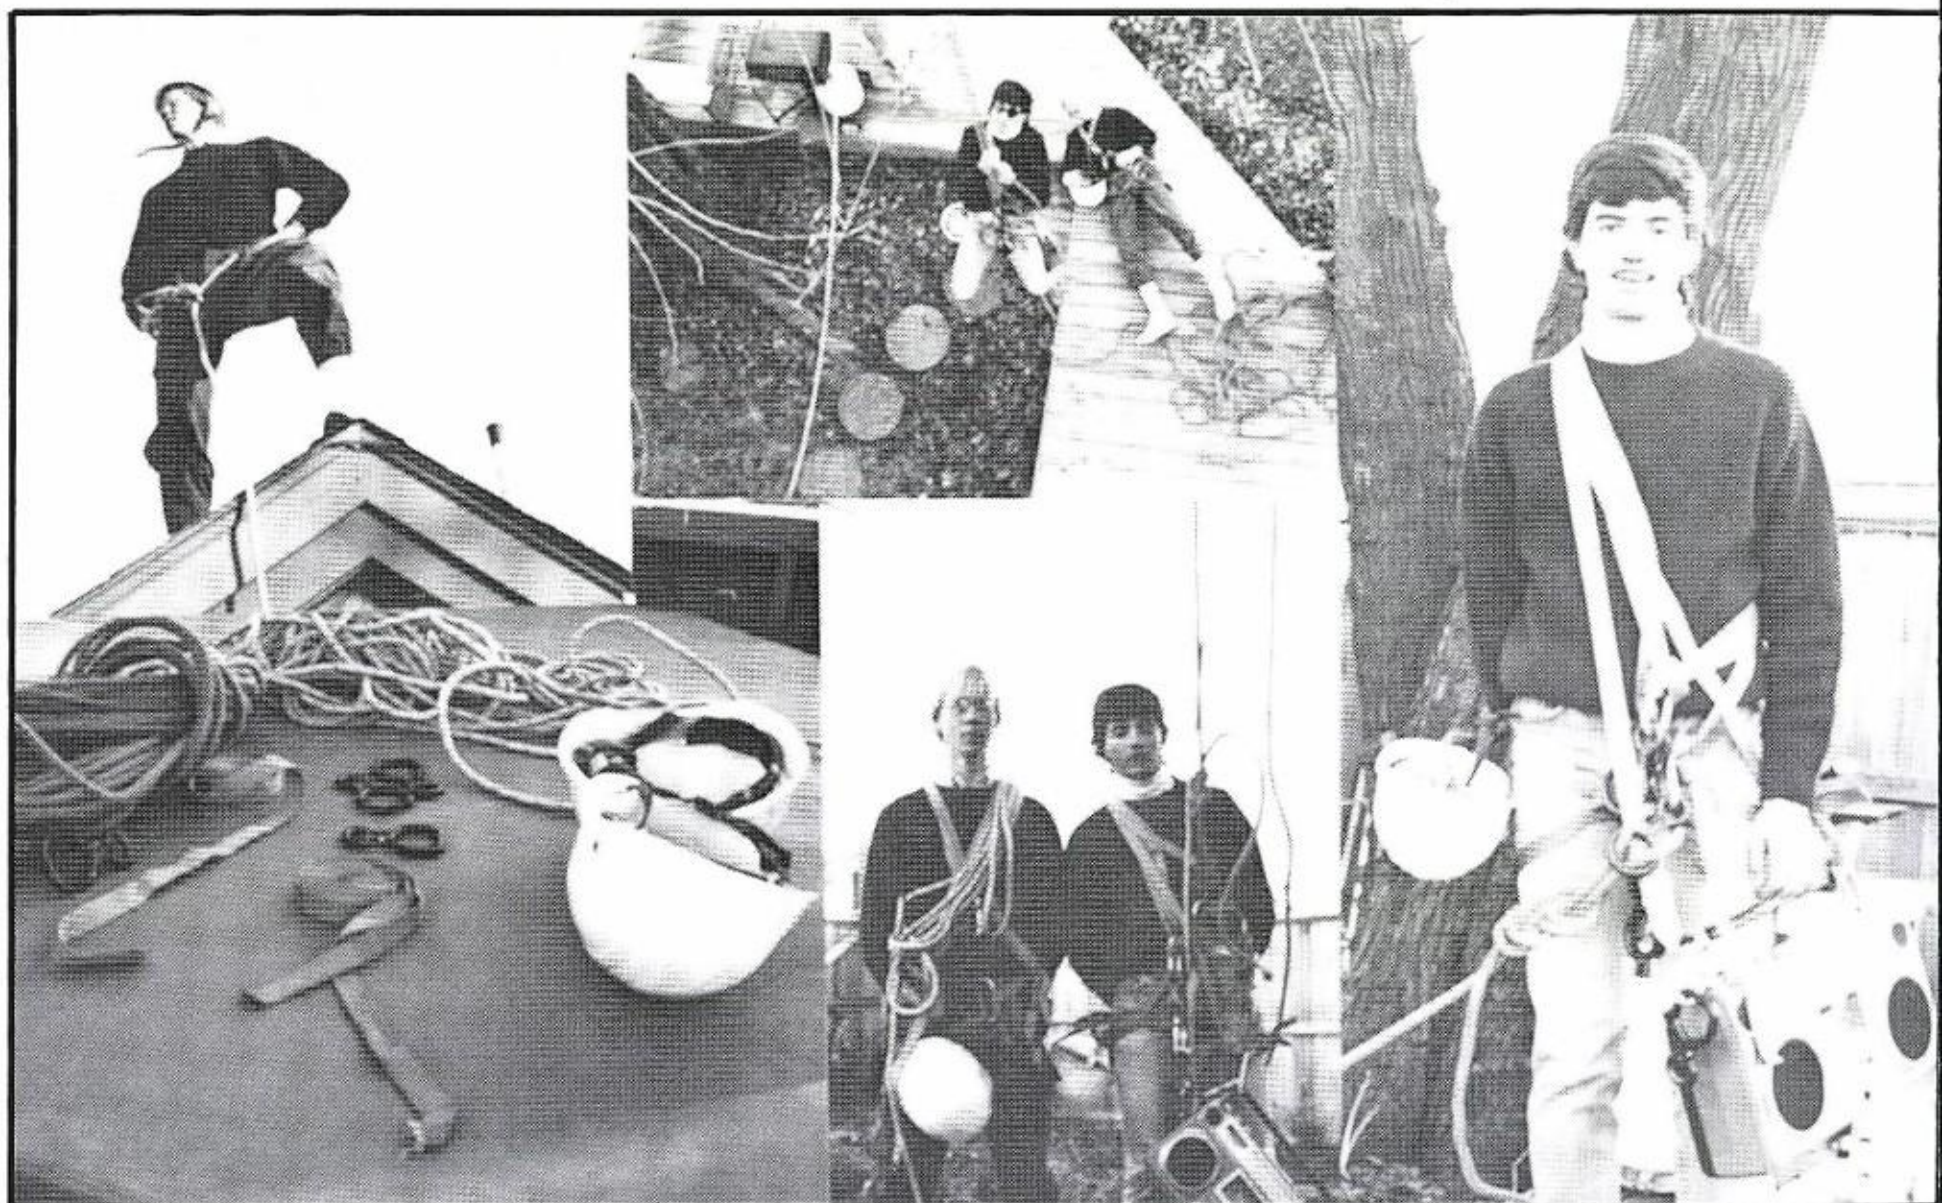

The Climbers Club was created by Pete Frey, Head Honcho; Jennifer White, Vice Honcho; and Todd Barker, Treasurer Honcho and Sergeant-at-Arms. And why did this group decide to form such a club to exist in Kansas? "Because we like to get high," explained the Head Honcho.

Frey and Barker went to New Zealand last spring break to participate in technical climbing. Barker claims that Whangui Bay is the best "crag" in New Zealand to climb, even though he fell 150 feet off the side of the rock into a lake below. This spring break they are planning to tackle El Capitan in Yosemite National Park. The climb supposedly takes 28 days so they'll have to take time off from school to participate in this monumental occasion. During the summer, the club of 23 members is planning to climb a 14,000 foot peak in Colorado.

Getting into the club isn't as easy as one may think. First, the person must climb a tree or wall because "you can tell a lot from that how they will handle a mountain," claimed Frey. Applicants must also be able to identify the fundamental equipment, such as "pitons," "hexes," "friends," "caribeaners," and "hand and foot jams." To stay in shape White locked herself out of her house and climbed the house to get in. They also went down to the limestone caves and practiced on the walls. In hopes of making the sport less complicated, Frey was in the process of developing fingers with eyeballs so one can see what's on the ledge above much easier.

First W.P.A. King Reigns

by Julianna Profitt

"Surf city, here we come . . ." Beach tunes were blaring November 19 in balmy Shawnee Mission as girls and guys decked out in tropical shorts and printed Hawaiian shirts with leis draped around their necks limbo-ed the night away.

WPA was a lady's chance to go out with her favorite guy and the guy's opportunity to enjoy a night out.

The highlight came as the winners of the first ever WPA king contest were announced. Pat Oliver received the honor, with Stu Sanks, Jeff Derusseau, Max Harvey, and Mark Morash comprising his court. The royalty was awarded cool shades and assorted prizes.

Stu Sanks, runner-up WPA king stated, "It's good that they gave recognition to the sexy male population at East. However, I don't feel sexy at all."

World War I's 911

by Kathy Morris

An ambulance in the driver's ed parking lot! Fortunately, no sophs had an accident. Instead, the International Club and other students restored a World War I ambulance in the auto teach garage this year.

The ambulance, one of three which still exist today, was purchased by the Liberty Memorial Museum from a farmer for $4000. It had been sent to Europe during the war and was originally drawn by four mules. Kristin Stoneking, International Club president, said, "It was cut down to two mules because there weren't enough mules to go around."

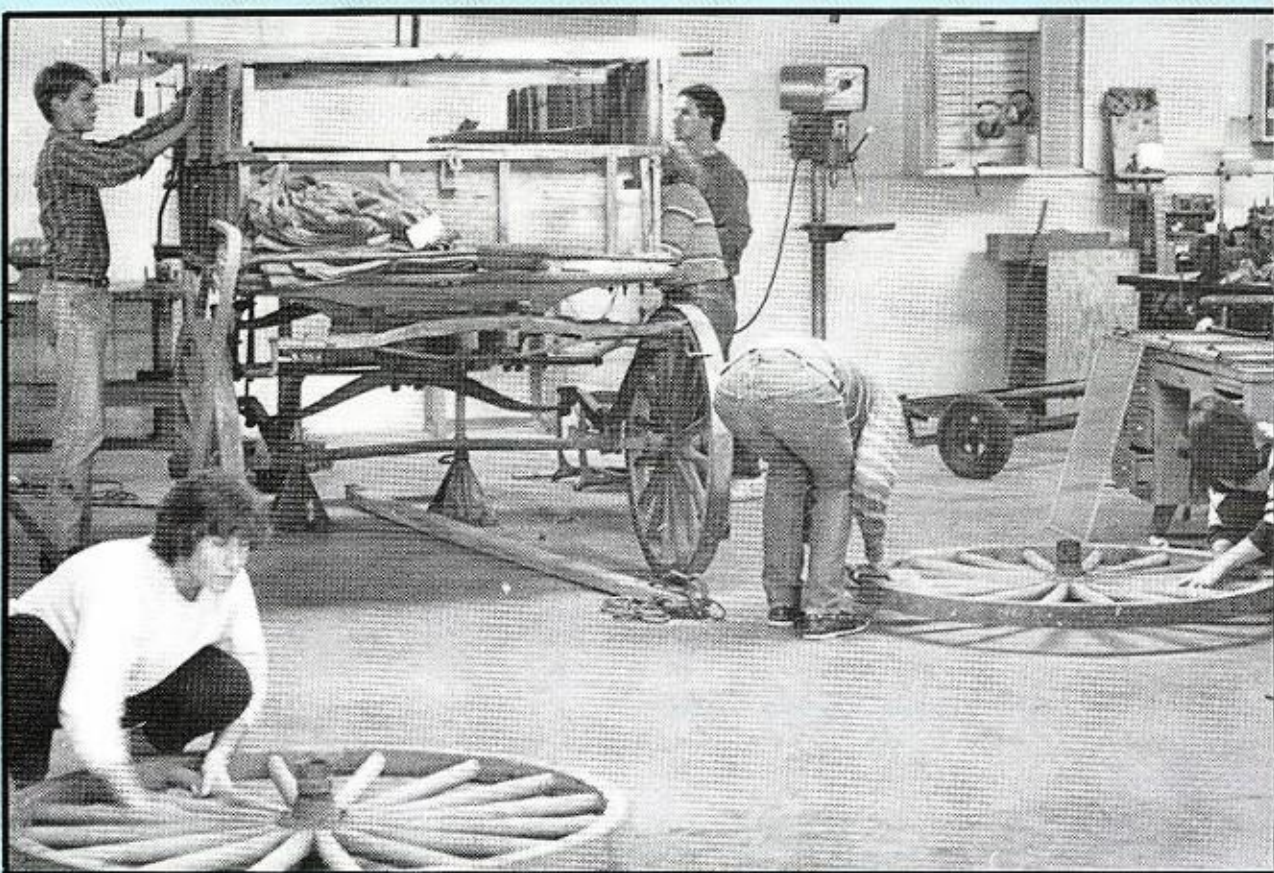

The ambulance will be used in the Spirit Festival parade this coming July and will eventually be displayed in the new wing of the Liberty Memorial Museum, completing an exhibit on field medicine of World War I. A plaque designating the names of those who worked on its restoration will also be displayed.

Stoneking said that students began by sanding the ambulance, but they tried "to keep the original paint on it." She added, "We're also varnishing it; it will be a very beautiful work of art."

Jim Dineson, auto tech teacher, supervised the restoration while Paul DeBarthe and his restoration committee gathered historical evidence in order to write articles about the ambulance's history and the ambulatory corps.

This was the first time in the school's history that a club cooperated with a museum on a project.

Which Came First? The Chicken Sandwich or the Egg?

by Ruthie Harrison

It's fifth hour and all eyes anxiously stare at the clock. The teacher desperately tries to keep the class interested in the history of French architecture, but it's too late. Out of the silence comes an increasingly loud rumbling like a volcano about to explode — the sound of thirty stomachs growling in unison. Finally, the bell rings and the rush is on. No one dares stand in the way as hordes of hungry students dash to their cars, each one hoping to be the first in line at Burger King for a hot chicken sandwich.

Like the world of fashion, fast food has had its share of fads, starting with the Big Mac and progressing to the Wendy's single with more beef. But today no connoisseur of fast food cuisine would be found eating anything other than a chicken sandwich from Burger King. Libby McPherron, fast food expert, explained, "Burger King's chicken sandwiches are the best thing since car-pool spaces."

Unlike past fast food favorites that have come and then gone by the wayside, these sandwiches have a very loyal following. Some, like Wendy Poindexter, senior, claimed, "I would even trade my Barry Manilow collection for one."

Where the Action Is (or Isn't?)

by Diane Roberts

For those of you who still find yourselves heading for McDonalds in anticipation of another exciting Friday night, the truth must be told. McDonalds is no longer the "in" place to be. A quick glance through the door of Kelly's Bar in Westport (how'd they get in there anyway?) reveals one of the newer hangouts. For those of us who have not yet been able to establish ourselves as being twenty-one (What, a fake ID?), Torre's in Westport is another favorite spot.

Overall though, it was up to kids to make their own good time, and there was no set spot for everyone to go. During the frigid winter months of January and February, indoor action usually consisted of small, closed parties at a friend's house. (Whose parents are out of town this weekend?) Of course, sometimes these small parties tended to grow and all of greater Kansas City showed up — Who didn't go to Stacey Mindrup's party last January?

As the weather changed and spring arrived in full force, outdoor activities took on a new significance. Once again Franklin Park and the Arch were packed for various weekend activities.

Wherever the place, whatever the activity, the main idea to keep in mind was to have fun at all costs — there are not many years left.

Royal Blue Pandemonium

by Matt Sheffield and Jessie Ullmann

"The I-70 Classic," "The All-Missouri Series," "The Show-Me Classic" -call it what you may, the fat lady has sung and the Royals have won! It was beyond baseball, a dream come true. The Royals became the first team in baseball history to win the World Series after being down 3-1 and losing the first two games at home. But it was more than a battle to be the Number One Team in baseball; for Kansas City and St. Louis, it was State.

The 1985 Series had all the qualities of a true classic and more. We saw a story-book life: Royal pitcher, Bret Saberhagen, who not only won the 7th game, but was named Series MVP, given the Cy Young award, and made the much proud father — all in two days. The perfect moment: Dan Plesac's two outs, bottom of the ninth, game-winning hit in game six. The climactic finish: a convincing 11-0 shutout in game seven, highlighted by a 2-run blast from right-fielder, Darryl Motley.

However, the Series also had its not so bright moments. Take Joaquin Andujar's frustration arising from conflicting opinions with the home plate umpire to the point that he charged the plate and was removed from the game. Senior Bob Stopperan commented, "Those 'Reds' are always a little hot-tempered. It was justified."

The event had its share of winners and losers. The winners: Lonnie Smith, who started the season with St. Louis; Dane Lorg, who won the series with St. Louis in '82 and with Kansas City in '85; and Jim Sundberg, who during his first year with the Royals won the World Series without having ever been in a post-season game in 12 years of major league baseball. The losers: Darrell Porter, who lost the World Series with the Royals in '80 and the Cardinals in '85; former Royals manager, Whitey Herzog, who took the Royals to three division title in the 70's but could never make it to the Series — only to lose to the Royals in the '85 games; and Cardinal rookie Vince Coleman, who missed the entire event after being moved down by a tarp.

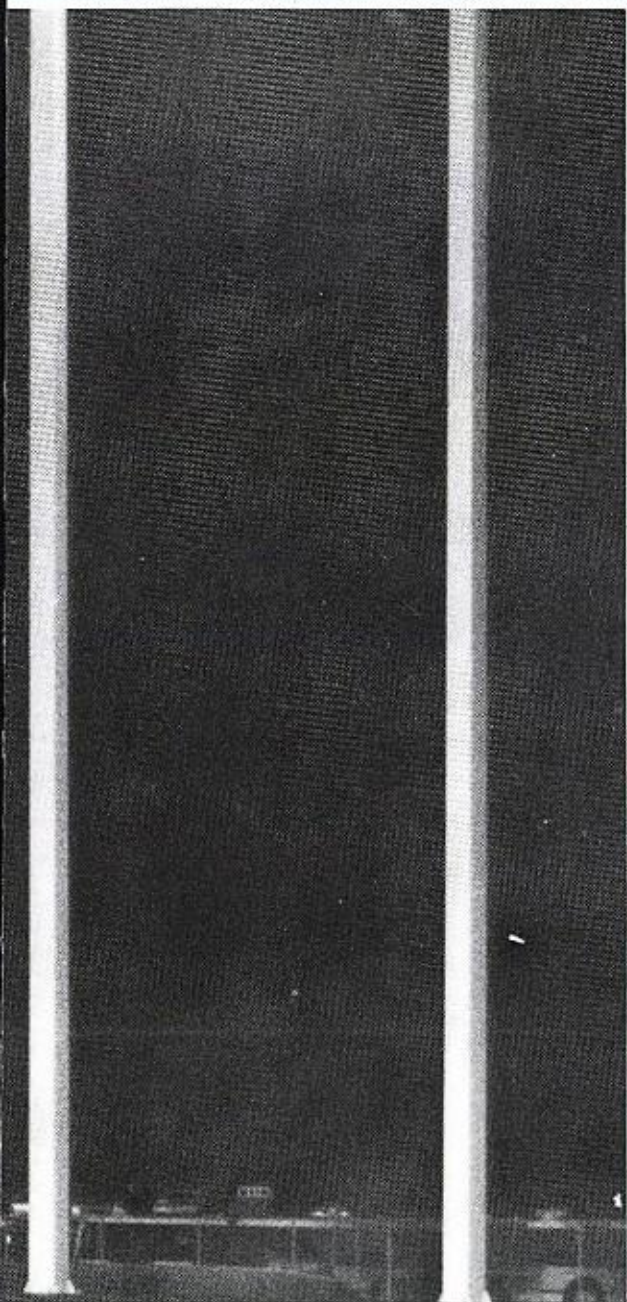

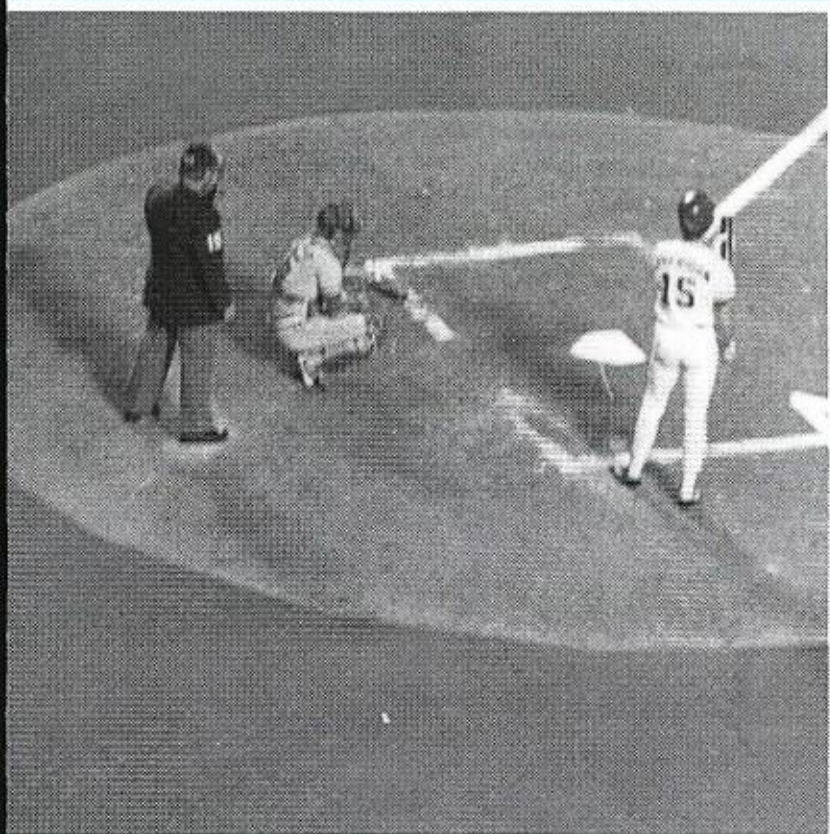

And how did all of this affect SM East? The majority of the student body left school to go to the Royals' parade the day after the victory. Mrs. Hodges explained, "I was lonely because there wasn't anyone here."

"Mom" Krebs, who had the unfortunate responsibility of taking all the phone calls from parents to excuse students, exclaimed, "Can you describe my eyes crossing? I've never had a day like that in ten years. I have a sense of humor, and that was not funny!"

Senior Marcus Clardy revealed, "They should've lost. They won by luck . . . I had some money on the game."

Summing up the feelings of many loyal Royals' fans, Cory Erickson, senior, reflected, "It was really remarkable that the Royals did it. It's just, it's just . . . I just can't believe it!"

Movie Zzzzzzzzzzz's

By Judy Skaptason

Anticipation fills you with excitement. Your body is tense while you wait for the previews to end. Patiently, you sit through the "No smoking . . . cough, cough" and "Please, don't litter" mini presentations. You wait and wait and wait . . . for the movie to unfold in front of your eyes. And still you are waiting.

Unknowingly, you have joined the hundreds and thousands of victims who fall prey to the beguiling traps of "lousy" movies. How did you, the intelligent and wise, get snared?

The not-so-mysterious case of junior John Fletcher is a common one. Rocky IV was sold out, resulting in his choice of a less appealing movie, Transylvania 6-5000. Unfortunately, the movie only produced the question, "What's the plot," and the complaint, "But I thought it would be funny."

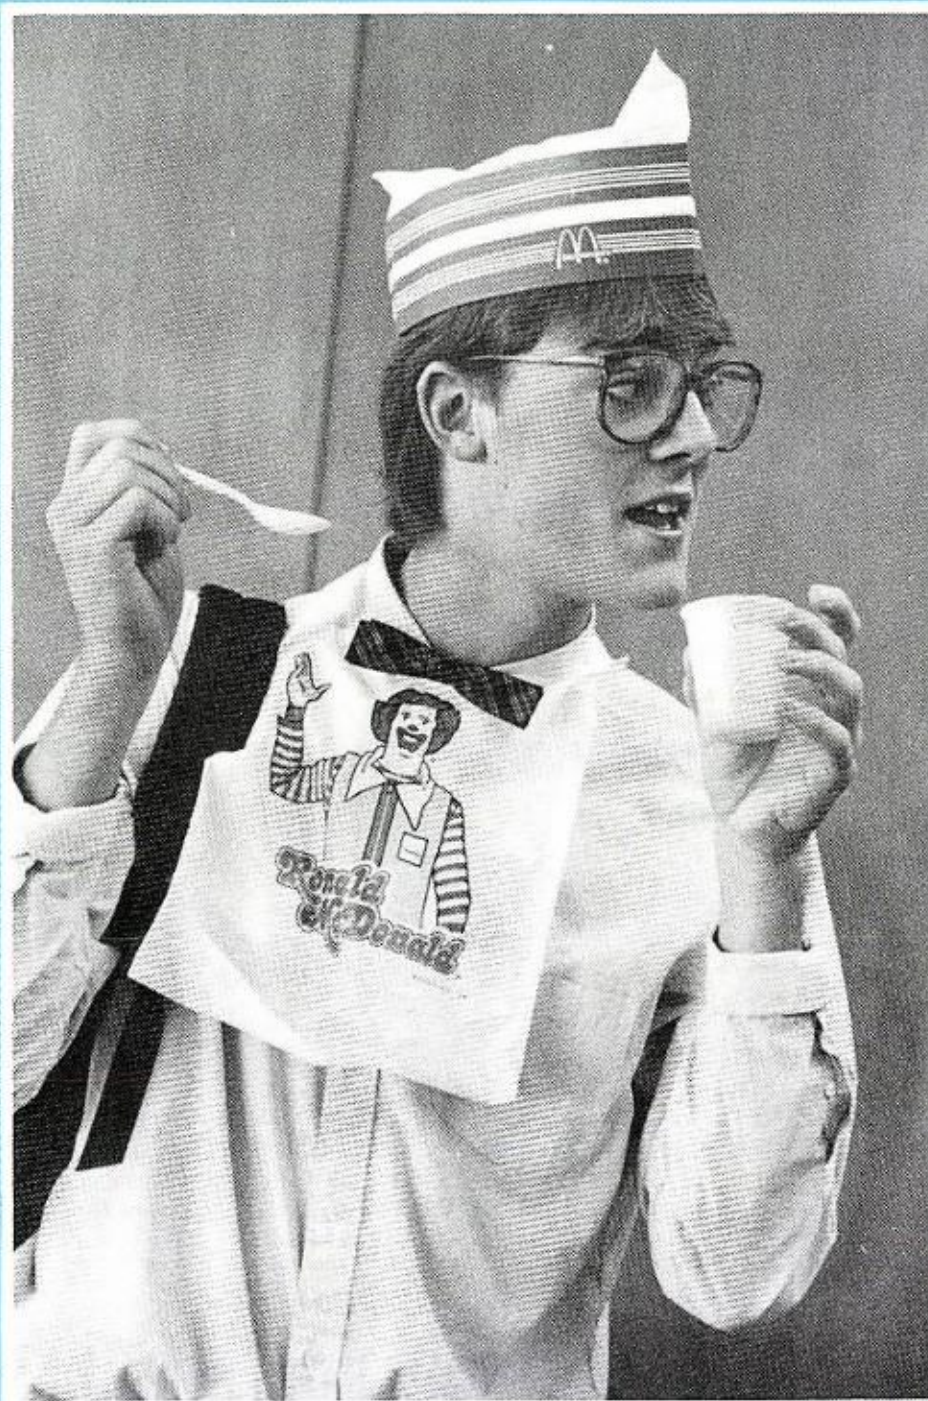

Jill Metzler, sophomore, explained that she goes to a movie "if someone says it's good," or, she hastily added, "if Robert Redford's in it." Still bad advice and faulty information have often left her thinking, "When can I get out of here?"

Other traps include television advertisements. Jennifer Ferris, senior, claimed, "All the good stuff of Spies Like Us was shown in the ad so that all you went to see was the boring parts in between."

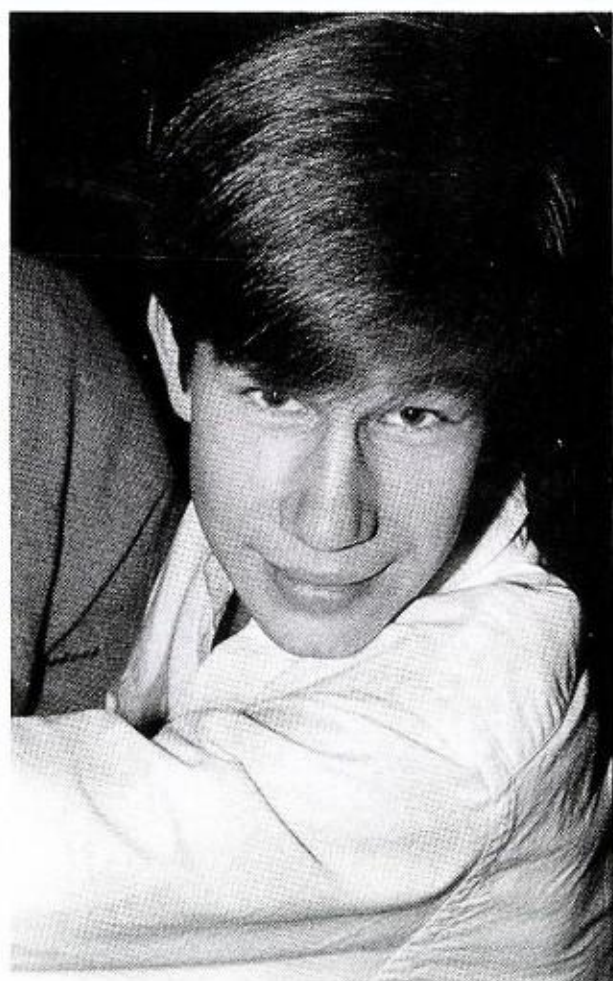

In order to avoid the old jokes, unprofessional special effects, and general "tackiness," students have tried various methods. For senior Kris Krohn, it is dollar movies at Watt's Mill. But Marsha Moorman, senior, stated simply, "I don't see dumb movies."

Regardless of the quality, some popular movies of the year were Pee Wee's Big Adventure, Back to the Future, The Color Purple, White Nights, Jagged Edge, and Out of Africa.

Whether or not you investigated and chose carefully, you probably ended up at least once at a "funny, but . . ." movie, for they dominated the movie industry. Four dollars can be a steep price to pay for such mediocrity, but you always have the option to wait for the Glenwood feature to become the Watts Mill dollar movie.

Everyone Still Loves The Beav

by Ruthie Harrison

Every day hundreds of people, old and young alike, sit glued in front of their television sets for another exciting episode of Leave it to Beaver. Although today's technologically advanced society offers the viewer a vast array of choices ranging all the way from MTV to Miami Vice, few can resist the simple charm of the Beav.

Why, after all these years, is the Beaver so popular? When asked to explain this phenomenon, Chris Carny, senior, said, "The Beaver is a rebel, I can relate to that." Celia Lustig, senior, added, "It's so far from real life that it's like a vacation from reality."

However, for some, Leave it to Beaver has a more personal side. As Hampton Stevens, senior, explained, "Ward and June are like my surrogate parents." And of course there are those like Laura Hester, senior, who think, "The Beav is just plain sexy."

But no matter what the reason, there's no disputing the fact that when it comes to television shows, they just don't make them like they used to.

Senior Bob Stopperan remains a loyal fan of The Beav. (photos by Bjorseth)

We Survived

by Diane Roberts

1985 — a year of change, a year of disaster, a year of hope.

What mankind himself could not do to destroy his world, Mother Nature accomplished for him during 1985. Children starved in Africa due to the terrible drought and famine which has seemingly continued forever. A devastating earthquake leveled buildings and killed 10,000 people in Mexico. A few months later the Nevada de Ruiz volcano erupted causing a mudslide which killed 25,000 Colombians — the worst volcanic disaster in eighty-three years. Aviation looks back on its most deadly year in history: claiming 1,948 lives including the largest single crash — killing 520 people in Japan.

Terrorism ran rampant as 1985 also came to be known as the Year of the Spy. Terrorism brutally took the lives of 782 people. Beirut, Rome, Vienna, and Frankfurt all fell victim to faceless terrorism, but the murder of Leon Klinghoffer while in his wheelchair aboard a a cruiseship brought new meaning to the word terrorism.

In the spy game, not only other countries turned against us, but also our own fellow Americans. Eleven Americans were accused of spying, and although Vitaly Yurchenko defected to the U.S., he then proceeded to "redefect" to the U.S.S.R.

The Soviet Union ushered in a new, younger, forceful leader, Mikhail Gorbachev. This resulted in the much heralded Summit meeting, where in actuality nothing was accomplished except a promise for another meeting.

Americans held their breath when President Reagan was pronounced to have cancer of the colon, but surgery was successful. Then America watched as the federal deficit was estimated in excess of two hundred billion dollars; the federal debt reached almost two trillion dollars.

Local students were greeted with contract disputes between teachers and the school board on the first day of classes. The Board of Education voted to close four junior highs, but area residents protested the closing of Indian Hills.

And of course, no one can forget the remarkable comeback of the Kansas City Royals to capture the playoffs and then come from behind to beat the St. Louis Cardinals in game seven of the World Series.

1985 — We laughed; we cried. We felt joy; we felt anguish — we survived.

THE SUMMIT

STAR WARS

"The Craft Has Exploded"

by Diane Roberts

Nothing seemed wrong when the space shuttle Challenger roared off its launching pad into the clear Florida sky. Just over a minute later, the space craft was already ten miles high, moving at 2000 miles an hour. It was at that precise moment, on Tuesday January 28, 1986, that tragedy struck. As Americans looked, the shuttle exploded and disappeared into a ball of flame. Everything had been running so smoothly that the truth was impossible to believe. The presence of Christa McAuliffe the first citizen and school teacher in space, caused the tragedy to strike much closer to home.

Americans demanded to know why the tragedy occurred, and NASA officials desperately sought evidence to answer their questions. The future of manned space flight was in doubt. Three weeks later, NASA confirmed reports that a fault had existed in the seal of the right booster rocket. In one brief moment, seven lives were lost and many questions about safety were raised. Only time will tell how this tragedy will affect the United States space program.

Expressing Oneself

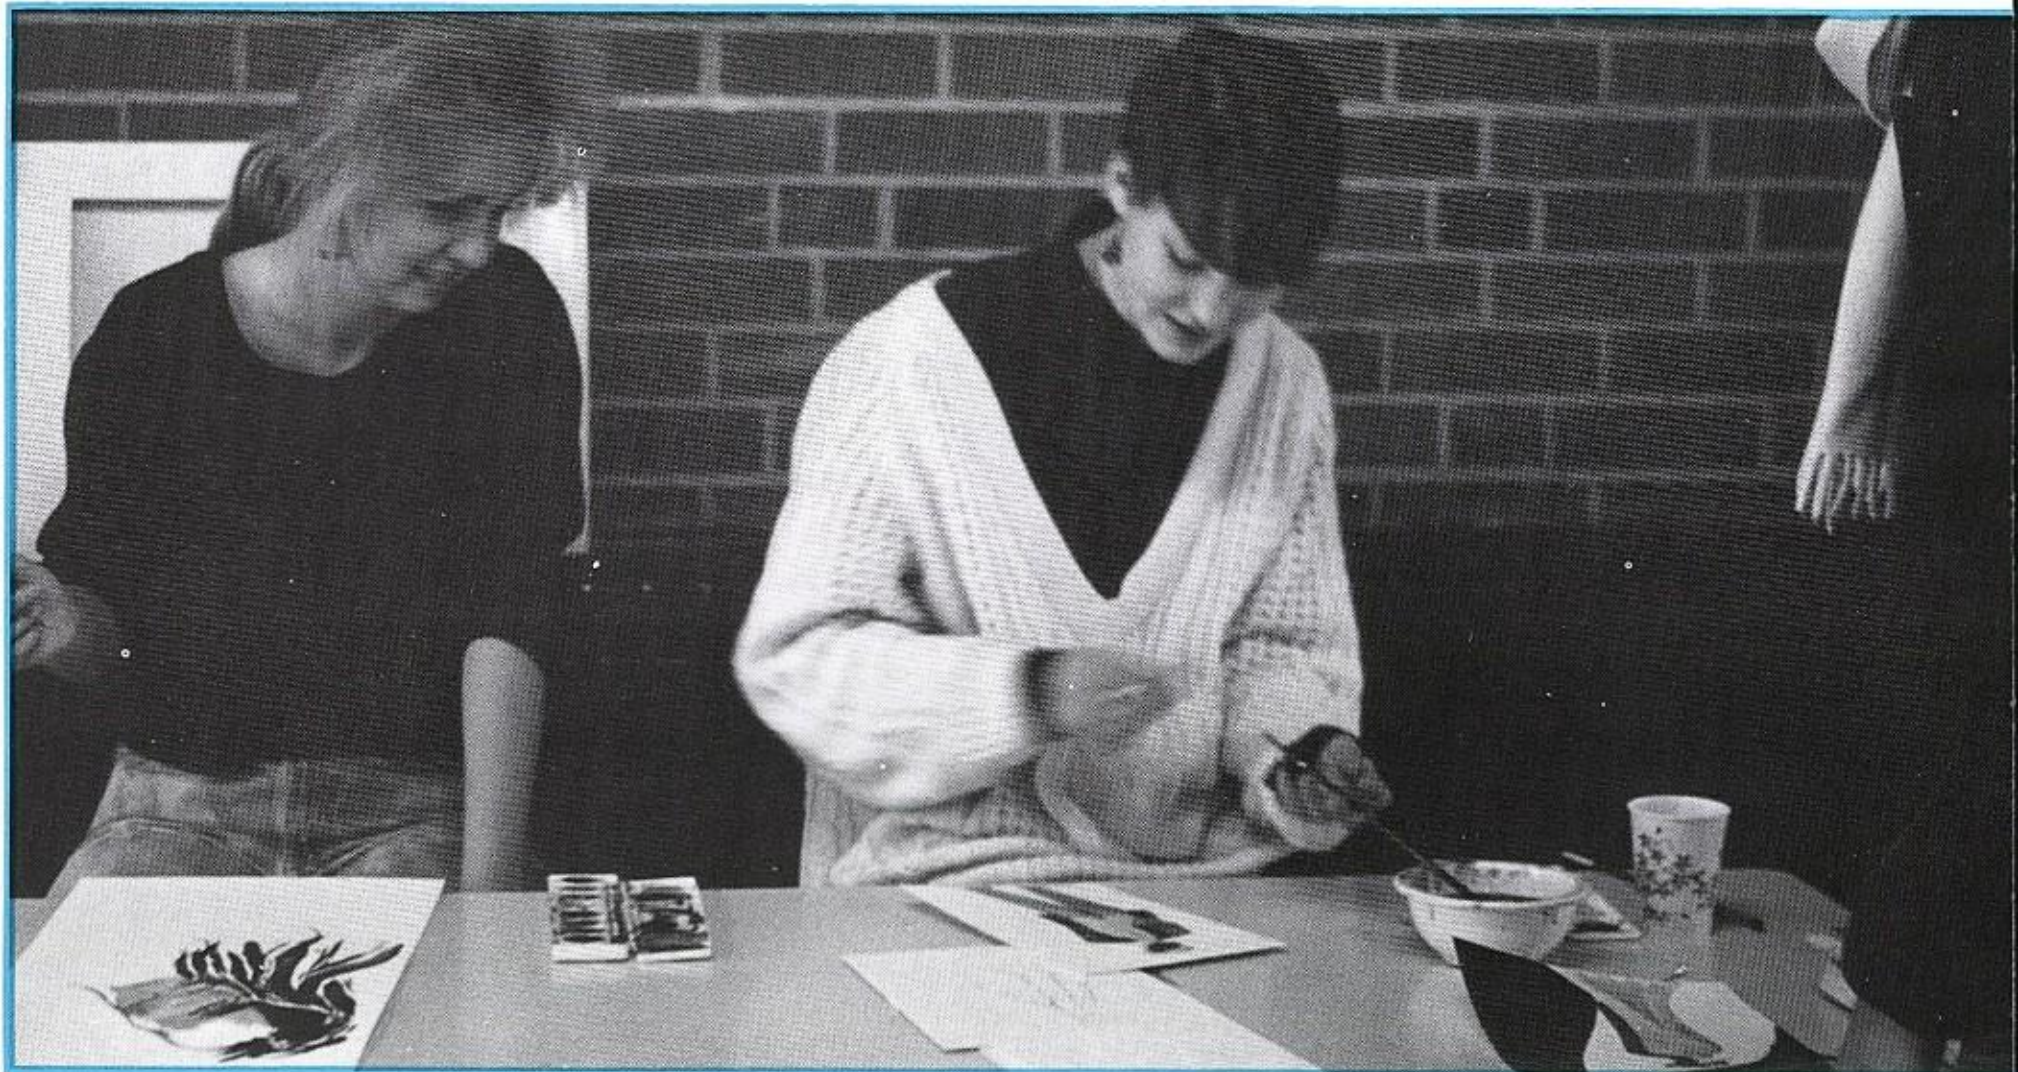

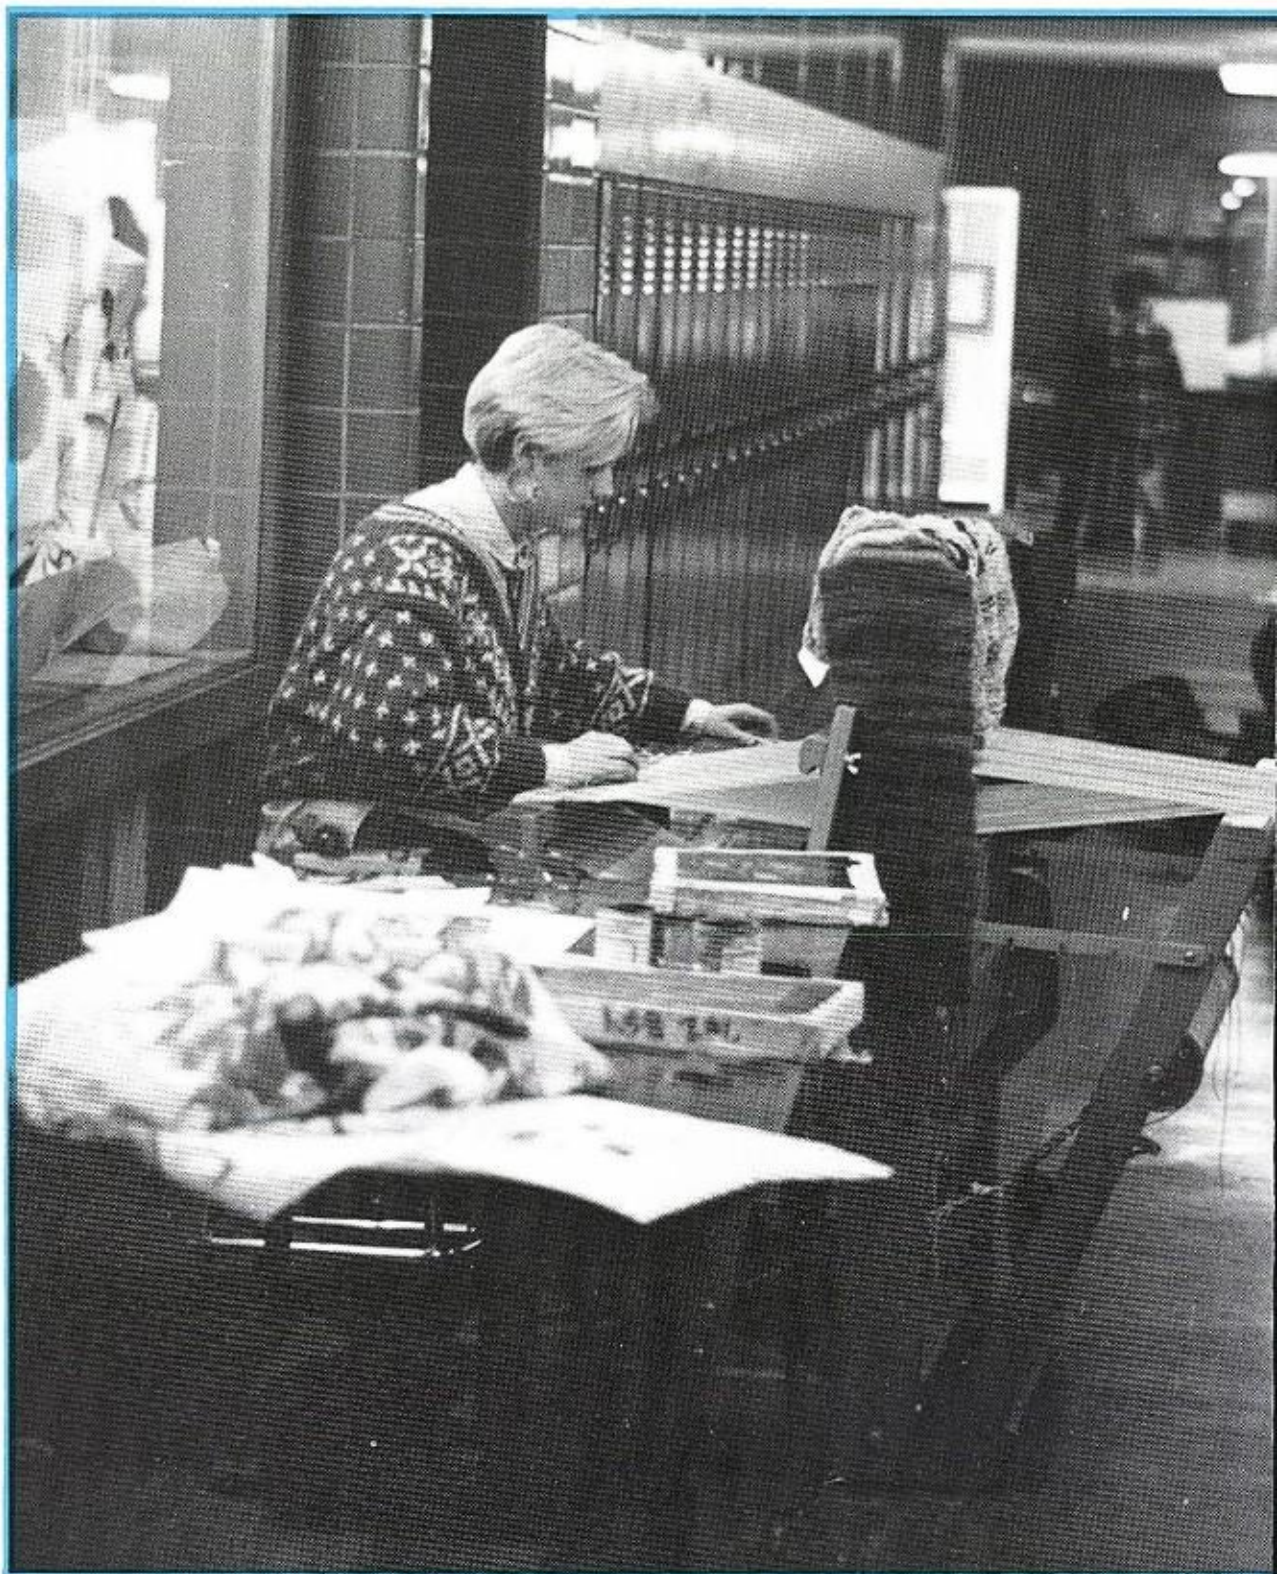

by Jessie Ullmann

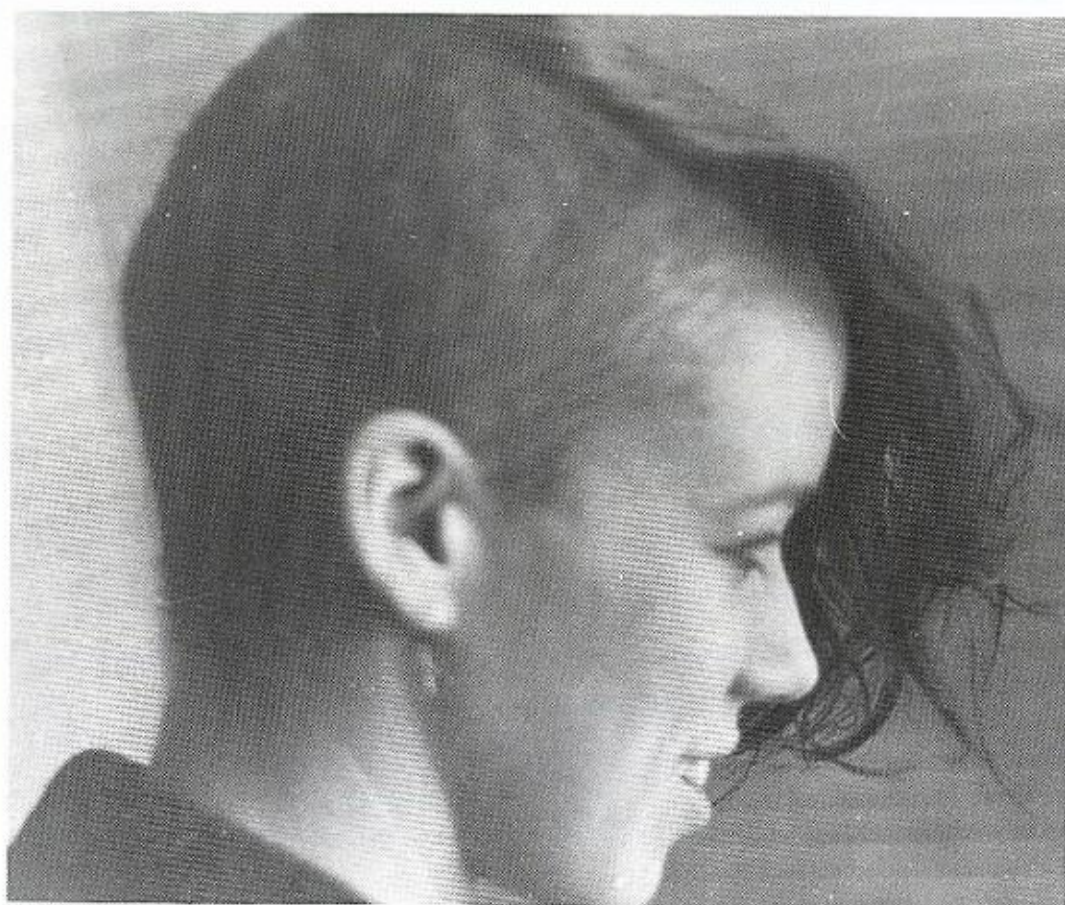

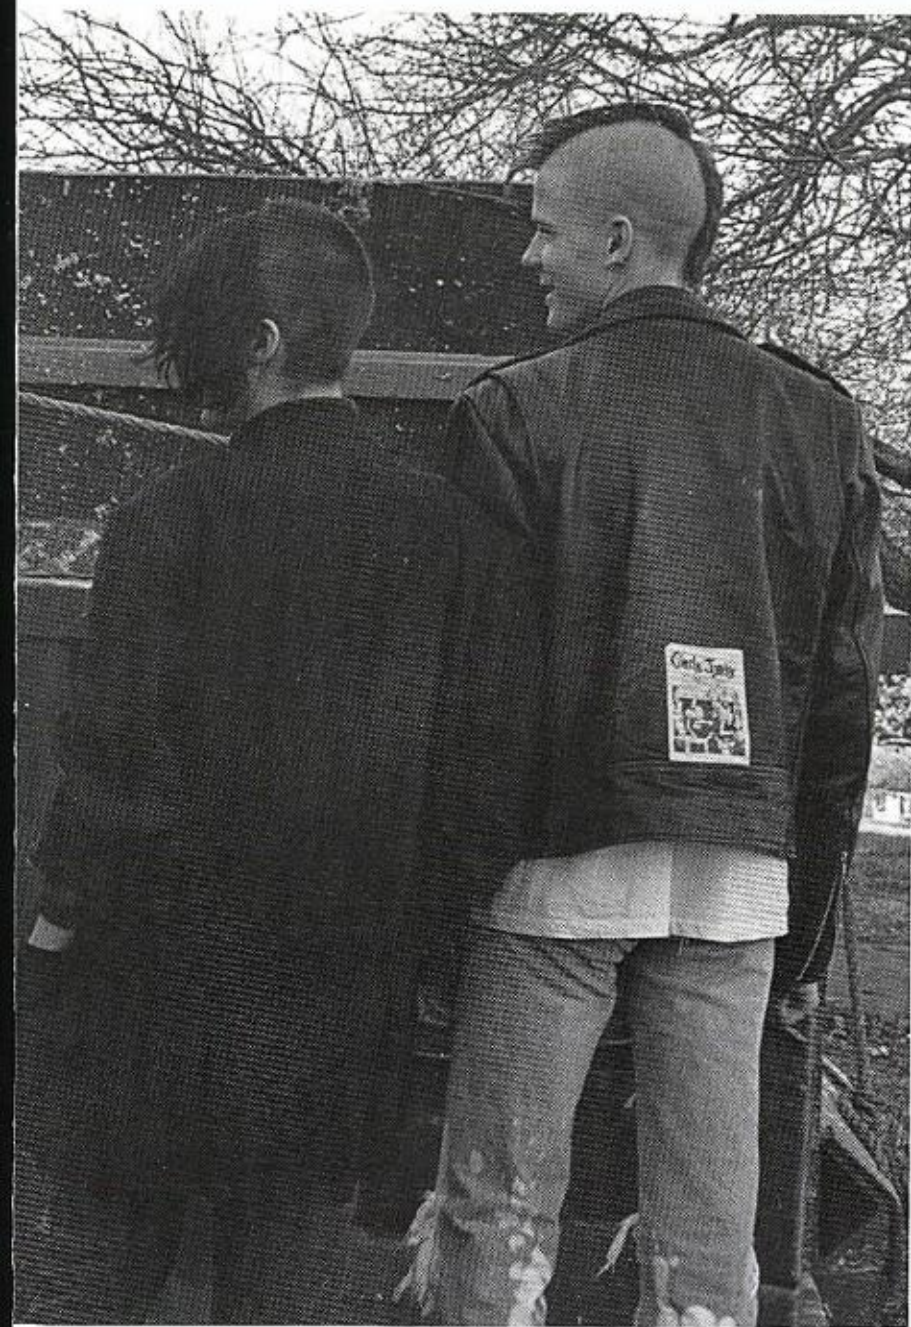

Picasso. Pollack. Van Gogh. The inspiration of others must have given them a start on the path to greatness. SM East lent its contribution to the art world by hosting its first annual Art Fest.

"It gave us something to do after lunch, as well as being fun," commented junior Erica Finley. Some may be wondering what it involved, but those who wanted to expand their cultural background know the festival served as a demonstration of this year's art work. It was held during lunch for two days in November, and it gave demonstrations of different types of art: drawing, (pencil and charcoal) by senior Jon Neill, junior Dawn Brown, and senior Kelly Bowden; painting with senior Jason Wade and senior Dave Altis; and ceramics by senior Joey Welch. Afterwards nonartistic Lancers were allowed to display their ability on a huge paper mural which was later hung in the hall. "We wanted to get the art wing noticed so that it's not lost as just another part of East," said Neill, a respected artist at East.

Hair Today — Gone Tomorrow

by Diane Roberts

Another boring day . . . Ho hum, yawn . . . Wait — who is that? What happened to her hair? OK, she's getting closer. Let's be subtle about this . . . A quick glance as they pass by — I don't want them to know I'm looking. Whirling around to get a better look, I bump into someone who seems to have lost half of his hair — premature balding on one side of his head? I don't think so. Wait, here comes another one — How'd she get her hair to stand up like that? Aah- I'm surrounded!

There was definitely no specific fad for hair at East this year besides perhaps developing the most bizarre haircut possible. From mohawks to rat tails, from dyed to natural, the shaved, sheared, spiked, and totally "off-the-wall" look was in.

Some liked the new look; others hated it. Some thought it was disgusting while others thought it was "cool." A few didn't even notice. "There are no funky haircuts," commented junior Merle Goldstein. Whatever the opinion, the choice of what cut you desired was up to you as an expression of your own personality. As senior Todd Williams described it, "People are free to choose as they like, and I'm free to dislike as I choose."

Indoor Action

by Kathy Morris

The action! The sport! The Comets! Wrong! How about the Bayern Muchin? Bayern Muchin, a German national team, was one of the several SM East indoor soccer teams this year. Most teams played at Just For Kicks, more commonly referred to as "JFK," on 87th and I-35.

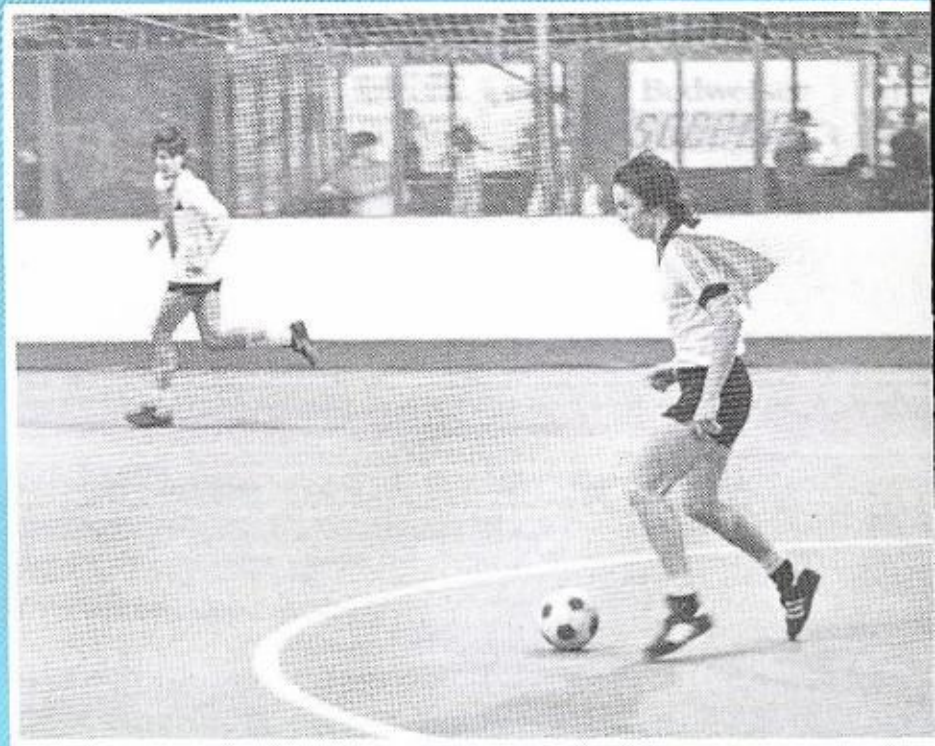

Indoor soccer spread rapidly throughout East this year with several students playing on teams. Senior Eric Matthews stated, "Indoor soccer is faster paced and more violent than other sports." Teammate Todd Barker, senior, agreed: "Soccer players get more injuries than football players."

Despite the roughness of the sport, many East women ventured onto the playing field. For Australian foreign exchange student Robin Crawford, indoor soccer was "a great way to meet people, exercise, and have a heap of fun." Co-ed teams flourished this year. Senior Marcie Hechler remarked, "Playing co-ed soccer allowed me to view the players at a different angle." However, Matthews (who played on the all male Bayern Muchin) stated, "Indoor soccer was one of the greatest games until someone decided to make it co-ed."

No matter what the genetic make-up of the team, each soccer player experienced something he or she wouldn't forget. Marc Moreano, junior, vividly recalled one game when "my shorts ripped and fell off in front of a crowd." Caught up by the game's enthusiasm, senior Brad Adams said, "I really enjoy the fast action and hitting those home runs."

Hockey: One Hot Sport

Matt Sheffield

Society enjoys violence in sports. A fight in baseball, basketball, or football always stirs the crowd. Or how about a crash in a car race? Love it! Unfortunately, spurts of violence or sudden fights occur only once in a great while in these sports, especially high school sports where fights are a rarity. However, we're hooked! There is a remedy!

Hockey always guarantees a good fight or two. Several SM East students battle it out on ice twice a week in the Johnson County Amateur Hockey Organization. Senior Webb McCanse, seniors Chuck Moore, John Fletcher, and Chris O'Neal, and sophomore Scott Moore all play for the Flyers. Though McCanse said it is impossible to have an all-school team due to the small number of players from each school, the sport is growing in popularity. "We used to have a good team at the Carriage Club," explained McCanse; "I started when I was five, but since then I guess guys got sick of it." McCanse also stated that people now were showing up more often, and so it appears that hockey and its "hot" action is attracting the violence lovers of Johnson County.

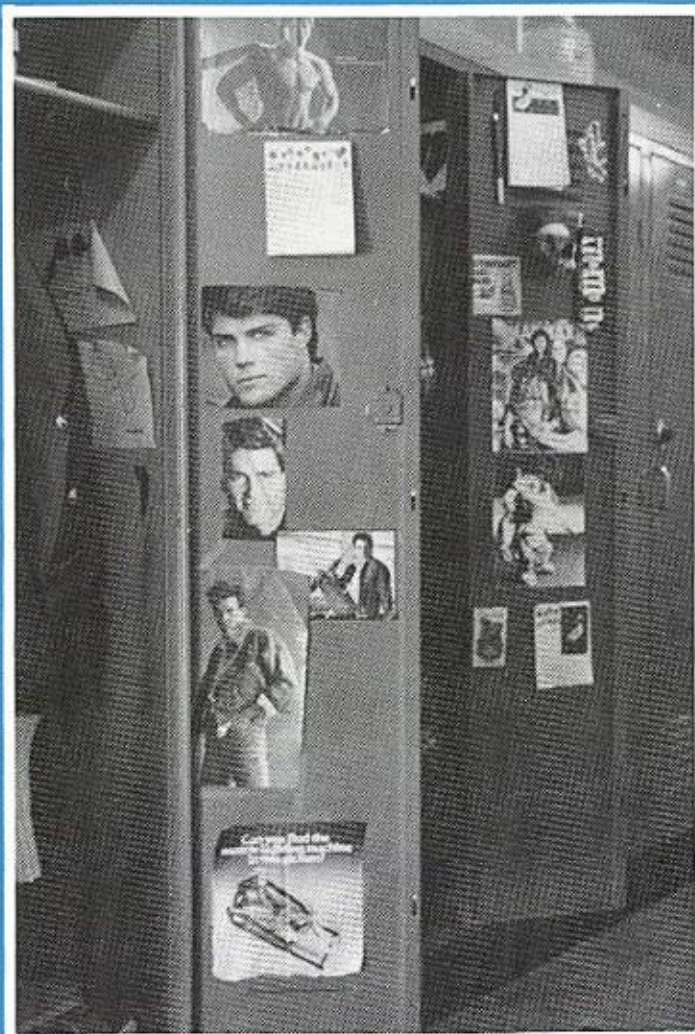

As McCanse said, "It's the blood." The Flyers are joined in the league by the Oilers, North Stars, Bruins, and some teams from St. Joseph, Mo. Junior Kevin Burke was a member of the Oilers. The season lasted from October through March at Foxhill and included playoffs at the end of the season. McCanse reported that the Bruins were the team that liked to fight the most.

Home Away From Home

by Judy Skaptason

You dial the combination 2-20-15. The door opens with a soft click, and suddenly . . . the past year of school falls to your feet. Your mini-world of old, wadded papers, crunched Coke cans, books (a few of which you don't recognize as your own), and assorted junk has fallen apart.

To some students, lockers represent black holes where all of a student's "stuff" is lost until the mandatory clean-up at the end of the year. Lisa Frashier, senior, explained that her locker reflected a "cluttered rathole" where she stuck "everything."

"Everything" to students includes notebooks covered with graffiti, battered schoolbooks, bags of all sizes, Pendleton wool coats, posters of rock groups, a wide range of clothing (shoes to underwear), or anything that can be crammed into a five feet by one foot compartment.

Junior Kristi Patterson has extended her "everything" to "collages of inside jokes" pasted on the inside of the locker door. Blissfully, she added that her locker has become a "home away from home."

As the year passes, growing feelings of affection for your locker are not uncommon. By taking a "snooping" look, you can notice how each locker is adorned to express each student's personality.

But amid the originality, students such as senior Kristin Stoneking still exist who believe that a locker is merely "a place to put my books."

Wheel World Wonders

by Stephanie Litman

On Lamar Avenue, a zebra-striped Volkswagen bug sits on a creative person's front yard. The car never moves—perhaps the owner is too proud. Many cars such as this adorn the student parking lot at East. Though not quite as noticeable as the killer "zebrabug," each car is unique in its own way.

The 1972 Plymouth "squad car" belongs to senior Jimmy Taylor. Taylor proudly states that the car, which has been hit by the Metro Bus, "reflects a side of me that I don't like to show. It is my really bad side." Taylor later admitted that the car had proudly won every accident that it was involved in.

A very well-known car indeed, the so-called black 1957 Chevy, belongs to senior Lee Cowan. Jenny Rose described the car as being similar to the second red batmobile, which is fitting since his nickname is batman.

Shanon Haraughty's car honks every time she turns right. Everyone knew what was coming up the street from up to a mile away.

All in all, you are what you drive. No, actually, you drive what your parents give you to drive. Take it from one who knows.

Memorial Dedicated

by Kathy Morris

Mirroring how times have changed, the ceremony dedicating the Veterans' Memorial honored graduates who died serving their country in Vietnam.

Dr. James Sandfort, principal, stated, "The dedication wouldn't have had the support ten or twelve years ago because at that time there was a great deal of strong disapproval against the war. As time moves farther from the public policy regarding the war, people begin to appreciate the tremendous sacrifices and contributions these men and women made." These veterans have been overlooked by the public because of the larger issue of the war.

East veterans finally achieved recognition last November 11. The ceremony included a colorguard and a salute from Leavenworth, a performance by the choir and the band, and an address by Dr. Richard Heimovics, president of the Class of '59. The mayors from all the Shawnee Mission areas placed a cluster of wheat under the memorial as a token of respect. Family members of the honored veterans attended the dedication.

Both the Classes of '59 and '60, the PTA, and individual donors funded the memorial, which was designed by Kathy Cunningham Barker, Class of '59. Bronze plaques bear the names of those who died while serving in the armed forces.

They were Timothy Lee Fowler, Class of '75; William Heep, Class of '60; Frederick E. Huttie, Class of '63; Jeffrey Clark McTeer, Class of '66; Larry Wynn Petett, Class of '62; Randy David Ray, Class of

'66; Frederick J. Sutter, Class of '64; and Scott Charles Sword, Class of '75.

Not Just Horsing Around

by Laura Breneman

"This is it! I'm finally here. I can't believe it. But what if I don't finish? What if my horse won't jump? What if I lose? I'll disappoint my parents and my friends, and I'll" Years of preparation including hard work and many sacrifices go into one's first appearance at the American Royal.

The smell of old leather mixed with sweat and sawdust acts as a stimulant to those who have waited so long to be there. Kids sleeping in the stalls show their dedication to the animals for whom they have cared. Horses and riders soaring over obstacles add to the excitement.

People come from all parts of the country to take part in the American Royal. Alison Rich, junior, competed with her horse Tobrook in the children's hunter division as did Beth Beall, junior, with her new horse Noble Impressions. Laurie Priboth, junior, entered two horses: Silent Partner and Jazz Bold. In the small junior hunter division, she placed at least fourth in each of five classes. She won first prize in the equitation division in which the rider is judged.

According to the people who participated, winning is only a small part of this special experience. Explained Priboth, "It's the fun of working with your animal as part of a team, the people you meet with similar interests, and the sense of accomplishment you feel after competing that makes the whole experience worthwhile, whether you win or lose."

Breaking the Twelve-year Habit

Senioritis Strikes East

by Ruthie Harrison

When the school nurse asked Karen why she wanted to go home early, she replied in a strained and weakly voice, "I think my senioritis must be acting up again." When asked to describe the symptoms, Karen simply replied, "Well . . . uh . . . hmm . . . I am not exactly sure, but I know I've got it; everyone else does."

But what exactly is senioritis? Whom does it attack? How do you get it, and what can be done to get rid of it once you have it? These are all questions that researchers are frantically trying to find the answers for. What they do know is that senioritis is a disease that attacks most people around the middle of their senior year in high school. Some people, however, catch it as early as sixth grade, and inevitably there are those who never are afflicted.

Today researchers have found evidence that it can be communicable. Wendy Poindexter, senior, explained her case. "I caught senioritis from my sister two years ago and haven't been able to cure it yet."

Jane Baden, senior, commented, "Senioritis is a lot like a cold because it drives you crazy and makes you want to stay home." Unfortunately, no cure has been found for the dread disease except, of course, to take two aspirin and sleep it off the next morning.

Fashion Foot Prints

by Laura Rozen

Shopping . . . the word alone can provoke drools from countless students here at school. During the past year on any given Saturday, carload after carload of Lancers invaded stores ranging in character from the hole-in-the-wall thrift shops to the most prestigious of elegant haunts.

While some flashed their shopping savior-faire at gilded stores with private guards, others kicked past the cockroaches at garage sales and dingy stalls housing the thoroughly used and abused that even the Salvation Army rejected. Despite their differences, both routes were spurred by the inexplicable ecstasy derived at claiming the one piece of clothing which reflected the essence of each person's character. After all, no mode of self-expression is so revealing as what you wear and how you wear it.

The Plaza: a Stroll Down the Gold-Bricked Roads

A snake-leather pump emerged first from the gleaming sportscar, trailed by a leg clad in lace hosiery. Such prestige as Saks Fifth Avenue, Bonwit Teller, and Halls stared back at our hypothetical East shopper, confidently waiting her arrival. It was then that the scent of Laura Ashley wafted by, causing a spurt of adrenaline to rush her around the corner of the Plaza theater. Ignoring the blisters that are forming at her heels, the shopper breaks into a run, having sighted the store. She marvels at the almost tangible English countryside aura and struggles to the dressing room beneath a pile of "hopefuls." Forty minutes later, this fashion victim emerges four packages heavier and immeasurably satisfied.

It takes a certain spirit of adventure to fare well in a thrift shop. This method requires an ability to distinguish between the real gems and the real garbage. However, if wading among a sea of polyester, paisley, and bell bottoms brings no nausea to your throat, go to it. After all, the thrift shop route does offer some distinct advantages. Namely, whatever item you buy, you can rest assured no one else will have it (except your father, and your mother won't let him touch it). And secondly, most of the stuff is dirt cheap. Speaking of which, it is advisable to wash an item before wearing it. That bowling shirt will look just as "fifties" without reeking of them.

The numbers of things scavengable at your typical thrift shop are as vast as "the years from whence they came." A virtual haven of yesteryear, treasures ranging from army surplus to X-mas cards abound, with jewelry, sequined purses, dusty records, and trenchcoats in between.

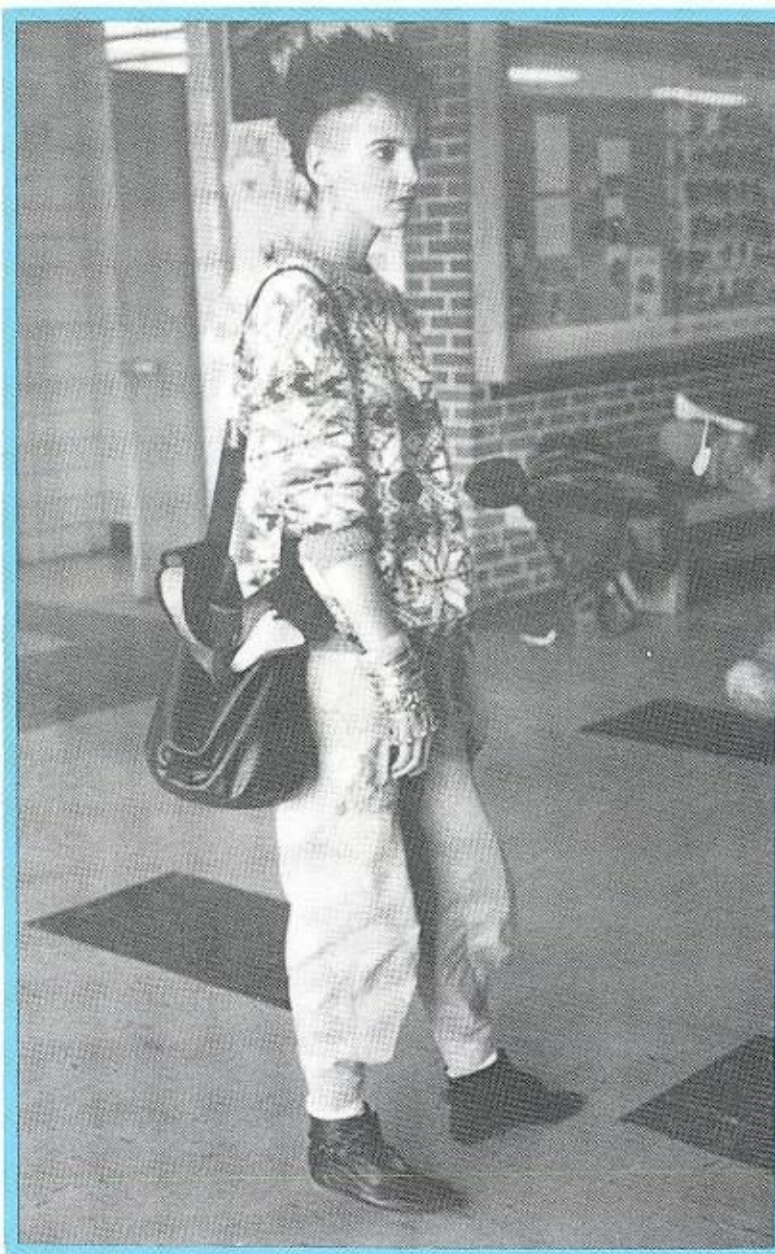

Top to bottom: 1) Senior Amy Williams, after an average day of shopping. 2) A shopper's heaven, Saks Fifth Avenue.

“Sort of a Neo-Preppy-Punk-Sub-Mod-Throwback to the '50's- Look With a Gay Twist”

by Jared Goldstein

The most refreshing change about walking through the halls of SM East was the lack of students whose clothes screamed “Well Dressed.” They had been replaced by people who achieved the distinction of well-dressedness by more subtle fashions than last year’s Day-Glo and other brightly colored garb. Comfort seemed to be the main consideration, not fashion.

With the increased stress on comfort, however, came a mystery. People who had not worn jeans regularly for a couple of years suddenly donned well-worn jeans with gaping holes in the knees. Amazingly well broken in jean jackets were seen on first time wearers. Kind of makes you wonder, doesn’t it?

Naked Songs

by Jared Goldstein

Driving to the REM concert, Brent Bliven, senior, asked me, "Jared, what's your naked song?" Naked song, I wondered, what's that? Luckily I had my Webster's Guide to Lancer Slang handy, and opening it, I found the following entry:

"naked song: (na' kid sawng) phrase, origin uncertain. A song that a concertgoer desperately wants to hear, but one that he does not expect to hear; a song that, if played, would cause the concertgoer to take off his clothes, i.e. become 'naked,' as it were."

Intrigued, I decided to investigate this practice. After months of research and hard work, I compiled the following chart of the major concerts of the year.

Concert	Naked Song	Was it played?	Did you get naked?
REM	"We Walk"	Yes	shirt only
Tom Petty	"Here Comes My Girl"	No
The Kinks	"Celluloid Heroes"	Yes	wristwatch only
Sting	"Can't Stand Losing You"	No
Violent Femmes	"Theme to Batman"	Yes	jewelry only
INXS	"To Look at You"	Yes	removed makeup
Grateful Dead	"St. Stephen"	No
Nick Lowe	"Burnin'"	Yes	shoes only

Hmm, this didn't add up. I didn't understand why no one really took off all his clothing when his naked song was played. But then Amy Leigh, senior, said, "When your naked song comes on, you feel naked. You just can't believe they're really playing it."

Lancers Strike East

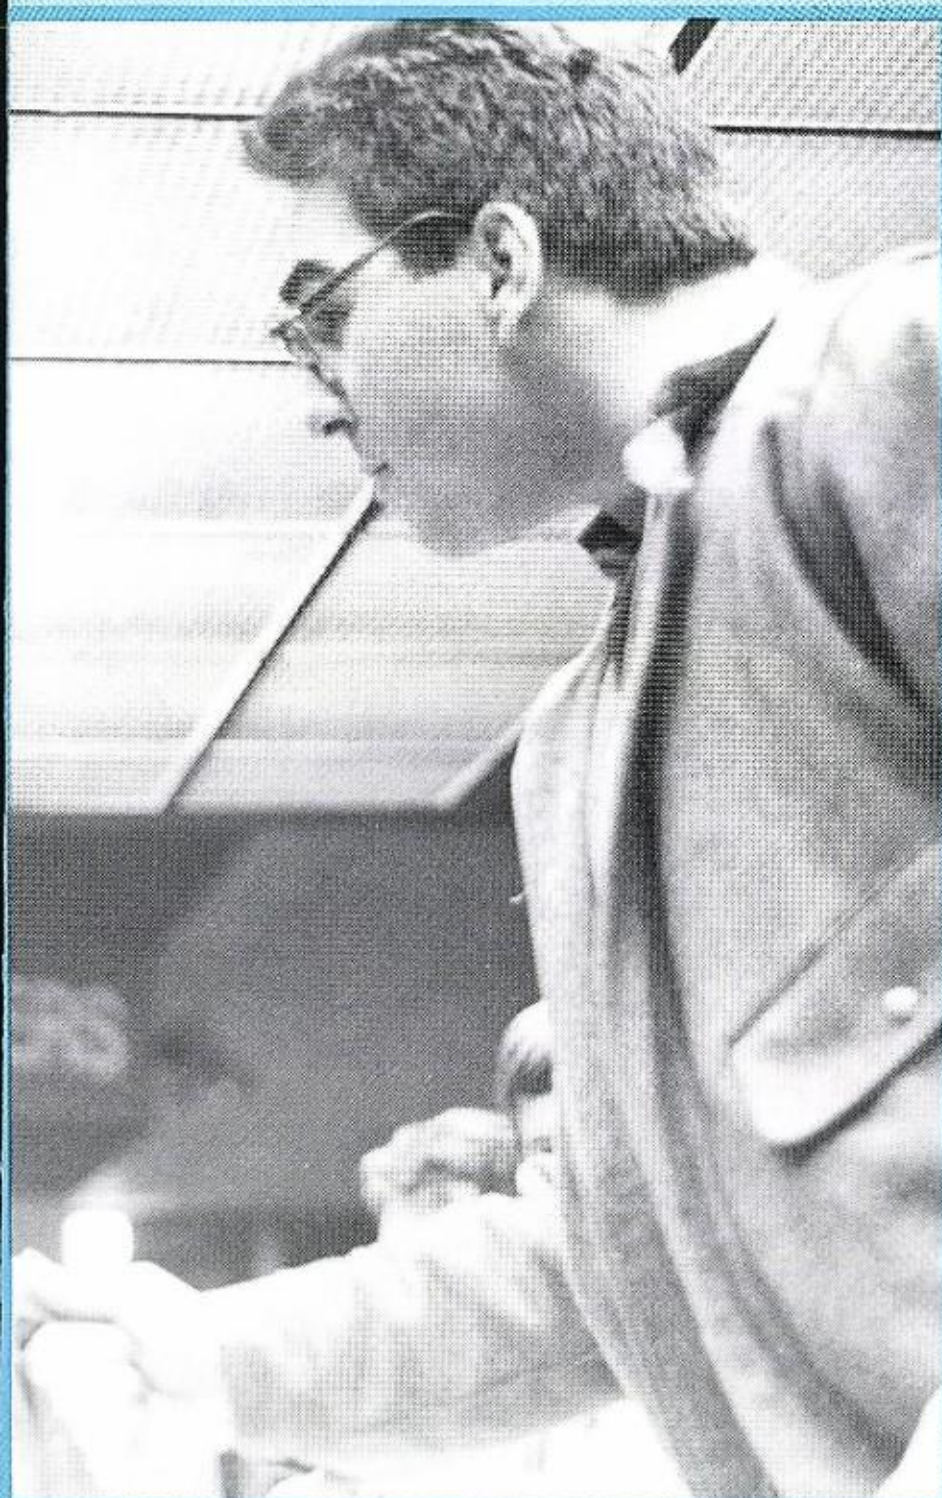

by Jessie Ullmann

"Bowling is good clean All-American fun. It keeps kids off the streets," commented Darrell Coleman, Pep Club Advisory Board member and creator of the SM East Bowling League. He got the idea from a church bowling league he participated in and decided that it was his duty to "fill the void in East's social life."

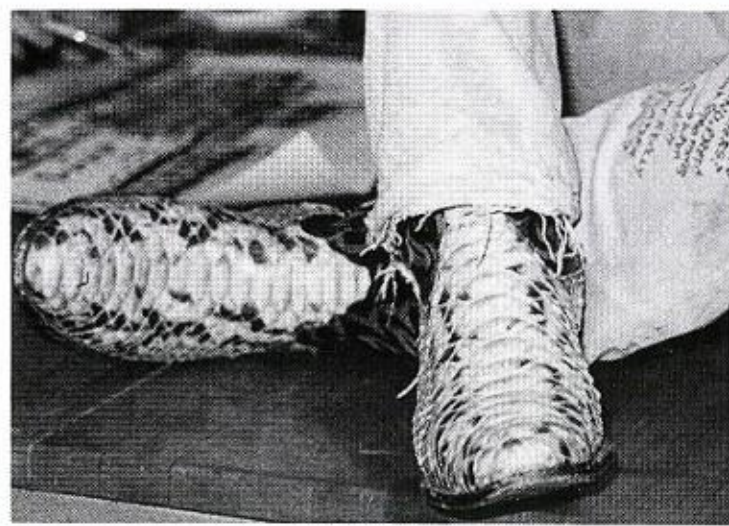

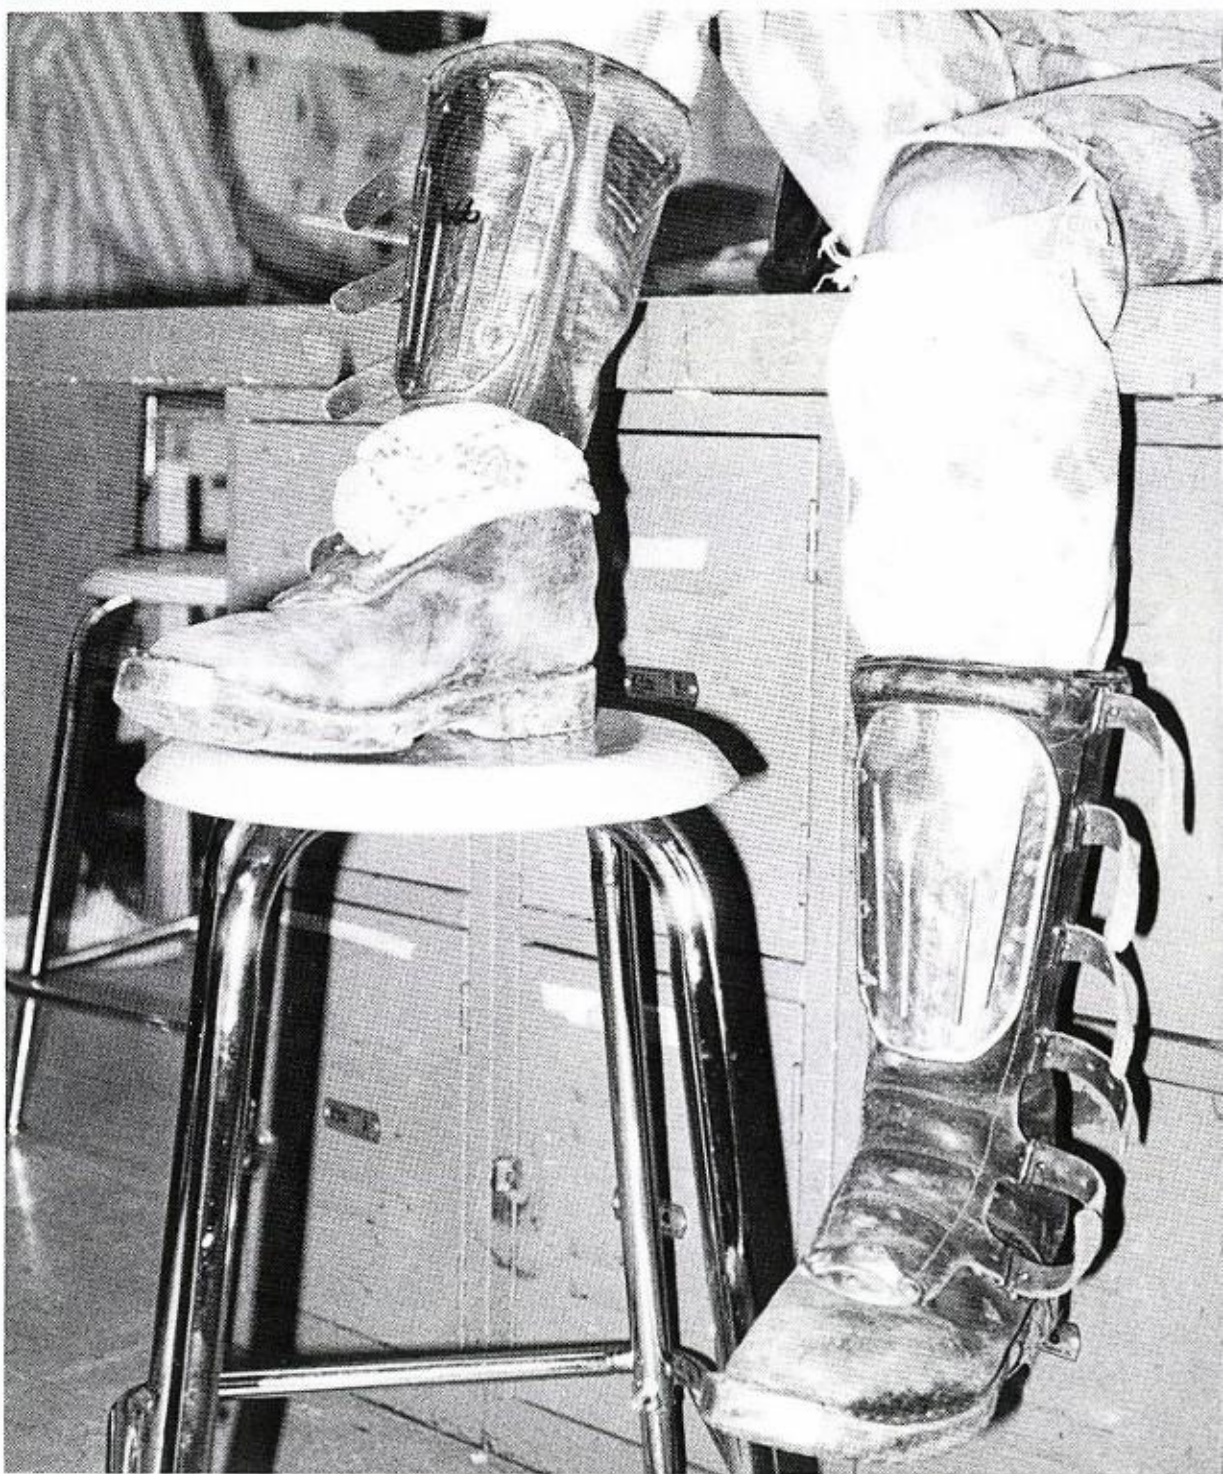

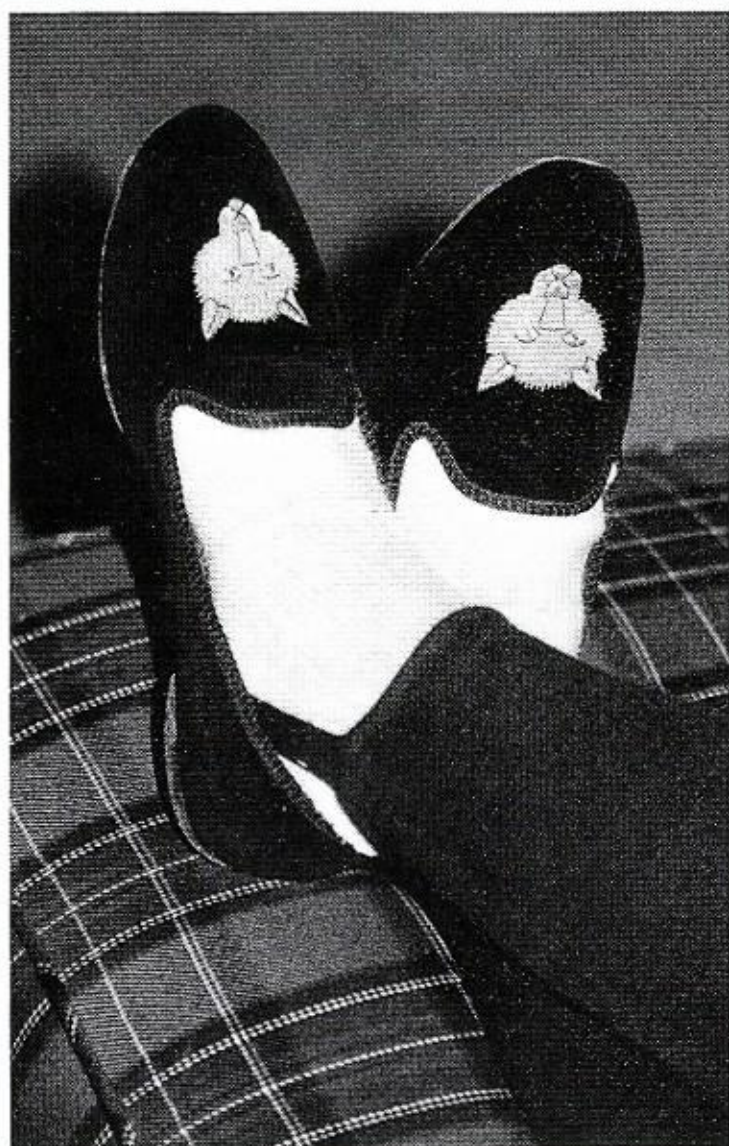

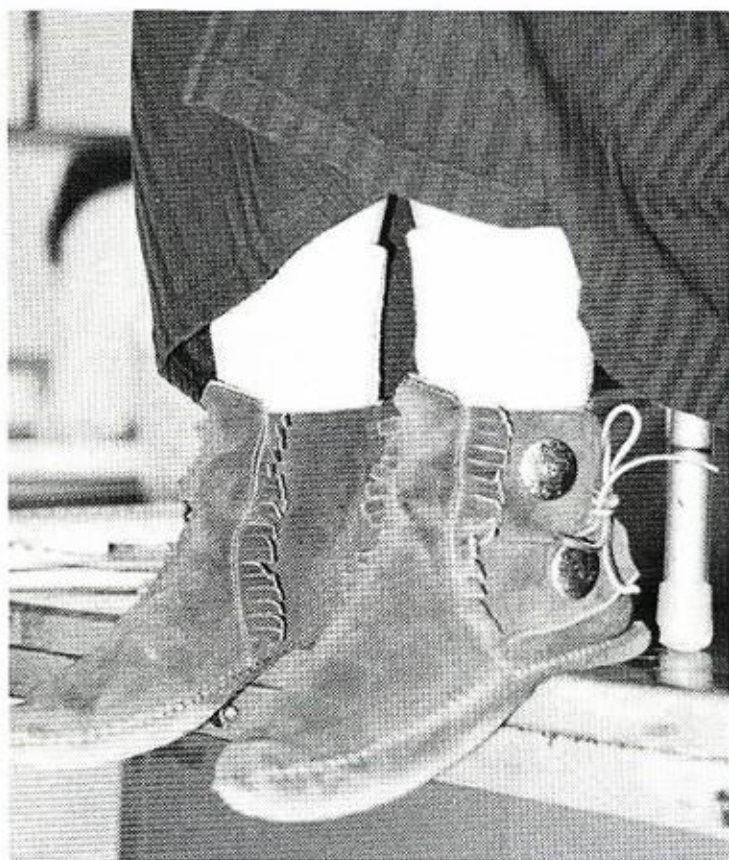

Providing entertainment after Friday night games, the King Louie Bowling Center was packed with Lancers ready to go from 11:30 to 1:00 for 50¢ a game. There were no set teams, but oftentimes various school organizations would compete. For example, the Boot Club, represented by David Moyer and Don Baker, bowled against the Pep Club, represented by Matt Sheffield and Darrell Coleman. After the first game, both teams had exactly 253 points which was an amazing coincidence. But, what made it even more unbelievable was that at the end of the second game, they tied again at 221 points.

In its pioneering weeks it was a struggle to keep the League going because the King Louie management had to enforce rules concerning more than one bowler on an approach per lane and numerous balls being thrown at a time. However, with the help of Chris Carney's Advisory Board, the League continued to attract between 100 and 150 dedicated bowlers each Friday. Much of the credit goes to the five Bowling League Executives: Darrell Coleman, president; Chris Bagg, vice president; John Tikwart, coordinator; Greg St. Denis, secretary; and Jimmy Taylor, treasurer.

Coleman, who hoped that the League would become a tradition at East, remarked, "Bowling is ideal because it combines a social event and a sport into one activity."

FEET AT EAST

Love in the Afternoon

by Heather Terril

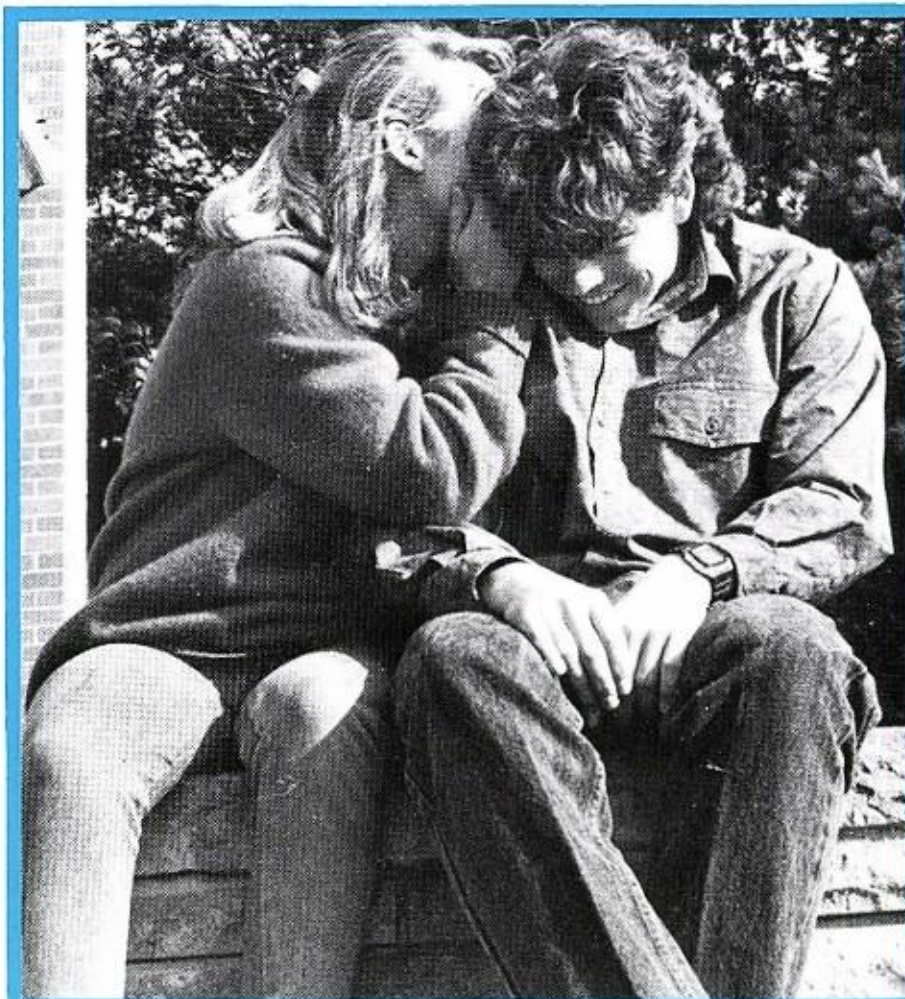

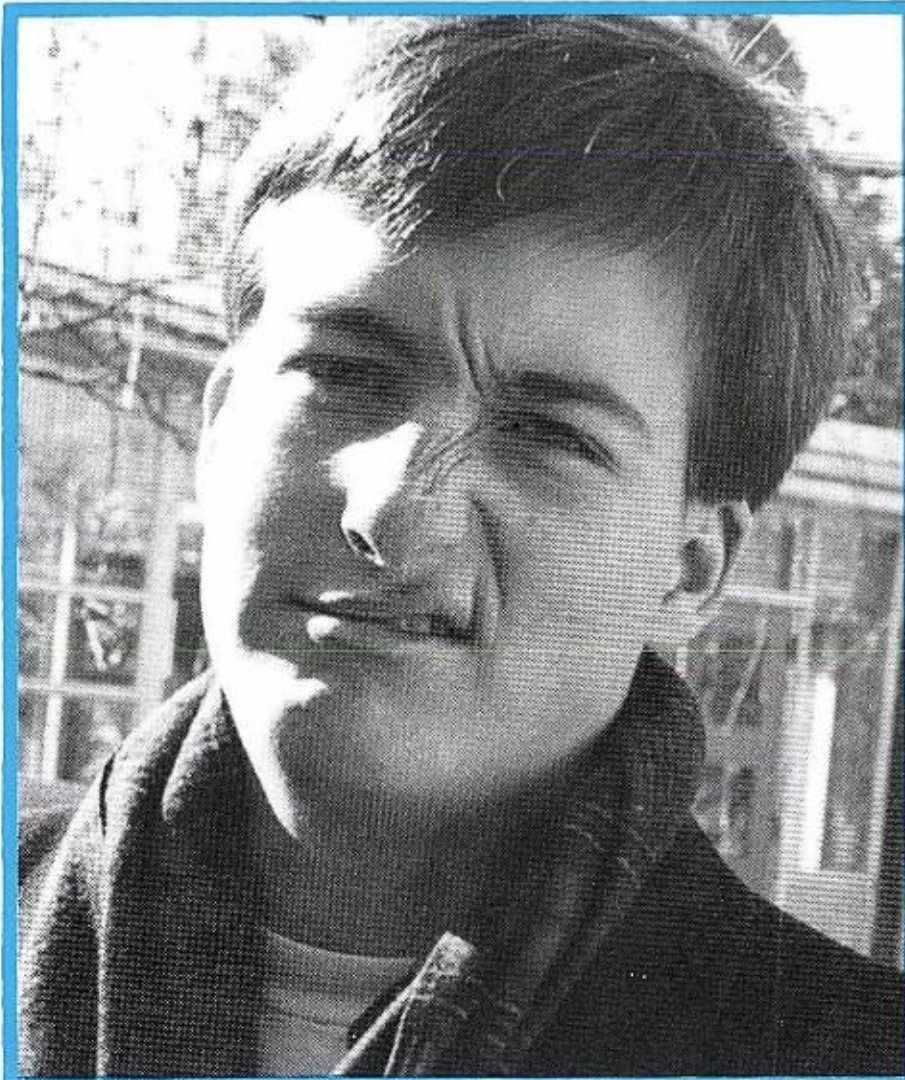

The bell rings. I check out the hall before I leave the safety of my classroom. It is not there. I edge out of the room and proceed cautiously down the hall, looking only at the floor and staying close to one side. I have not seen it yet, but I know it is there. Suddenly I look up and there it is, ten feet in front of me: the monster.

It has two heads, four legs, at least nine arms, and an incredible salivary problem. I move to the other side of the hall, but there is another one. I start to back up and I bump into one. They are all around me. I try to ease by, and as I sneak a glance, I realize that it is not a monster. It is two students locked in an embrace. They are trying to, literally, squeeze in as many hugs and kisses as possible before going to their next classes. I breathe a sigh of relief.

Public displays of affection, or P.D.A., as they are popularly called, are quite common at East. Walk down any hall, between any two classes, and the P.D.A. monster will be there.

Opinions . . .

The Competitive Edge

by Julianna Profitt

A little competition never hurt anyone, so they say, but East has overstepped the bounds of healthy competition. Yes, competition is everywhere. Sure this is the real world, so let's be real; this is also high school and we're all supposed to "get involved" and enjoy ourselves because these are the best years of our lives. Pray tell, how?

Competition in athletics is so intense that athletes who don't perform at a certain skill level don't have an opportunity to participate. Even those who make the varsity teams have to put in training outside of the program in the off-season if they expect any measure of success. Swimmers, for example, prepare for the spring season beginning as early as October by paying to practice with such organizations as the Jets, the Blazers, and the Swim Academy, which specialize in training athletes — and that's before the season even starts. The competition with other schools comes only after months of practice — six days a week, three hours a day. Yet, our Lancers must be equally as devoted to their academic pursuits to uphold East's image of academic excellence. Homework comes first; schoolwork, schoolwork, schoolwork; GPA, college prep, your future in the balance; pound, pound, pound, drive it all the way home. Ah, but practice makes perfect, let's be number one, you must bud - get your time, you cannot miss practice. Alas, the Lancers do it all, be it athletics or academics.

The power of knowledge is great. But it must be the "right kind" of knowledge, and perhaps the power of the transcript is greater. Never mind that you don't want to take calculus or you don't think you can handle honors history, you have to take it anyway. Why? Because it will look good on your transcript. Never mind that between calculus, honors history, and athletics you don't think you have time to join this club, chair that activity, and organize this committee. You must do it. Why? Because it will look good on your transcript — the almighty transcript.

Let's see, do I have it all? What else can I do? Will this be good enough to get into the best schools? After all, that's what's i m - portant — right? Those who decide on less than highly competitive schools (what? there's life beyond the Ivy League?) well, that's nice; good for you, but those who receive the golden letter of approval from selective institutions . . . well, what can I say, they've served our fair school well. After all, doesn't that mean we're better? Well, I don't know what it means, but I know this is how life is — but isn't it too bad?

Mark French, junior "There is so much competition that it begins to cause pressure among friends and how they feel about each other."

Lindsey Bjorseth, senior "The competition is pretty high, but it doesn't really involve the whole school. Basically, just small groups are competitive within themselves or with each other."

Laura Waldo, junior "East has too much competition. We need to focus on things other than grades, etc. Developing creativity and individuality is just as important."

Katie Kozlowski, sophomore "Competition is looked at in the wrong way. It should be something within yourself- not with other people."

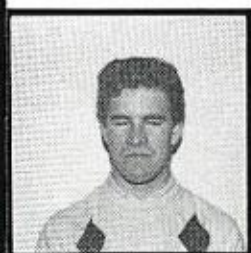

Julie Nall, senior "There is too much pressure here. Not only is there competition for grades, but also for unimportant material things like clothes, popularity, and that type of thing."

Beth Jennings, junior "The amount of pressure people feel is up to them. Anyone can make this school as easy or difficult, as good or bad as he wants."

Pressure?

Andrew Patton, "Competition is everywhere. It can be both good and bad; good in that it stimulates us, but bad because if we take it too far the pressure will cause burnout."

Doug Boudreau, junior "I feel absolutely no pressure. A lot of people blow situations out of proportion when, in reality, it's no big deal."

Pat Kirby, senior "You are what you are. People need to live their lives in their own way and set their own goals. Competition isn't important to me- you just need to realize where your priorities are."

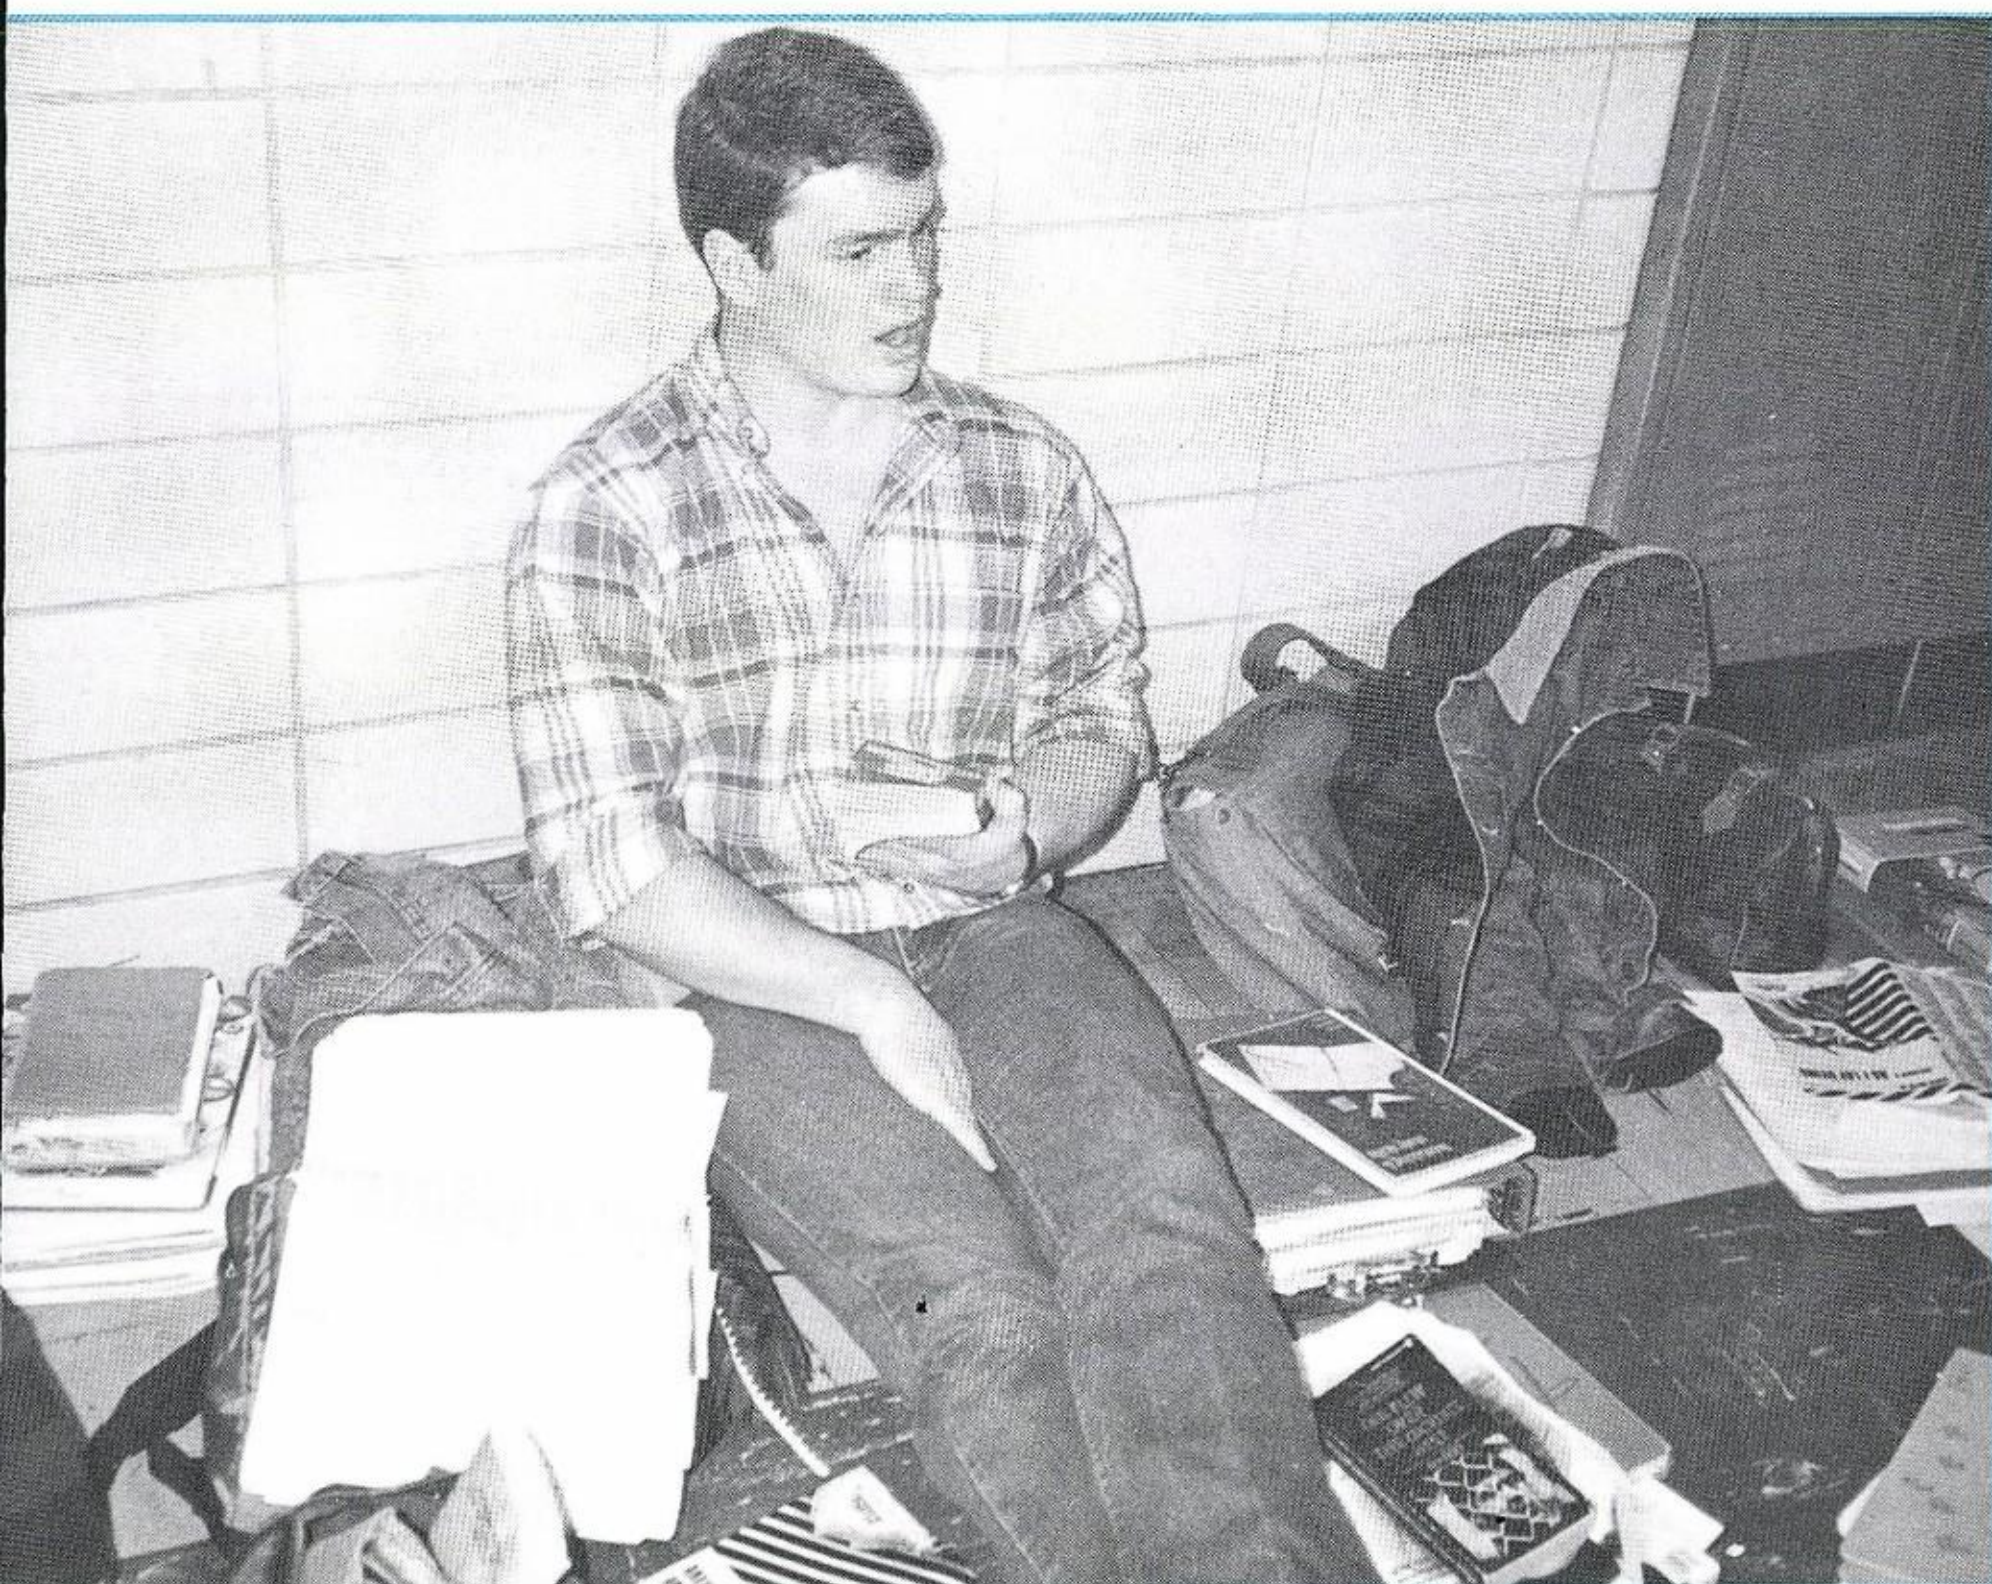

Micheal Rapp, sophomore "There's too much competition. I wish it was more relaxed and everyone wasn't so worried about the social aspects."

Shana Stephens, sophomore "It's incredible. There's so much competition in everything — activities, Pep club, cheerleading, sports, and classes."

Todd Barker, senior "The level of competition intensity at East is too high. The only reason anyone does anything is for the grade. The whole education system has disintegrated. People are willing to hurt others to get ahead."

Senior Bill Griffith makes himself at home to an extreme.

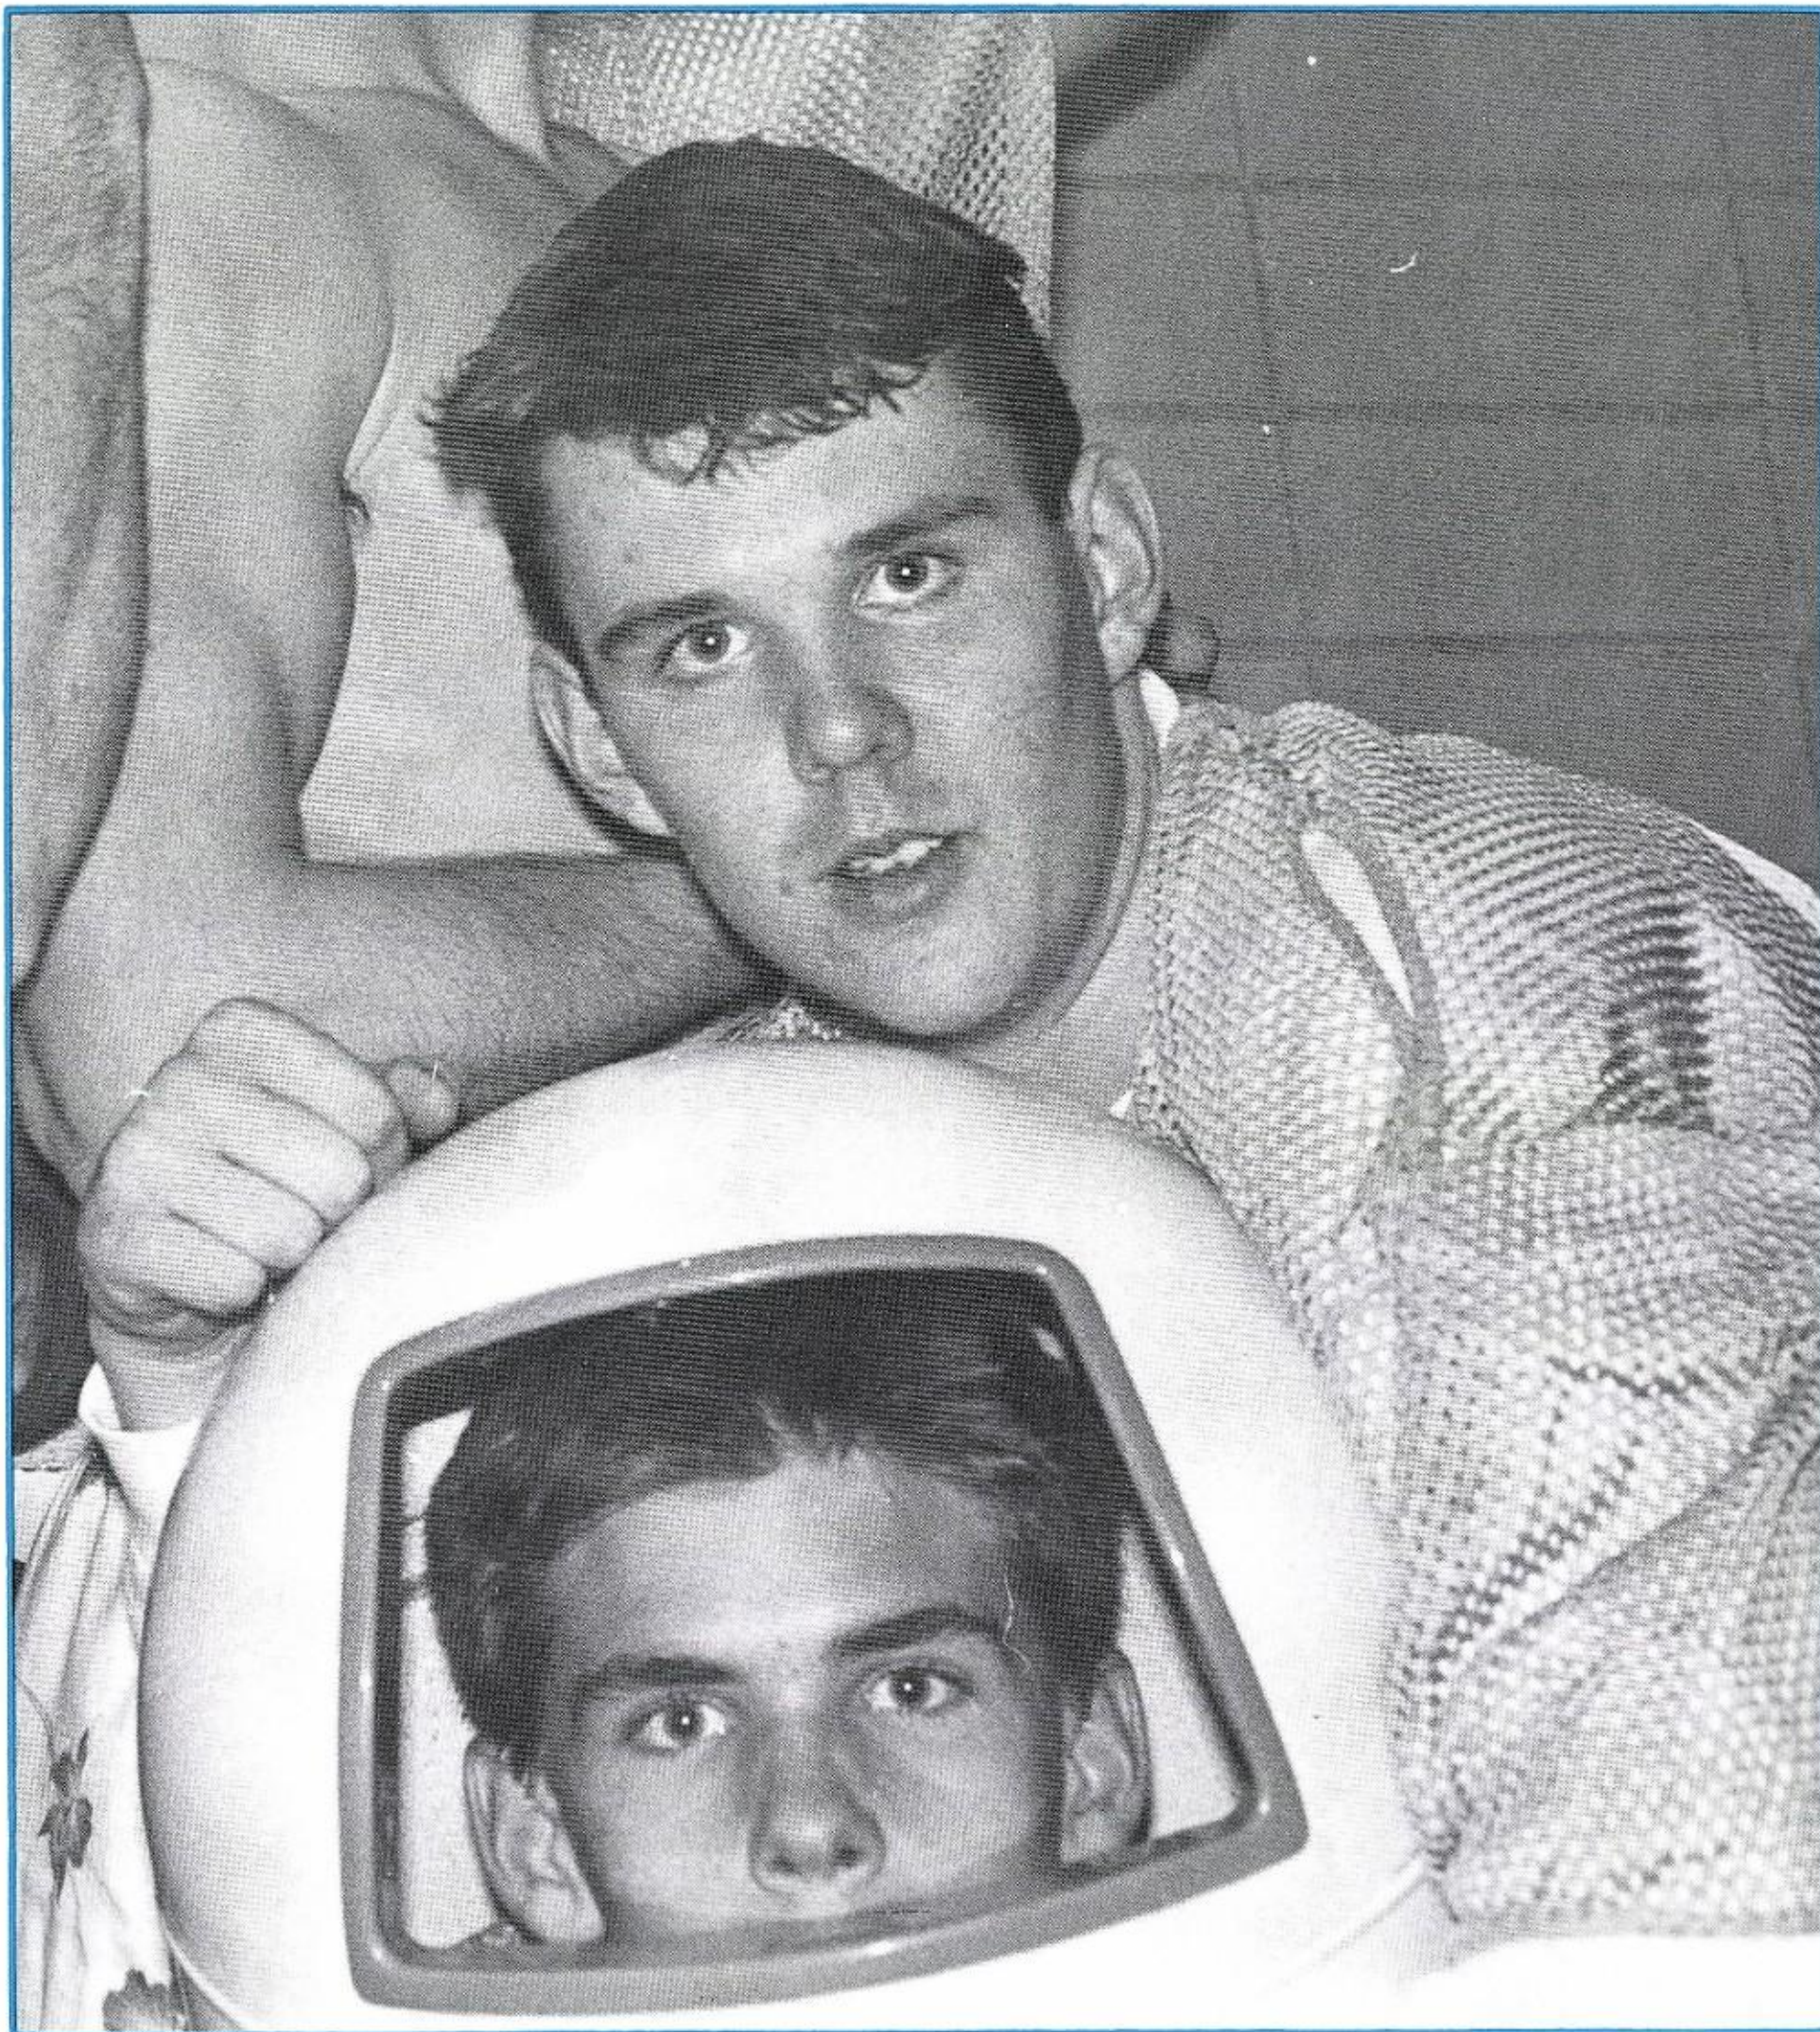

The East Image?

Chris Banash, junior "We give other people the idea that we're snobbish and cliquish. Maybe we are that way; I think a lot of the students really do think they're on top of the world."

Corey Thomas, sophomore "Everyone here is different. Everyone is involved in everything — almost to the point of being nauseating. In public, I think we come across as real snobs. It's almost embarrassing at times."

Senior Mark Kaufman uses a trash can for protection from the wrath of senior Greg St. Denis.

Public Prep School

by Heather Terril

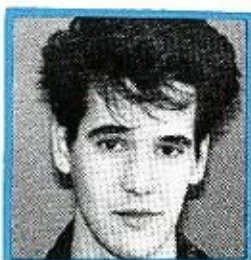

East has an image. Ask another student in the Shawnee Mission district how he visualizes East students, and he will probably have a strong opinion. Unfortunately, the comments are not always kind ones. On the positive side, East has the reputation of being an academically superior institution. The facts support this image. For instance, since 1973 East students have scored consistently higher on the ACT than other students in the district and the nation.

However, East also has the reputation of being a rich, snobbish high school. This image also has a factual basis. East does have its share of wealth, and snobs. Although students have no influence on the income level of the average East area family, they can alter the view that East students are conceited elitists.

Students have the responsibility to dispel any myths or accurate beliefs that people that go to East are stuck-up, but students also have the responsibility to maintain the reputation of outstanding achievement. In other words, East students need to continue to be academically superior without acting like they are snobs.

Todd Latish, sophomore "Some of the other schools, like North, think we're preps and really into drugs. Mostly we give the idea of being rich snobs."

Kevin Ireland, senior "The East image consists of BMW's, penny loafers, and Forenza sweaters. Academically we are associated with excellence."

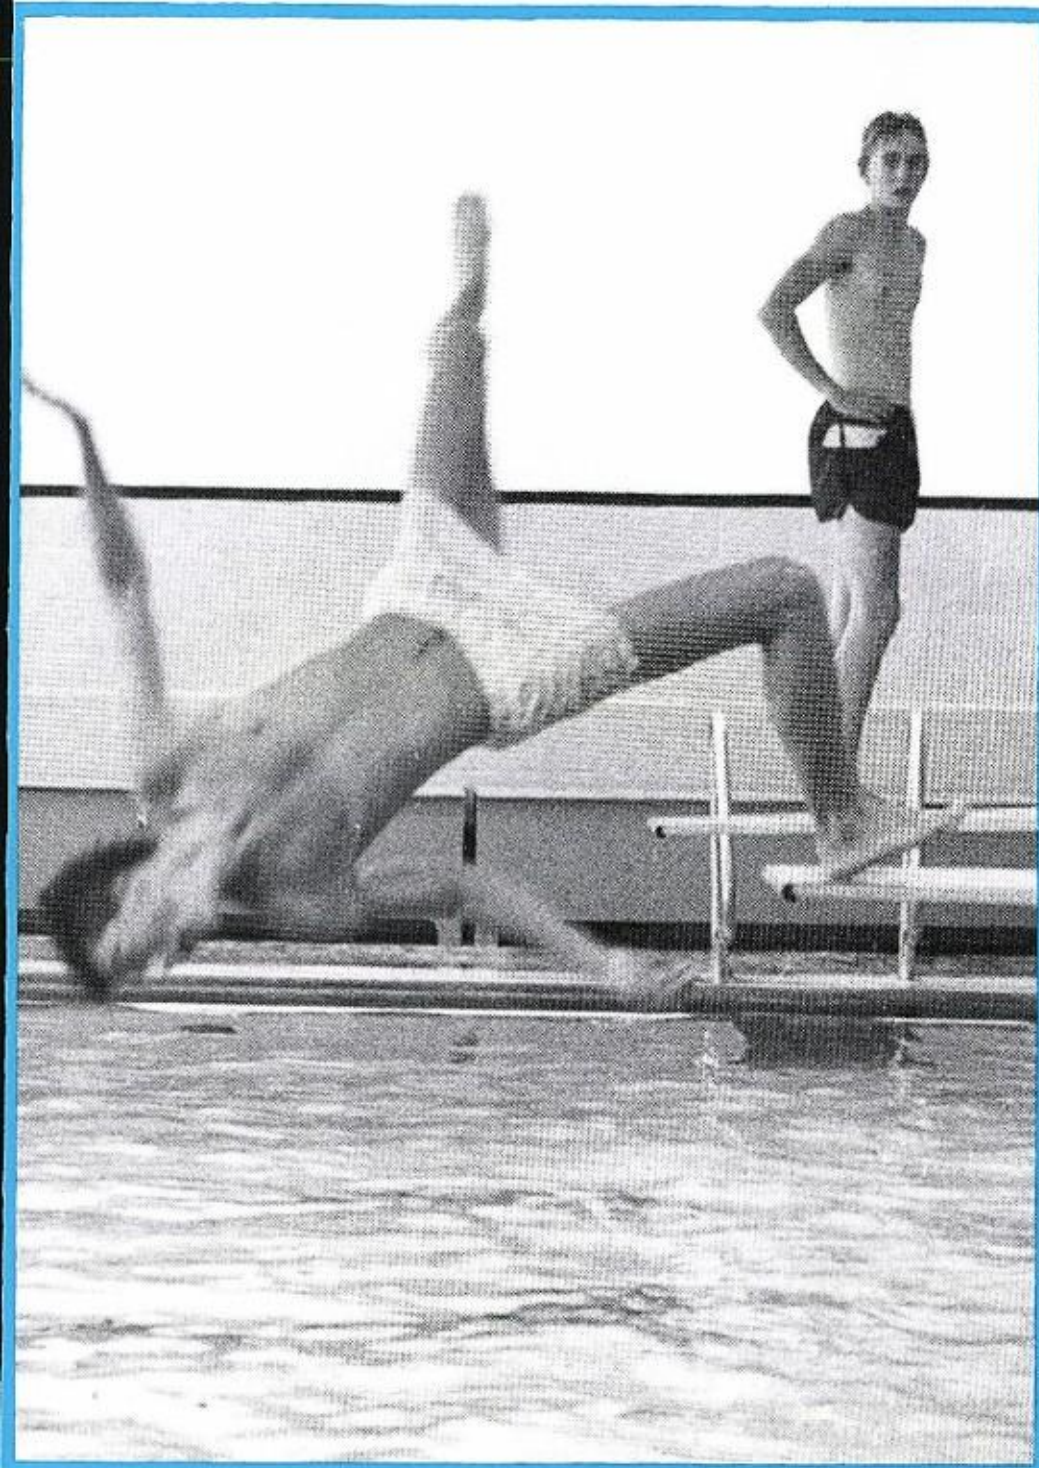

Martha Schulte, senior "As students we have the image of being the rich Johnson County kids. Actually South has more money than East, but no one seems to realize that."

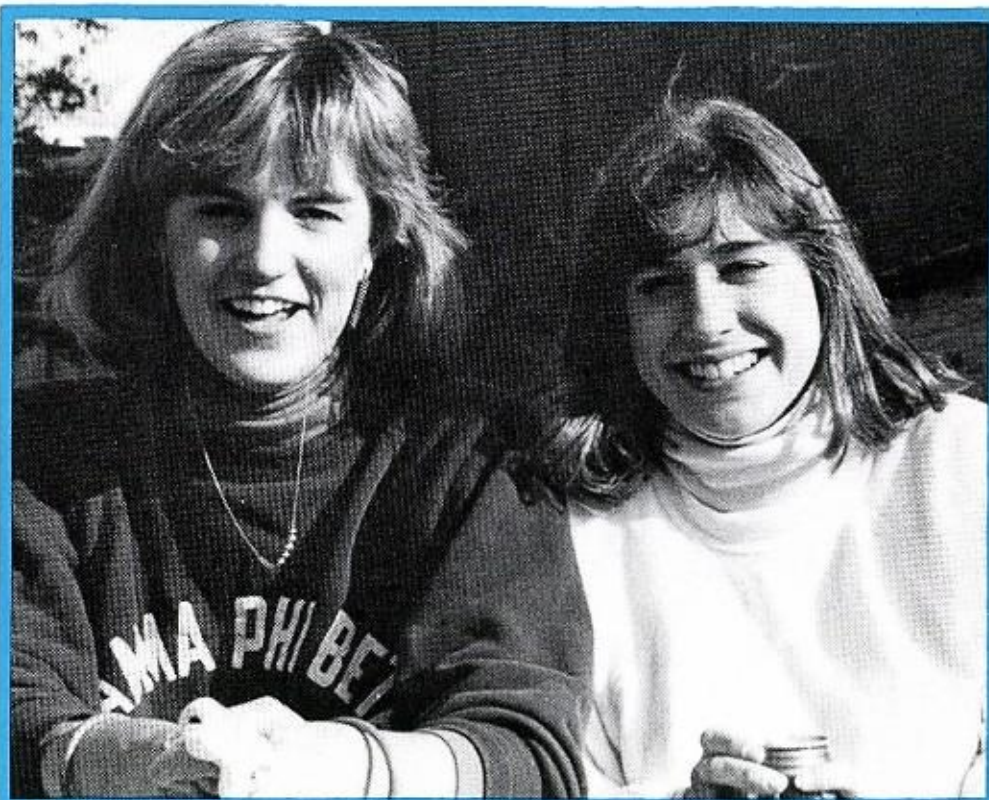

Lisa Fay, senior "No matter what our social image is, East has a good academic reputation. Colleges are impressed by it."

Rick Moore, junior "I guess I don't really care what other people think. It's all just a big stereotype anyway. I'm just here to go to school."

Senior Stu Sanks scores a perfect 10 on his new dive. (photos by Irish)

Middle School

What's It All About Anyway?

by Jessie Ullmann

Next year, the SM school district will be faced with one of the most far-reaching changes since it was formed in 1969. 1986 marks the year when the middle school concept will be put into action, when 9th graders will be moved up to senior high while 7th and 8th graders will compose what was the junior high but now will be called the middle school.

And why have the administrators suddenly decided to jump on the end of the middle school bandwagon which is definitely an idea of the past? Those who are for the middle school claim that the 9th graders will benefit from the opportunity to take high school level courses and compete in high school level sports. But why all of a sudden?

Some claim declining enrollment is the reason. If so, then why cram another entire class into a high school that has no room and take away 200 people from schools that need as many students as possible? Others say the district is losing money. But, even though enrollment is dropping, the school budget has continued to grow. The extra money certainly isn't going to the schools or teachers, and middle schools won't save the district a single penny. However, when one examines how a middle school is different from a junior high, it becomes evident that administrators are only concerned with facts and figures and not about the quality of education or well-being of the students. Besides, switching to middle schools could simply be an excuse to close many schools.

Middle schools center around the idea of placing 7th and 8th graders in a more closely monitored educational setting. Each student is required to take five courses: English, math, social studies, science, and communications (which incorporates reading and speech & drama skills). Seventh graders are required to take a full year of gym which leaves one hour of electives — which have already been chosen for them. Required electives?!? They are called exploratory electives and involve home economics, foreign language, industrial arts, and keyboarding — each lasting one quarter. So now semester and year-long courses must be compressed into 9 weeks.

In 8th grade, one and one-half hours of electives are allowed. There are 8 to choose from and band and foreign language are the only year-long courses. Therefore, one can't be in band, and learn a language in the same year. In fact, students are discouraged from taking a language because they are told it doesn't really matter if your transcript shows 4 or 5 years of a language. If it doesn't matter, why offer the 5th year and make it an AP class?

Academics aren't the only aspect which are altered in a middle school. All interscholastic sports (volleyball and basketball) will be discontinued. Therefore, there's also no pep club, cheerleaders, drill team, school competition and virtually no school spirit. Sports is the one thing that everybody can get involved in in some way and it unites the school. It gives a student a sense of belonging because the entire student body is involved. Being able to represent one's school in an athletic or cheerleading uniform creates an incomparable sense of pride.

Middle school supporters defend their position by saying that no one will be hurt and feel inferior because he doesn't play on the school volleyball team. Competition is discouraged because it shows some students to be better than others. This reasoning sounds a bit similar to Karl Marx's views in The Communist Manifesto. Participation in intramurals is required two days a week where teams compete in a variety of sports. But, if one team seems to be winning a lot, it will be separated so no one gets his feelings hurt. However, losers may stay together.

All in all, middle schools are simply an extension of elementary school where the teachers are more responsible for protecting the vulnerable 7th and 8th graders than preparing the student for high school. Imagine the shock when they move to a school where competition is the name of the game. It's every man for himself, and the winners are admired. The course choices are practically unlimited and athletics are a part of everyone's life. Here the teachers teach instead of trying to be mothers watching out for any sign of difficulty a student is going through. Of course, teachers become our friends, but it's ridiculous for them to shield out all unfavorable conditions.

One grows through affliction. Life is full of competition and those who delay get left behind. There will have to be numerous alterations made in the high school curriculum with the creation of new classes and new freshmen teams. Ninth graders will never be able to experience the feeling of being the top rung on the ladder between the 6th and 12th grades. My only question is why ruin a system which made the SM district one of the top school systems in the United States?

"Survey Says" . . .

Julie Dick, junior "Eventually it will cut down on the quality of the school. If they close Indian Hills, enrollment at East will decline because people will move."

Laurie Priboth, junior "I wish we could have had it. It's a good idea, and it will work."

Jane Baden, senior "It will cause conflict, the freshmen will be ignored. There's just too much of an age difference between seniors and freshmen."

John Haraughty, faculty "I think it's a good idea. Athletically it will be an advantage since the junior highs don't have good programs set up in sports. It's hard to tell exactly how it will work out. Right now there's just a lot of rumors going around."

Chris Cosgrove, sophomore "We already have to wait in lines to go up the stairs and to eat lunch. Just think what it will be like next year."

Skiing In Kansas City??

by Laura Rozen

As a radiologist's daughter, I was always the privileged child able to hear first-hand accounts of broken legs and collarbones, described to the last gruesome detail in the scientific jargon of a physician. Unfortunately, I was also the child forbidden to jump on trampolines, skate on frozen ponds, and, to my chagrin, go on ski trips.

With time however, these restrictions have dwindled, and I am now happily awaiting the next blizzard to hit K.C. No, I did not say to hit Keystone, or Vail, or Copper Mountain; I said Kansas City. Right here, in our own backyard, lie several opportunities for cross-country skiing.

Apparently, many locals find the sport so justifiably appealing, they insisted on cross-country skiing and ski equipment facilities as well as lessons to be made available in the metro area. Such stores as the Alpine Hut, Sitzmark, Ski KC, and most appropriately named, Flatlanders Ski, Inc. have responded to the demand. In addition, the Johnson and Jackson County Parks and Recreation Departments offer cross-country skiing lessons, and area YMCA's offer pre-conditioning classes.

As for the sport's popularity, zealous skiers tout its unquestionable conditioning values. Cross-country skiing is the ultimate calorie burner, absorbing 756 calories an hour. Also, it requires distribution of the work throughout the whole body. And with all the recent hype about aerobic exercise, it will set your mind at ease to learn that cross-country skiing is unrivaled as a form of cardiovascular fitness.

So now that you've learned the facts, grab a coat, some shades, and hit the ... streets, parks, and anywhere else your poles will take you.

Reaching Out

by Diane Roberts

The East Service Project, known as ESP, began its first year of operation through the cooperation of Dr. Sandfort and the PTA. The program provided opportunities for students to go out into the community and perform useful services.

The Traveling Clowns was a major project of East students. The clowns were Red Cross certified, which took three two-hour sessions taught by a professional clown. The Traveling Clowns went to Heritage House, a nursing home, and various children's hospitals to talk with and entertain the patients.

ESP provided a variety of other programs such as coaching, assisting at nursing homes, giving swimming lessons, or participating in hospital volunteer work. If a student donated 45 hours or more of his time, a notation was made on his transcript.

ESP is just another example of East students reaching out.

How to Float Through Life

by Ruthie Harrison

Cole Martin likes to leave 'em floating — at least for an hour.

For part of a self-motivated psychology experiment, Cole Martin, senior, built a sensory deprivation tank. He first became interested in sensory deprivation after seeing the movie Altered States. He then decided to build a tank of his own. Martin explained, "There isn't much to it. The tank is basically a large box containing salt water. Once totally submerged in the tank, a person finds himself in an environment that is black, wet and silent."

Cole began his experiment by testing 90 students from Stiegemeier/psychology I classes. Each student was given the Kelsey Temperament Sorter test. Then he asked which students would be willing to go into the tank for an hour. He was hoping to relate physical responses that occurred in the tank to personality traits.

Those students who were willing to go into the tank were then tested for blood pressure, pulse rate and steadiness of hand, both before and after. A steadier hand, coupled with a slowed pulse rate and drop in blood pressure, is the desired effect.

Kevin Burch, senior, explained that while in the tank, "You are alone with yourself for the first time." While in the tank Kevin experienced hallucinations, but many others simply went to sleep.

Stiegemeier felt that the tank had "added a great deal of first hand experience in psychology to the students who participated."

The Land of Ah's

by Jessie Ullmann

"Click-Click-Click... There's no place like home. There's no place like home... Where the buffalo roam and the deer and the antelope play... where we cruise the Santa Fe on the 125th Anniversary known as Kansas Day!"

At SM East, a lot of "heart, brains, and courage" were put into the celebration of this birthday. It began with the twelve class officers going to Topeka to tour the Capitol and to present Governor Carlin with a Kansas birthday cake. Throughout the day, Dr. Bruke and Dr. Sandfort read historical facts at the end of each hour.

However, the climax of the day came seventh hour with an all-school assembly — the first one in 14 years. Events included singing "Home on the Range" and the traditional Happy Birthday song to Kansas, led by the cheerleaders and yell leaders. Hubertus Kuelpis, StuCo president, spoke with Governor Carlin as the rest of the student body listened and cheered. Local television channels 9 and 41 covered the event. However, the 400 pound birthday cake, decorated with sparklers and shaped like Kansas, was the focus of most students' attention.

Kansas Day was also a time for the realization of how many important people and events originated in the "Sunflower state." For example, Kansas is first in the world in manufacture of general aviation aircraft. Nancy Kassebaum, from Maize, was the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate. Lutie Lytle, from Topeka was the first black woman lawyer in America. Nellie Klein, of Larned, was the first woman to practice law before the U.S. Supreme Court. Dwight D. Eisenhower, from Abilene, was the 34th U.S. President and Supreme Commander of Armed Forces in WW II. Osa Johnson, of Chanute, was the first woman to explore the South Seas. Amelia Earheart, of Atchison, was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean. Lynette Woodard, of Wichita was the first woman to play basketball for the Harlem Globetrotters. Earl Sutherland won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1971. Deborah Bryant, a graduate of SM East, was named Miss America. Glenn Cunningham held the world record for the mile in 1930. The Day After, Paper Moon, and In Cold Blood were all filmed in Kansas.

The student body exhibited diverse reactions to the occasion. "The cake should have been chocolate," remarked Junior Leslie Chalker. Corey Minturn, junior class secretary, said "I can't understand how a state that seems to be asleep all the time suddenly woke up on its 125th birthday." Shawnee Mission Superintendent Raj Chopra felt that "January 29 was indeed a day of celebration of our statehood and a celebration of the indomitable human spirit."

But the feelings of those who really appreciated the event could be summed up by Mr. Gould, biology teacher: "Who could ever forget the Populus deltoides, the Apis mellifera, the Sturnella magna, and the Helianthus annuus?"

Friendship defies age and ignores distance.
It weathers the hard times and shares the good.
Together we have found this.
Our friendship has provided acceptance and understanding in a world that pushes people apart.
But I will always remain with the memories of the times we have shared knowing how fortunate I am to be able to call you my friend.

We made it! I'd like to thank everyone involved in putting this book together. The staff, editors, and Mrs. Skates have done an amazing job. They are all appreciated more than words can express and definitely deserve a long summer break. For the class of '86 our Shawnee Mission East experience is almost over, but each of us is leaving with a part of this school that we will never forget. It takes a while to realize how great East really is and how much the teachers, coaches, and administrators truly care. Shawnee Mission East is the best and always will be.

World — Are You Ready?

~~THE~~

But you're such a bitch-boy that you may be all numbers 2 happy.

Dear Mary Ann

- 1.) Stay in good humor as always
- 2.) Stay out of trouble
- 3.) Stay for a chance to come down to youth for Christ some Saturday with your friends. It's been great having you in Math & English.

You are lucky. The 3rd Punk legend is gracing your yearbook with his humble signature. On Earth As it is in Hell. You know and all that other stuff. This year has been cool, even though we have hated each other for a while, now shit is cool. Pat is real cool. SHREDS Force is a clit. Dean is a willman and HD is a fat fuck. Math Sucked!!! did you get more than a 170%? Did must be Did this summer! Oh boy will we have fun at Starz Friday night? Did! All stars aren't dead! Only Jerry I killed Brads Mom. See you in Earth A.D. Did this summer, Enough.

SKATE this Summer (quit breaking boards you fat brigades)

if you (asshole) write on this page,
I will take it as a personal insult to Penis.

WU: YOU ARE A SEAHORSE. Stupid, Scummy, Stuck up, ugly, slutty, nasty, crude, raspy Buttfuckin bitch. I HATE YOU. I WANT to kill you. You are the SLIMEST CREATURE to EVER SPEW from your moms large slimy and swollen ANUS. This time you die.

Fuck you Very Much
Marshall (Bitch), P.S. Graice won

Your pray cool, hey right buddy! I can't say see you next year or have fun this summer, cuz I know I'll be w/you. First off, we'll snack down some head cheese. Want a gauche piece of meat. Your a big fat hippie pot. You'll have to skate more (not stoned). Dark + Lonelies make your brain soft. We'll wig for sure this summer w/ Bagster, Moffitt, you, + I. Fun! Hey, not cool that we all got on good terms, right buddy. Too bad Tim + Bill + Pat + Dean aren't too cool, that could be fun. Don't have sex before your married, it's a SIN!
